Introduction

0.1 About This Book

0.1.1 About me

Hello! I'm glad to meet you :)

You can call me Pether. I am a fantasy nerd who has played RPGs since childhood. Recently I've dived even deeper into this hobby as I am GMing a campaign for my friends for the past two years. I happily enjoyed various homebrew systems, Dungeons and Dragons, Warhammer RPG, Call of Cthulhu, and now - Cosmere RPG.

All my content and RPG resources are free for everybody. I would be happy to play with you, but since I can't, I will gladly share my ideas and notes, perhaps you will find them helpful. You are invited to modify my work to suit your own needs and playstyles.

I hope you will enjoy this adventure. If you would like to virtually hang out or to fuel my various future projects, you can always buy me a coffee using the link below ;)

You can find all of my Cosmere RPG homebrew content below:

0.1.2 Who is it for?

Though everyone is invited to play this adventure, it is designed for people familiar with the world - the story starts in Kholinar and expects players to be able to roleplay in that environment. This adventure does not include tutorial chapter and the plot may reveal some events and secrets from "Stormlight Archive".

0.1.3 Is it canon?

No. This is a fan-made campaign and the story presented in here cannot be considered canon. While I did my best to align with official lore of the world, some of the events here might contradict Brandon Sanderson's vision.

0.1.4 How many spoilers?

This book contains heavy spoilers of Kholinar arc from "Oathbringer". On top of that there are spoilers of "Wind And Truth" and minor spoilers of one of interludes from "Words of Raidiance".

Please make sure that everyone on your table is fine with those.

0.1.5 Motivation behind this book

I always believed that desperate dark deals with ominous entities could greatly enhance the story. While other RPG systems do a good job of including this trope, "Stormlight Archive" focuses on Radiants following their ideals to become the best versions of themselves, leaving less space for "deal with the devil" storyline.

This book addresses this issue by introducing opportunity to bond a spren Enlightened by Sja-Anat's touch. Those offer access to more powerful abilities that come at a cost. How much will the characters be willing to pay for this kind of power? And how desperate will they be before making another step on that path...?

0.2 About the Adventure

0.2.1 Campaign Themes

This campaign is using themes as listed below. Use this list to determine if you are interested in running this kind of campaign. In the game, you can encounter themes of:

- Corrupted spren
- Deals with the devil
- Lesser evil

0.2.2 Campaign Setting

The story starts in Kholinar ruled by Queen Aesudan, shortly before the arrival of Everstorm. The characters will spend roughly half of the story in here. Later, they will travel through Shadesmar to reach Kharbranth and later - Urithiru.

0.2.3 Missing Chapters

You might notice that entire Act II (chapters from 6. to 10.) is missing. Initially my idea for the adventure assumed only 5 chapters in Kholinar. However, as I started working on it, it became obvious that the book will be much better with 5 more chapters.

Enlightened Radiant rules prepared for this book (see Appendix D: Enlightened Radiants Rules) assume there are 9 Unmade that can influence those Radiants. If I wanted to balance that influence fairly without excluding any of the Orders, it would make sense to have all 9 of the Unmade in the story - preferable each featured in one Chapter focusing on them.

Also, the entire point of new talent trees is to use them. It makes little sense to finish the adventure before the PCs can properly play with their new toys - that was the entire goal of this book! Adding more chapters, advancing to higher tiers and having more challenges to face is just the way to go!

Therefore, I decided to expand the initial idea beyond Act I and introduce Act II. However, this book is already long in the making and I know some of you wait to play it... That's why I decided to share Act I while I'm still working on Act II. And that's why you might still find some TODO notes here and there.

You can enjoy Act I as it is fully playable and I consider it completed. Hopefully, before you reach Act II, I will have more to complete it and share with you. If not, I left some general info how would I see the story progressing so you could improvise from there.

Good luck and I hope you will enjoy it!

0.3 Running the Adventure

To run this adventure you will need Stormlight Handbook containing all rules and guidelines on how to run Cosmere RPG. This book contains only adventure-specific details and suggestions on how to run it.

You can read (or paraphrase) a text in such a box to your players. Alternatively, you can describe the scene using your own words.

Whenever a characters name appears in bold, it means there is corresponding stat block available. You can use it to get more info about the character's attributes and abilities.

Items appearing in bold italic have special rules you can find at the end of this book.

Boxes like this will help you understand the reason behind some of the design choices. Those boxes have no impact on the game, but they may help you modify some elements of the adventure if you so choose.

Path to Radiance

When a plot might allow for certain Radiant Spren to be attracted by player's actions, that will be indicated by such a box. However, use your own judgment whenever a player does something not accounted by this book.

Path to Enlightenment

Some events or actions are relevant only for Enlightened Spren - the ones corrupted by Sja-Anat's touch. Information about those will be displayed in such a box.

Spoiler Info

On many occasions, this book will reference events or characters from "Stormlight Archive" series. This box will warn you of spoilers, but also it will provide original source if you wished to read more details about what's referenced from official books.

If you are using this book in electronic version, it has also several quality-of-life improvements to make your life easier when you navigate this book:

Whenever a name of a chapter or section appears (eg. "Running the Adventure"), you can click on it to quickly go to the chapter in question.

All characters' names (eg. Sja-Anat) are links that lead to Dramatis Personæ chapter, where all the NPCs are listed.

Items (eg. Dustcaster) and adversaries (eg. Cultist) are also links that will lead you to the page with their unique rules.

0.3.1 Adjusting Difficulty

This book assumes your players will form a party of 4 characters starting at 1st level. However, it is perfectly fine to have a different size of your group and/or to start playing at a different level (eg. because the characters already shared another adventure together). Also, it is possible that challenges presented in this book are not aligning with strong suits of the party.

If you see that the balance is a bit off, feel free to adjust the difficulty. You can change a number or tier of the enemies, modify endeavors' requirements or weave some other changes into the story.

0.3.2 Handling Canon

Despite treating original source with respect, this adventure is not canon. While playing the game your primary focus should be fun. For everyone, "fun" means something different - either following official lore to the letter, creating your own touching story, or just hitting bad guys with your sword. Make sure you know what is fun for you and your group and make it your primary objective. If that means modifying this adventure or straying away from the canon - go for it!

You can find more information on that topic in "Canon and Continuity" section of Stormlight Handbook.

0.3.3 Playing with Singers

It is possible for players to play as Singers. However, they must be aware that for the first chapters of the story, they would need to hide their form and pretend to be parshmen not to raise too many questions from the Kholinar people.

Starting with Chapter 3 - Enemy Reborn, after the arrival of Everstorm, Parshmen are out of the picture. Hiding Singer's form is no longer required, but the Kholinar soldiers are actively fighting the newly-turned Singers and that may introduce new challenges to Singer characters. On the other hand, they can find new allays, possibly opening new paths to reach the party's goals.

0.3.4 Playing with Radiants

The adventure encourages players to play as Radiants. Please work with with your players to know what Knight Order would they wish to join.

Unless the player explicitly states different wishes, assume they will bond Enlightened Spren touched by Sja-Anat. Pay attention to the PC's actions that might attract a Spren. Even if no opportunity occurs to introduce them, they will be able to bond their Spren at the end of Chapter 2 - Dust and the Unmade.

0.3.5 Unique Rules

This adventure introduces possibility to bond Enlightened Spren touched by Sja-Anat. For those, you can use any rules you prefer, but it is assumed you will be following the ones provided in Appendix D.

Suggested Expedition Events

If you are using Enlightened Radiant rules from Appendix D, you will be expected to expedite the Radiant's progression when they meet specific Unmade or their influence.

Each time an Enlightened Radiant is exposed to an Unmade related to their Order, they can immediately develop a talent from their Enlightened talent tree. Each Radiant can be rewarded like that up to 3 times.

Here is a list of suggested moments to do that so. You can adhere to those suggestion or modify something to your needs:

- Enlightened Windrunner (Nergaoul):
 - 3.2. "Blood on the Streets"
 - 3.6. "The Everstorm"
 - Chapter 9 - TODO - Kholinar
- Enlightened Skybreaker (Yelig-nar):
 - 2.5. "Taker of Secrets"
 - 3.3. "The Palace"
 - Chapter 9 - TODO - Kholinar
- Enlightened Dustbringer (Chemoarish):
 - 3.5.8. "Forbidden Reliquary"
 - 4.2. "Sneaking at Night"
 - 4.3. "Dustcasting"
- Enlightened Edgedancer (Re-Shephir):
 - 5.4.1. "Midnight Reinforcements"
 - Chapter 8 - TODO - Urithiru
 - Chapter 8 - TODO - Urithiru
- Enlightened Truthwatcher (Moelach):
 - 3.2. "Blood on the Streets"
 - Chapter 7 - TODO - Kharbranth
 - Chapter 7 - TODO - Kharbranth
- Enlightened Lightweaver (Sja-Anat):
 - 2.5. "Taker of Secrets"
 - 4.1. "Mission Briefing"
 - Chapter 7 - TODO - Kharbranth
- Enlightened Elsecaller (Dai-Gonarthis):
 - 3.5.8. "Forbidden Reliquary"
 - Chapter 6 - TODO - Shadesmar
 - Chapter 6 - TODO - Shadesmar
- Enlightened Willshaper (Ashertmarn):
 - 3.5.4. "Lavish Feast"
 - 5.2. "Revelry"
 - 5.3. "Heart of the Revel"
- Enlightened Stoneward (Ba-Ado-Mishram):
 - 5.4. "Hateful Vision"
 - Chapter 6 - TODO - Shadesmar
 - Chapter 10 - TODO - The Spiritual Realm

0.4 Adventure Summary

Here is a brief summary of the plot of the story. You can use it to quickly familiarize yourself with the adventure events:

0.4.1 Chapter 1 Summary

In the People's Hall, the characters discover glyphs accusing Queen Aesudan of the ten foolish attributes. Pai, the responsible ardent, is imprisoned for the crime.

0.4.2 Chapter 2 Summary

After the execution of Pai, riots start in the city. The rioters storm the Kholinar Palace. In the palace halls, the characters find a room full of mirrors with Sja-Anat reflected in one of them. She urges the characters to bond her children to prepare for the coming storm.

0.4.3 Chapter 3 Summary

The riots continue. Highmarshal Azure organizes defenses and storms the monastery with goal to secure a Soulcaster located there. The characters, instructed by Sja-Anat, aim to retrieve different artifacts from there. Finally, the Everstorm wakes Kholinar Parshmen.

0.4.4 Chapter 4 Summary

Newly awaken Singers gather around the city, laying a siege to it. The characters will need to use a Dustcaster retrieved from the monastery to tip the scales of that conflict.

0.4.5 Chapter 5 Summary

The characters must flee the city. The only path leads through the Kholinar Oathgate, currently occupied by reveling ardents.

0.4.6 Chapter 6 Summary

The party is stranded in the Shadesmar. They must travel through it to Kharbranth.

0.4.7 Chapter 7 Summary

While in Kharbranth, the party must negotiate with King Taravangian and convince him to let them travel to Urithiru.

0.4.8 Chapter 8 Summary

While in Urithiru, the party hears about Shallan's investigation to uncover the mystery of a series of murders. Their help could secure their connections inside the Tower.

0.4.9 Chapter 9 Summary

Dalinar and King Elhokar are mounting a rescue mission to Kholinar. This is a perfect opportunity to travel back and face Queen Aesudan.

0.4.10 Chapter 10 Summary

The characters are tasked with their final quest - they must travel to Spiritual Realm and find Ba-Ado-Mishram as she is the only one who can overrule Odium's reign.

0.5 Dramatis Personæ

Following NPCs and fractions appear in the adventure:

- Chanri (she/her) - adolescent woman, most probably friend or family of the PCs; enthusiastic and impulsive, prone to getting into trouble.
- Gran-gran (she/her) - Chanri's grandmother, grumpy and fast to insult.
- Pai (she/her) - ardent of Devotary of Denial, accused Queen Aesudan of ten foolish attributes; her execution sparks the riots in Kholinar.
- Liha (she/her) - ardent, friend of Pai, got locked up after her imprisonment.
- Hoid (he/him) - nobody really important...

Royal Palace

The Palace closed its doors to the hardships troubling the city. Only queen's most trusted allies have access inside.

Following NPCs are related to this fraction:

- Queen Aesudan (she/her) - wife of King Elhokar, at his absence she rules the city; bonded to Yelignar, the Blightwind she got her soul corrupted and her judgment clouded.
- King Elhokar (he/him) - king of Alethkar, currently located in the Shattered Plains.
- King Gavilar (he/him) - former king of Alethkar, father of King Elhokar, killed by the Assassin in White.

Cult of Moments

Ardents close to Queen Aesudan herself, whose lives full of excess lead to drawing the sight of Ashertmarn, the Ashertmarn. Now their minds are lost, following only the beating of the terrible heart.

Following NPCs can be found in this fraction:

- Kharat (he/him) - guides new cultists to their first revelry.
- Kishi (she/her) - got attracted to the revelry in the Monastery; her unwillingness to follow Ashertmarn got her imprisoned.

Wall Guards

With Queen Aesudan secluded in her Palace, the responsibility to defend the city fell to the Wall Guards.

Following NPCs are included here:

- Highmarshal Azure (she/her) - took charge once the previous commander fell in the city riots; now she does her best to protect the city and its people.
- Ithi (she/her) - an Emerald Soulcaster from the city Monastery, got rescued by Highmarshal Azure during the city riots to soulcast food for them.

Singers

During the Everstorm, Kholinar parshmen are transformed into Singers who devastate the city before establishing a camp beyond its walls.

Following NPCs are included in this group:

- Nal (he/him) - malen worker at Gran-gran's.
- Tir (she/her) - femalen worker at Gran-gran's.
- Rishai (she/her) - wounded during the fights in Kholinar.
- Serin (she/her) - Envoyform Singer at the camp.

The Unmade

Following Unmade are referenced or make an appearance in the adventure:

- Sja-Anat, the Taker of Secrets - eerie, mysterious and secretive, Sja-Anat subtly arms and leads the PCs, arming them and manipulating them to achieve her own agenda.
- Nergaoul, the Thrill - violent and brutal, relishes in the sounds of battle, fueling the rage of rioters and warriors fighting in Kholinar.

- Chemoarish, Dustmother - gone for millennia, now only Dustcaster remains as a memento of her terrible power.
- Ashertmarn, the Ashertmarn - drawn to indulgence and excess, influences Cult of Moments in Kholinar.
- Dai-Gonarthi, the Black Fisher - since the Scouring of Aimia, only tales and Black Scallop remain of him.
- Moelach - often found near the dying people, showing them visions of the future known as Death Rattles.
- Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother - lurks in the depths of Urithiru, spawning creatures of horrors to torment its new inhabitants.
- Yelig-nar, the Blightwind - capable of bestowing the power of Surges, he is now bonded to Queen Aesudan, corrupting her soul.
- Ba-Ado-Mishram - once carrying the power to rival Odium himself, captured by ancient Radiants, she is now imprisoned in the Spiritual Realm plotting her revenge.

Roleplaying Sja-Anat

Characteristics: Eerie, mysterious, ancient Goal: Release Ba-Ado-Mishram to break free from Odium

Appearance: Slender woman with black, long, flowing hair, appearing as a reflection in mirrors

Sja-Anat is very secretive and will not share her motivations with the party, telling them only as much they must know at the moment. She doesn't want to serve Odium anymore, but to break free she must ensure he is defeated and removed from the scene. Her best hope is Ba-Ado-Mishram who already once proved she can replace their master.

However, Ba-Ado-Mishram is imprisoned and hidden away. Sja-Anat must find agents who can be manipulated into entering the Spirit Realm to release Ba-Ado-Mishram, and she must ensure they are strong enough for the job. A group of Radiants bonding her Enlightened children seem to be perfect candidates.

0.6 Before Starting the Campaign

Here are some tips and suggestions intended for the GM. Following them is not mandatory, but it might help you prepare and run the game.

0.6.1 Required Knowledge

As the story starts in Kholinar and spends most of the time there, the characters are expected to be familiar with Alethi culture, and as an extension - the players should also know the basics, especially about alethi fauna, flora, spren and raging highstorms.

In the later chapters, the story will move alongside the events of "Words of Raidiance" and "Oathbringer". The players will experience the Everstorm, rebirth of the Singers, Revelry of Ashertmarn, and the dangers of Shadesmar. Make sure you are familiar with those.

0.6.2 Read the Adventure

You, as a GM, are expected to know the overall story of the campaign, so you could present the events with greater ease to your players, and, if a situation calls for it, modify them to your table's needs. Please familiarize yourself with most important NPCs, their goals and beliefs.

0.6.3 Players' Expectations

Inform the players that the story will start in Kholinar and may contain spoilers from the books, especially "Words of Raidiance" and "Oathbringer". Later, some events of "Wind And Truth" may be also presented.

Please warn the players that Radiant Spren are rare in the area. Discuss with them beforehand if they are expecting to join any specific Radiant Order and what are the reasons for that. If a player explicitly wishes to play non-Enlightened Radiant, they should be allowed to do so, but the adventure assumes all Radiants are by default the Enlightened ones (note: that doesn't mean the spren and their knight are evil).

Please make sure you know what spren to introduce for a player aiming for a Radiant Path. The book allows for an easy bonding with Enlightened spren in Chapter 2 - Dust and the Unmade, but the characters may meet their spren before that moment (especially if they are aiming for non-Enlightened path).

On top of that, please discuss with your players following topics:

- How serious should the adventure be?
- What topics players would prefer to avoid during the game?
- Is there anything the players would like to see in the game?
- Are the players comfortable with their characters dying?
- Are the players comfortable with characters' romance, nudity or other sexual content?
- If you are of age - should your group allow alcoholic drinks?
- What rule variants should be in effect?
- How often should your group meet and how long should a single game session take?
- How should you handle situations when one player cannot attend a game session?

Gathering answers to those questions is not a requirement, but it will help you create a comfortable and enjoyable atmosphere for everyone.

NOTE: In Chapter 5 - Revel of Fools, the characters will enter an area influenced by Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel, encountering many NPCs indulging their deepest desires. This book will provide relatively mild and family-friendly descriptions, but if you are aiming for more daring scenes, please make sure all players at the table are comfortable with that.

0.6.4 Create Player Characters

Unless your players have their characters ready after previous adventures, they must create a new party. This book contains several pre-made character sheets you can use in your game (see Appendix F.), but you should encourage players to create more personalized heroes for the story.

While creating new characters, you might want to follow those guidelines:

- Encourage Human Ancestry, unless the player is familiar more complex Singer rules and culture.
- Encourage Alethi culture or at least an expertise in it, as most of the story will take place in that area.
- Share Character Backstory Ideas table with your players for possible inspirations for characters, their motivations and goals for the story.
- If a player plans playing as Knight Radiant, make sure you know what spren to introduce in the story.
- Warn players that the usual Radiant Spren may not be easily encountered in the area.

0.6.5 Character Relationships

Allow players to determine how their characters know each other and what is the reason they are traveling together. Establishing characters' relations before the start of the adventure will make it less likely the heroes will be motivated to split the party and follow their own goals.

You can add more details to character's relationship by suggesting each player to ask about some specific details two other characters. Players can think of their own questions they want to ask each other or they can choose something from the list of below:

- I noticed you play with some trinket. What is it and why is it so important to you?
- It seems you have some skills not considered appropriate for you by alethi culture. How did you learn them?
- We share some unusual hobby/interest. What is it and how did we discover that fact about us?
- You shared a secret with me, once. What was it and why did you trust me with it?
- When we first met you didn't do a good impression on me. Why, and what happened it changed later?
- You once told me that doing the right thing is not always right. What did you mean by that?
- Despite living in Kholinar you don't always act like a typical alethi. What are the differences in your lifestyle?
- You once showed me you carry a drawing of a spren. What spren is it and why do you have this picture?
- You seem to have rather peculiar view on parshmen. What is it and how did you develop it?
- We once discussed our views on vorin church. What was your opinion on that matter?
- Do you remember the reign of King Gavilar? How do you find the new king?
- What was the most terrible battle that changed you? Why, and how did it change you as a person?

0.6.6 Character Backstory

Encourage players to write a short character backstory to better root them in the world and the story. Consider if any NPCs from those backstories could make an appearance in this adventure and how they can enrich the story. You can modify scenes described in this book to include those NPCs, for example:

- An NPC from the PC's backstory may be met in Kholinar. They might need protection, or escalate the situation, putting others in danger.
- The party can meet an NPC they know in the hospital of King Taravangian.
- Someone they know might have went to war on the Shattered Plains. The party might meet them in Urithiru.

You can also invite players to share some connections with the NPCs appearing in the story (Chanri and Gran-gran). That will make the first chapters of the story much more smoother and personal.

It is not a secret for the citizens, that there are several factions pulling the strings in the city: Queen Aesudan and her Palace Guard, the Ardents and the Wall Guard. Some even whisper about some mysterious criminal organization operating in the shadows. The PCs would probably know about them and may even have some ties with one of them.

Starting Path	Reason	Questions	Goals
Envoy or Scholar	You are an ardent from the Holy Enclave in Valath. You traveled from Jah Keved to Alethkar to establish a dialogue with Kholinar ardents. You just arrived in the city, but so far you have been denied access to the Monastery here.	How far can you bend your beliefs and values to establish a common ground?	Improve relations between ardents from Jah Keved and Alethkar.
Agent or Hunter	You are employed by the Weeper, the deadliest assassin in Alethkar. You suspect she might have a contract targeting the queen, but so far you were tasked only with target observation.	Will you follow your orders? Or will you go solo and steal the glory?	Infiltrate the Kholinar Palace to access the queen.
Leader or Warrior	You were given the highest honor a military man could ever hope for - you were assigned to serve the royal family in the Kholinar Palace. The queen herself chose you as a reward for your bravery and martial prowess.	Can the queen count on your unwavering loyalty?	Protect all members of the royal family.
Hunter or Warrior	As a lighteye of a lower dahn, you are not rich enough to enjoy the luxuries of the nobility. Instead, you joined the Wall Guard. It's a good job - perhaps you can hope for a promotion and for sure it is not as dangerous as the Shattered Plains - what could go wrong in the city so far away from the war front?	How much will you sacrifice for the common people of Kholinar?	Defend the city.
Leader or Scholar	You left the days of your military service far behind you. Now you enjoy a well-earned retirement in the city you fought for so many times in the past. Let the others fight. Peace, at last.	Are you ready to draw your sword one more time?	Enjoy your peaceful retirement from military life.
Agent or Envoy	You are a Listener sent to Kholinar from the Shattered Plains. Pretending to be a common parshmen, your task is to infiltrate the enemy city and possibly make contact with local parshmen populace.	Who do you consider "your people"? Who will you fight for?	Find something to tip the scales of the war with alethi.

Chapter 1 - Fool Revealed

1.0 Running This Chapter

This chapter is loosely structured, allowing the PCs for an introduction, meeting with other PCs, and bonding with the NPCs.

At the end of the chapter the PCs will witness Pai accusing Queen Aesudan in the People's Hall - an event that will trigger all of the story.

1.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters start this chapter at level 1. Advance them to level 2 at the end of the chapter.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Helping to capture Pai
- Attempting to defend Pai
- The PCs' reaction to the encounters in the city.

1.0.2 Forging Alliances

The following actions can help the characters to become allies with Kholinar fractions:

- Condemning Pai's accusations may be noticed by Ardents and the Palace Guards.

1.0.3 Weather Conditions

The story starts during the Weeping, after the Lightday. Heavy overcast and constant rain are expected during first three chapters of the story. There will be no high-storms in that time.

1.0.4 Scarce Food

Recently it is difficult to acquire food in Kholinar. If any merchant has anything to sell, the price will be higher and higher as the time progresses.

For each chapter, add food value to it's final cost. (eg. during chapter 3. the price will be 4 times higher than normal: to the base price of 1x add it 3 times more because of the progressed time)

1.1 Life in Kholinar

Start the adventure by reading the following:

It is a few days after Lightday - the Weeping still continues to pour endless rains over the city of Kholinar. In the puddles of water gathered on the streets Rinspren stretch upwards towards the clouds like a blue candles.

Few people can be found on the streets in this weather - most often those are parshmen workers hauling baskets and boxes, never complaining on the weather conditions.

This adventure doesn't have any particular scenes or events to start the story. In the first scenes, focus on introducing the characters and bringing them together - your goal should be to get ready to move towards 1.2. "Sweet Home". This section will provide several examples of scenes you can use. In each scene you play in this chapter, you should remember to show:

- The NPCs you want to introduce
- Parshmen working in the background
- Food being scarce and expensive
- Populace growing unhappy with the queen's rule

People being unsatisfied with the current rule and lack of food will trigger major events in Chapter 2 - Dust and the Unmade. Use this chapter to paint the picture for your players.

Parshmen will play major role in Chapter 3 - Enemy Reborn, so start foreshadowing them right away. There will be less opportunity for that in Chapter 2 - Dust and the Unmade, so don't wait with that.

Chanri the Troublemaker

All example scenes for this part of the adventure feature Chanri. It is assumed she knows at least some people in the party (as a distant family or just a friend).

Roleplaying Chanri

Characteristics: Impulsive, reckless, enthusiastic

Goal: Help Gran-gran survive in starving city

Appearance: Young and thin, with light eyes and strands of hair unable to keep in order

Chanri is the embodiment of the proverb "Curiosity killed the skyeel". Trouble seems to follow her, often as a direct consequence of her impulsive actions. This doesn't seem to bother her, as she can always find something fun in every scenario.

The role of Chanri in the story is to ensure the players will see the most important events of the plot. Being reckless and impulsive, she will rush towards any danger without thinking. If the PCs wish to protect her, they will need to step out of their comfort zone and risk some unsafe actions.

1.1.1 Messing with the Wrong People

Start this scene by reading the following:

You stroll on the streets of Kholinar, when suddenly you hear a racket behind you. You turn to see a thin teenage girl running away from a few thugs chasing her.

"Look, I'm sorry I stole your food, but I'm not giving it back!", she shouts to one of them, then she quickly adds looking at you: "A little help, perhaps?"

The thugs (use Rioter stat block) are chasing Chanri. There are as many of them as the PCs (at least two). If the characters intervene, the thugs will fight until there is only one of them left, at which point he will escape.

Chanri will not participate in the fight, but she will thank the characters for their help.

If possible, weave Chanri into your characters' backstories. She will appear quite a lot in the first chapters, often driving the plot forward.

1.1.2 Hungry Axehounds

When you start this scene, read the following:

You see a teenage girl surrounded by a pack of axehounds, clicking aggressively at her. The girl holds some package above her head.

"It's my food, guys!", she pleads with the pack. "Go buy your own!"

Chanri is being surrounded by Hungry Axehounds (two Axehounds per PC). If attacked, the pack will fight to the end.

The characters may also attempt an Intimidation test or a Leadership test against respective Defenses of an Hungry Axehound to scare them or command them away. Any test is made with disadvantage unless the PC uses some food before to befriend the animals.

1.1.3 Soaking Wet

When you start this scene, read the following:

You see a group of parshmen doing laundry in a clean waters of the Weeping. Nearby, a young woman observes their efforts.

"Do you think they have a havah in there?", Chanri asks. "I would need one, my old one is... well... well, I need a new one!"

Chanri attempts to find and steal a havah dress from the parshmen. The PCs can help her in this attempt, or they may try to persuade her to do better.

Helping Chanri

If the characters wish to help Chanri, you can run the rest of the scene as an endeavor. The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 5 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

The party must use Perception to find the dress, Thievery and Stealth to take it without being noticed and perhaps some Intimidation or Deception if they are caught by the workers.

Stopping Chanri

If the characters wish to stop Chanri, you can run the rest of the scene as a conversation. For the purpose of the scene, you can assume Chanri is an Expert Citizen (see Stormlight World Guide). Chanri has a Cognitive defense of 13, a Spiritual defense of 13, and 4 focus. She leads a reckless life full of impulsive choices, but she is not a bad person.

If Chanri's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

1.1.4 Chull-sliding

Start this scene with the following:

You enter a marketplace, closed for the trade at this hour. There, a chull caravan is resting after a long travel.

"Hey, look, a real chulls!", Chanri says. "Have you ever played a chull-sliding? I always wanted to try!", she adds before running to the caravan.

Chanri will climb the biggest chull to slide down on its shell. The PCs can join her. Unless they finish the game soon enough, read the following:

Suddenly a merchant appears in the nearest building's window. "Thieves! They steal my chulls! Call the guards!"

A merchant - Expert Citizen (see Stormlight World Guide) - enters the scene. The PCs can quickly enter a conversation to calm him down. The merchant has a Cognitive defense of 13, a Spiritual defense of 13, and 4 focus. He is very protective of the caravan and finds this kind of games foolish.

If the merchant's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

If the party fails or ignores attempts to calm the merchant down, four Wall Guards will soon appear. The party can fight them or flee the scene.

If they choose the latter, you can run it as a pursuit endeavor with a Starting Distance of 2 and an Escape Distance of 4. If the guards catch the party, they will attempt to arrest them, which probably will start a combat encounter.

1.1.5 Grateful Invitation

If the party helps Chanri to deal with her troubles, she will be really grateful for the aid. As a thank you, she will invite the PCs to her home, so they could eat something and warm themselves in a dry house. Proceed to 1.2. "Sweet Home".

1.2 Sweet Home

When the PCs enter Chanri's home, read the following:

You enter a stone building, dimly illuminated with a few candles. On the upper floor, in a sickbed lays an old woman.

"Chanri? Is that you, Chanri?", the woman asks. "Where have you been, you stupid girl? What took you so storming long?"

Laying in the bed is Gran-gran Veda, a grandmother of Chanri. She is seldom happy with anything and she always makes her disappointment vocal. In fact, her loud complaints are dominating each conversation.

Roleplaying Gran-gran Veda

Characteristics: Grumpy, ungrateful, unlikely

Goal: Complain and insult

Appearance: Elderly and frail lighteye

Bitter and resentful, Gran-gran remember much better days. Nowadays everything is worse and everyone does everything wrong. Gran-gran cannot tolerate this foolishness, making sure every minor error is loudly complained about. She does not have a time to care about the feelings of others. She is a lighteye (of lower dahn) elder, and she deserves only the best!

In the whole scene, there is little to do for the characters. They can of course join conversation, react to a NPC's behavior, etc, but there is no larger goal. The scene is here to paint the picture of Chanri's family and it directs characters to 1.3. "People's Hall". You can modify the scenes from here as long as you achieve those goals.

The point of this location is to ensure the PCs always have a place in Kholinar they can call home and use for resting. Unlikable NPC of Gran-gran introduces moral choice - will they help her during the troubles ahead? Or will they ignore her? While rescuing good and friendly NPCs is an obvious choice, here the PCs can show their character and personality.

1.2.1 Parshmen Servants

For this scene, read the following:

A femalen parshmen approaches Gran-gran with a bowl of steaming meal. She kneels next to a bed and starts gently feeding weak woman. However, after the fist spoon, she starts shouting:

"That's disgusting! What are you giving me, stupid chull? Tallew? I am a storming lighteye!" She smashes the bowl on the floor, then adds: "Clean that up, you idiot! Damnation, you are so useless, I paid too much for you!"

Nal (he/him) and Tir (she/her) are two parshmen working for Gran-gran. Suffice to say - nobody is happy about this arrangement...

Give the characters a moment to interact with the PCs, perhaps comfort the parshmen, or try to calm Gran-gran down.

Gran-gran's terrible treatment of her parshmen workers will reap the consequences in 3.6.1. "Ungrateful Servants".

1.2.2 Unhospitable Host

After Chanri invites the party to eat something, read the following:

As the malen parshmen starts preparing food for the dinner, Gran-gran shouts from her bed:

"Hey, what are you doing? This is our food, paid for with our money! We are not doing beggar's feast in here to give it for free! Go beg the queen for free scraps, it's her fault the city is starving now! But leave our storming supplies alone!"

Allow Chanri to mutter some awkward apologies and attract some shamespren. Unless the PCs act, proceed to the next interaction.

1.2.3 Gran-gran's Demand

Before you finish the scene in Gran-gran's home, read the following:

As you are gathering on the ground floor, you hear Gran-gran shouting to Chanri:

"You must get me a proper food this time, not this tallew filled with cremlings! You can eat that yourself! Go to the market next to the People's Hall, they know who I am! You hear me? Tomorrow! First thing in the morning!"

As the characters leave the house, Chanri will see them off:

"Bye! And once again, thank you for today! Sorry for Gran-gran, she is just... well... she's just Gran-gran... But I know she liked you! Feel free to visit us anytime you need!"

"By the way, will you join me tomorrow morning at the market? The one next to the People's Hall! Please?"

Once the characters are invited to witness the events of 1.3. "People's Hall", you can end this section.

1.2.4 Aftermath

Once the players complete their interactions in this scene, you can proceed to 1.3. "People's Hall".

1.3 People's Hall

If the characters attempt to meet Chanri the next morning, start the scene with 1.3.1. "Gathering Crowd".

If they decide to skip this meeting, finish this chapter and proceed to Chapter 2 - Dust and the Unmade. There, they can learn what happened with Pai while hearing the gossiping people.

1.3.1 Gathering Crowd

Start the scene by reading the following:

As you approach the market and the People's Hall, you can see a small crowd rushing inside the Hall. The food merchant you wanted to trade with just closed his store. "Is that true? I must see it!", he mutters to himself as he rushes next to you.

As the characters follow the crowd inside, proceed to 1.3.2. "Ten Glyphs".

1.3.2 Ten Glyphs

Once the PCs push through the crowd, read the following:

You stop a few paces before a dais with the Common Throne, beneath which there is an ardent kneeling. Around you can see ten glyphs, one for each foolish attribute:

Avarice
Callousness
Profligacy

and so on...

A PC with an expertise in Vorin theology will recognize the glyphs as Ten Foolish Attributes from the teachings.

If at least one of the characters can read alethi women's script, they will be able to read:

Below each of the glyphs there is a smaller writing:

Avarice
The queen gathers goods she does not have a use for.

Callousness
Blind to her people's needs, the queen terminated Beggar's Feast.

Profligacy
Food rots and is wasted in the palace, while the city starves.

Spoiler Info

Events leading to this moment are described in "Words of Raidiance", Interlude I-12: Lhan.

1.3.3 Blind Accusations

After the PCs discover the glyphs, read the following:

Suddenly several guards with queen's colors enter the People's Hall. One of them approaches you.

"Who did this?", he asks. "Was it you? Hey answer me! Why did you do that!", he shouts, his arm reaching to his sword.

False Radiant accuses one of the PCs of painting the glyphs. With hand on his sword, he is ready to arrest the characters, drawing weapons on the first sign of resistance. More False Radiants are nearby - starting a fight will probably make them join it.

The characters may try to talk their way out of the trouble. Run it as a conversation. False Radiant has a Cognitive defense of 15, a Spiritual defense of 18, and 5 focus. The guard is clearly agitated and blind to reason. He fears the queen will punish him unless he quickly finds a person responsible for the glyphs.

In the conversation, False Radiant will use mostly Intimidation. If False Radiant's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

Try to convince your players the situation is serious. Make them terrified of a huge guard in full armor and his companions. Make other NPCs scared of the guards, making it clear they will not join the fight.

In this scene, there is no danger for the PCs. Instead, use it to make them roleplay their characters in the dire situation. What will they do? Will they instantly accuse harmless ardent? Or will they make a heroic sacrifice to protect her?

1.3.4 Pai's Capture

Regardless of the conversation result, follow with the below:

"Hey, give it a rest!", another guard says. "It's clearly the ardent, those here know nothing about it. You two, take her away", he adds, pointing at the kneeling clerk.

When the ardent is taken away, there is no fear in her eyes. Only calm acceptance.

Once the guards take Pai away, you can complete this chapter.

1.4 Journeying Onward

After the characters witness the arrest of Pai, advance them to level 2 and proceed to Chapter 2 - Dust and the Unmade.

Chapter 2 - Dust and the Unmade

2.0 Running This Chapter

In this chapter, public execution of Pai starts city riots. During those, the character will sooner or later need to find somewhere safe to find. At that moment, they will meet with Sja-Anat, who will set their objectives for the future.

2.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters start this chapter at level 2. Advance them to level 3 after they meet Sja-Anat.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Attempting to free Pai
- Defending people during riots
- Bonding Sja-Anat's children

2.0.2 Forging Alliances

The following actions can help the characters to become allies with Kholinar factions:

- Defending ardents during the riots
- Helping palace guard defend the palace

2.1 Growing Unrest

After the events of 1.3. "People's Hall", give the characters full day before starting 2.2. "Execution". The PCs can follow their goals, continuing encounters from 1.1. "Life in Kholinar", with small changes in the general atmosphere:

- Common folk discuss the accusations Pai painted in the People's Hall
- Some people declare Pai a sower of discord, accusing her of being irresponsible and her manifesto groundless (see 2.1.1. "Blaming Pai")
- Some people blame incompetent ardents who lost their faith for all of this situation (see 2.1.2. "Heretic Thoughts")

- Others, very carefully, agree with the ardent, blaming Queen Aesudan for all the problems in the city (see 2.1.3. "Treasonous Whispers")

Allow at least one comment from each group slip into PC's encounters with NPCs, to show various range of opinions spreading through the city. After that, when full day have passed, proceed to 2.2. "Execution".

2.1.1 Blaming Pai

When roleplaying NPCs believing Pai was wrong, you can use the following quotes:

- She shouldn't have written that... No, she shouldn't have...
- That girl must have something wrong with her head...
- Unbelievable... To write such things...
- We're at war, doesn't she know that? We cannot turn on each other now...
- All this Weeping without the Highstorms must have made her insane!

2.1.2 Heretic Thoughts

When roleplaying NPCs losing their faith in the city ardents, you can use the following quotes:

- Those ardents should be locked in their monastery, I tell you!
- The ardents play the nobles' game far too long, they don't care about us, the common folk!
- It is Hierocracy all over again, mark my words!
- They can't control their own people, someone should show them where's their place!
- She blames the queen, but I blame the ardents. They are supposed to guide her, aren't they?

2.1.3 Treasonous Whispers

When roleplaying NPCs who blame the queen, you can use the following quotes:

- That ardent is right, the queen has forgotten us...
- King Gavilar at least cared about this city...
- Where are the Beggars' Feasts, hm? Where are they...?
- I'm hearing some rumors, the palace steals our food just to throw it away! No, really, it's true!
- I was told the queen is not faithful - neither to the Almighty, nor to her husband!

2.2 Execution

Start this section by reading the following:

You see Chanri rushing towards you. "The ardent!", she gasps. "They are executing her!", she adds before running towards the execution stage. You see more and more people rushing in that direction.

The PCs are expected to follow the crowd, in which case, proceed to 2.2.1. "Excited Populace".

If the characters decide to ignore this event, the next thing they know are riots starting in the city. Proceed to 2.3. "Riots at the Gallows", but don't describe things that could be experienced only at the gallows.

2.2.1 Excited Populace

when the characters reach the execution site, read the following:

The crowd here is growing with every minute.

"Finally, something is happening in this city", says someone. "We haven't got any proper execution since that meat thief guy!"

"Nah, they cannot kill her!", someone answers. "She did nothing wrong, she was right, actually..."

Give the characters some time to react to the crowd or perhaps come with some plan. Their attempts to stop the execution will not succeed, but they might help them attract spren or complete other goals.

Once there is nothing more the players wish to do, proceed to 2.2.2. "Queen's Verdict".

Pai's execution is a pivotal moment in the story, sparking the riots and as a result all future events. Reward players' planning and good rolls, but do not allow them to free Pai or stop the hanging.

2.2.2 Queen's Verdict

Once it seems the characters are ready for the situation to unfold, read the following:

The ardent is brought by palace guards and queen's faithful. She is placed right below the gallows' noose, while a fat ardent unrolls a scroll and starts reading the verdict:

"We are here to resolve a case of Ardent Pai from the Devotary of Denial. She is charged with crimes of lèse-majesté, heresy, and an attempt to refound the Hierocracy.

"The queen in her mercy decided to grant a royal pardon for all the insults from the mouth of the charged. However, the crimes of heresy and Hierocracy affiliation are too severe to be ignored. Therefore, you are sentenced to death by hanging. May the Almighty have a mercy on your soul!"

The crowd is unhappy with the verdict. Some of them boo, others throw rotten food on the guards. However, they are not actively hostile yet.

Give the characters some time to react. They won't be able to stop the execution, but their actions may affect their future story.

After a brief moment, read the following:

One of the ardents escorts Pai on the box, another puts a noose on her neck. She is calm and serene, accepting her fate with pride. Soon after, the rope jerks, and ardent Pai is no more...

Spoiler Info

Hanging Pai by the order of Queen Aesudan is referenced in "Oathbringer", Chapter 62: Research.

2.2.3 Aftermath

Immediately after hanging of Pai proceed to 2.3. "Riots at the Gallows".

2.3 Riots at the Gallows

After Pai is executed, read the following:

"She was innocent and you know it!", someone from the crowd shouts to the ardents. Another throws something disgusting at the guard, who gets hit right in the face.

"That's enough, you scum!", he bellows as he draws his sword and approaches the commoner.

Riots started at the Kholinar gallows. Play a few scenes from the list below, before you proceed to the next section: 2.4. "Storming the Palace".

2.3.1 Guard's Blood

You can start with the scene below:

With one slash of the sword, the guard cuts helpless men in half, his blood gathering in a scarlet pool on the stone. Everyone around is shocked, but only for a second. In the next moment angry mob is charging the guard standing in their midst.

One False Radiant is attacked by five Rioters. It is too late to calm any of the sides down, they are ready to kill each other and they will not run from the fight. The characters can join the fight to help one of the sides.

2.3.2 Ardent in Danger

Nearby, the PCs can witness another scene:

You can see furious rioters pulling one of the ardents from the gallows stand. Another man of the faith wanted to pull him back, but in the end both of them ended up falling from the wooden platform. Now, they are surrounded. "You will die just like her!" one of the rioters shouts.

Two Ardents (use Cultist of Moments, no variant, stat block) are surrounded by six Rioters ready to dismember them. One of them is Prone. If the PCs wish, they can join the fight for any of the sides. The Rioters will not stop, until the Ardents are slain.

2.3.3 Dangerous Accusation

If the PCs have sided with the Ardents or False Radiants since their arrival at the gallows, read the following:

"Hey, and who are you?!?", one of the rioters shouts to you. "Are you with them???"

Soon more of them turn towards you, hatred in their eyes.

The PCs are attacked by eight Rioters who will fight until death. Any character who wishes to flee may attempt a DC 12 Stealth check test to hide in the crowd.

2.4 Storming the Palace

Once there was enough encounters played at the gallows, read the following:

Through the chaos rising at the plaza, suddenly you hear angry voices:

"It's all queen's fault!"

"She stole our food!"

"Down with the queen!"

Suddenly, whole shapeless mass of people moved, running towards the palace.

Angry mob is storming the Kholinar Palace. If the PCs don't join them immediately, add the following:

From the moving crowd one hand reaches to you. Chanri catches your arm:

"Come on! We're gonna get her!", she manages to shout before the wave of people pushes her forward.

If the characters wish to protect Chanri, they should follow the crowd towards the palace - proceed with the events of 2.4.1. "Palace Gates".

If they decide they should probably flee somewhere safer, skip the palace part and proceed to 2.4.3. "Run For Your Life!" (just make it happen on the streets of Kholinar, not inside the palace).

2.4.1 Palace Gates

When the PCs reach palace gates, read the following:

You arrive with the mass of rioters at the palace entrance. The angry mob charged without thinking at fully armed guards, while the others forced the gates open. For a short moment, you think you see Chanri rushing inside with the others

There are two False Radiants here, each of them is fighting with numerous Rioters. The PCs may join the fight if they wish to gather better weapons. They can also rush after Chanri inside the palace - in that case, proceed to 2.4.2. "Palace Halls".

2.4.2 Palace Halls

When the PCs enter the palace to find Chanri, read the following:

You find Chanri deep inside the palace corridors. She's standing over the dead guard and dozen of dead rioters, bloodied sword in her hand.

"Hey, over here!", she waves and grins to you, her face red with blood. "We've got one".

Her joy is short-lived. Soon after, another guard runs in from behind the corner.

If the characters decide to flee, continue to 2.4.3. "Run For Your Life!".

If the characters decide to stay, they will face False Radiant. Every round or two, allow another Rioter to join the fight. Once the combat is resolved, if it wasn't enough to scare the PCs off, read the following:

You hear more heavy steps running from the inside of the palace. "Over there!", you hear the guard's voice "More of those filth is in this corridor!"

You realize there is too many of them. "Oh storms!", pale Chanri cries, drawing fearspren. "They will storming kill us all...!"

The party must grab Chanri and run away. Proceed to 2.4.3. "Run For Your Life!".

2.4.3 Run For Your Life!

The characters must flee from the incoming palace forces. Run this as an Pursuit Endeavor with starting distance of 2 and escape distance of 5. Once the party reaches the escape distance, they will need to find some safe room to hide inside.

If the Pursuit distance is reduced to 0, allow False Radiant one free attack against one of the characters, but don't end the scene - allow them to still run away.

If at least one of the players started attracting an Enlightened Radiant spren, they will actively help during this scene. Award the party one free success in the endeavor. Also, at the end of the Pursuit, they will show the party the best room to hide in.

Once the characters are safely hidden from the palace guard, proceed to 2.5. "Taker of Secrets".

This entire scene is a setup for a meeting with Sja-Anat. The players cannot fail here, the meeting must happen as it enables all future events. If your players are having a bad luck in this scene, give them some help in a form of additional rioters appearing or simply spawning the proper room behind a corner, and allowing the guards to never see the party entering it, regardless of the Pursuit results.

2.5 Taker of Secrets

When the characters enter the Room of Mirrors, read the following:

As you close the door behind you, you hear the footsteps of your enemies running away. You are safe...

Without queen's forces on your heels, you take a moment to look around. You are in a room full of mirrors - some of them reaching the ceiling, the others - smaller and lying on the floor. They are all covered in dust, some of them are broken or hidden under a sheets of cloth.

Suddenly you see a movement. In one of the mirrors there is a black silhouette of a young woman, with huge, white eyes. She is looking at you, slowly smiling.

If one of the characters already started bonding an Enlightened Radiant spren who helped during the chase, add the following:

"You did well, my child", you hear the reflection saying to your spren. "You brought them to me, just as I asked!"

2.5.1 Talking with Sja-Anat

Continue by reading:

The reflection turns you: "There is not much time! Big changes are coming, and you must be ready for them. But do not worry, I will guide you, and my children are here to help!"

It is natural for the characters to be confused and have some questions. Allow them to talk with Sja-Anat before she points them their next objective.

Who are you?

I am Sja-Anat. I am not your enemy.

What are you?

I am spren, an ancient one. We were made, then unmade. But now, I am your only hope if you wish to stay alive!

Is there more spren like you?

There are others like me in the city, yes. But you wouldn't like meeting them, they would not wish to help you.

What should we fear?

The storm is coming, an ancient storm, and with it, an ancient enemy. This city will fall, its people will fall, and the rivers of blood will flow.

How can you help us?

The people of this world wielded great power, once. My children can help you wield it once more.

Why should we trust you?

Fearful and careful. That is wise. But sadly, the time for wisdom is growing short. I am your only hope to leave this place alive.

Why are you helping us?

I will serve no longer, I am not of the enemy, I am of me. I will rise free, but for that, the changes must come.

Roleplaying Sja-Anat

Detailed roleplay tips for Sja-Anat are described in 0.5. "Dramatis Personæ".

2.5.2 Bonding an Enlightened Spren

If a character wishes to bond an Enlightened Spren, but hasn't attracted one so far, Sja-Anat can facilitate a meeting. It is up to GM's discretion if the meeting will happen in this moment or in a few scenes later, but any character who wants to start this path should meet their spren before Chapter 3 - Enemy Reborn.

Sja-Anat can only help with bonding an Enlightened spren. If a player does not wish for Enlightenment but would rather follow standard Radiant path, it is out of her power to help with that. Also, it might be hard for a character to find such a spren in the Kholinar, the area is not really welcoming for them right now.

Nobody To Bond With

If for some reason no character wishes to bond an Enlightened spren, Sja-Anat will send one or two of them to accompany the party either way as she might wish to have an eye on them. On top of that - their presence might be important in the future parts of the story, so make sure there is always one ready for making a bond.

OK, let's be honest. This is a story about Enlightened Radiants, made with a sole purpose to play with Enlightened spren. It would be a huge missed opportunity if a player didn't want to follow that path, and I would suggest to encourage them to this adventure.

If for some reason the player is strongly convinced not to play as Enlightened Radiant, but still wishes to follow a Radiant path, you should probably make an exception and allow them to bond whoever they want.

If for roleplay reasons a player chooses not to trust Sja-Anat, that is a valid choice. You should still allow them to bond her spren if they wanted to - they don't need to serve her, their story might follow them actively going for the artifacts she desires just not to let her get them.

Path to Enlightenment

Meeting or talking to Sja-Anat, the Taker of Secrets, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Lightweaver (see Appendix D: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

Path to Enlightenment

Entering the grounds of the Kholinar Palace influenced by Yelig-nar, the Blightwind, can expedite an Enlightened Skybreaker (see Appendix D: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

Spoiler Info

Similar encounter with Sja-Anat is shown in "Oathbringer", Chapter 84: The One You Can Save.

2.5.3 The Mission

Once the characters finished all the questions and meeting their new spren, read the following:

"Now, you must go!", Sja-Anat says to you from the mirror. "The time is short. You must leave this place, gather your allies, and while everyone is distracted with the chaos all around them, enter ardent monastery in the city. There, in the deepest and darkest rooms, you will find ancient artifacts of my kind. Take them! You will need them sooner than you think, too soon... Hurry!"

Once Sja-Anat points the PCs to their next objective, you can complete this chapter.

2.6 Journeying Onward

After the characters receive instructions from Sja-Anat advance them to level 3 and proceed to Chapter 3 - Enemy Reborn.

Chapter 3 - Enemy Reborn

3.0 Running This Chapter

In this chapter, the riots continue on the streets of Kholinar. Highmarshal Azure defends city gates and storms the monastery, while helpless parshmen are slaughtered on the streets by queen's orders.

In this chaos, the characters follow their own agenda - they must reclaim ancient artifacts of the Unmade from the Ardent Monastery.

Starting from this chapter, this book assumes Chanri might have died in the riots and she is referenced no more. If in your game she survived, it is up to you how to tell her story - she may die from the hands of newborn Singers during 3.6. "The Everstorm", or she may live to meet the PCs again during Chapter 9 - TODO - Kholinar. Who knows, she might even bond an Enlightened spren (knowing her personality, probably a lightspren)

3.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters start this chapter at level 3. Advance them to level 4 at the end of this chapter.

Depending on the player choices, this chapter may be encounter-rich, or finish quicker if the party remains focused to complete their objective as soon as possible.

If you feel the chapter is getting longer, consider advancing the party to level 4 as you trigger 3.6. "The Everstorm" events. If you do so, do not award them additional level at the end of the chapter, they should start Chapter 4 - Enemy Unmade to Dust at level 4 no matter how many encounters did they have during the riots.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Calming angry mob or leading them to riot against queen's herald
- Defending helpless parshmen or helping to execute them
- Fighting with Nergaoul nearby can expedite an Enlightened Windrunner
- Seeing ancient artifacts of the Unmade can expedite an Enlightened Dustbringer or Elsecaller

3.0.2 Forging Alliances

The following actions can help the characters to become allies with Kholinar fractions:

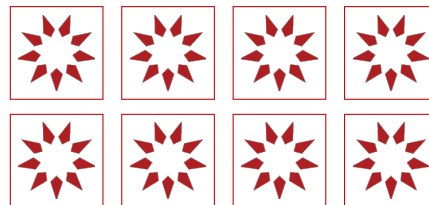

- Helping Highmarshal Azure to defend the gates and secure the monastery
- Fighting alongside the Cult of Moments against Highmarshal Azure and the parshmen
- Defending helpless parshmen and newly born Singers

3.0.3 Event: The Thrill of Battle

As the fights rise in the city, Nergaoul, the Thrill gets attracted by the screams of battle and the blood of the wounded.

EVENT

Triggers when the final Complication slot is filled.

The Thrill of Battle

Progressing the Event

Each time a complication is rolled during a fight in Kholinar, you can spend it to progress the event by 1, trading an immediate Complication for the Nergaoul's attention.

Each time a PC kills a foe in Kholinar while there are other enemies still alive, they must pass DC 15 Discipline check. On a failure, progress the event by 1.

Triggering the Event

Once the final complication slot is filled, Nergaoul arrives to Kholinar. From now on, during all combat scenes, all characters (PCs and NPCs) are affected by the following rules:

Thrill of Murder

Raise Stakes each time a melee attack is made. On a ✨, add +3 to that d20 roll and that attack grazes all characters adjacent to both the attacker and the defender (without spending focus).

Keep Fighting!

If a character wishes to move away from the enemy or stop fighting (eg. when there are no enemies left), they must make a DC 15 Discipline check. On a failure they must keep fighting and attempt an attack against any character in the scene, including an ally. If the character passes the test, they no longer repeat it during next rounds of this combat scene.

Path to Enlightenment

Fighting in the battle influenced by Nergaoul, the Thrill, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Windrunner (see Appendix D: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

3.0.4 Death Rattles

When a nearby NPC dies, you can consider marking his death with a Death Rattle, especially if there is an Enlightened Truthwatcher in the party.

You can make up your own Death Rattles (either random nonsense or foreshadowing prophecy), or you can pick one from the examples presented in Appendix 3: Death Rattles.

Path to Enlightenment

Hearing a Death Rattle sent by a Moelach can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Truthwatcher (see Appendix D: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

Moelach will have its own arc dedicated for its influence in Chapter 7 - TODO - Kharbranth. Do not expedite an Enlightened Truthwatcher more than once in this chapter.

3.1 Proclamation

Start the events of this chapter by reading the following:

You see small crowd gathering around a woman wearing queen's colors who stands on some box in the middle of a street. She is accompanied by royal guards and is holding a piece of parchment.

The crowd around grows agitated with each passing moment.

Female herald is an Expert Citizen (see Stormlight World Guide) guarded by two False Radiants. The crowd throws rotten food at them, but they are ignoring it.

The characters can lead the riot against them or try to calm the people. If the fight starts, the herald flees, leaving her scroll behind for the PCs to find, but the guards will stand and fight against the people. If no fighting starts, after a few moments the herald reads the content of the scroll:

We, Aesudan, by the grace of Allmighty and His Heralds, Queen of the Alethkar, do hereby proclaim that all parsh people are the Voidbringers in hiding and therefore enemies to the realm and our faith. It is our order to exterminate all parsh people taking shelter behind the walls of Kholinar.

After reading the proclamation, the herald and the guards walk away, leaving angry and confused people behind.

If the riots start before the herald can read the order, she leaves the scroll behind in a hurry. Any character who can read in alethi will be able to learn its contents.

Spoiler Info

Queen Aesudan proclaiming parsmen to be Voidbringers and ordering their execution is referenced in "Oathbringer", Chapter 62: Research.

3.2 Blood on the Streets

To reach the monastery, the characters will need to travel through streets of Kholinar. That will spawn multiple opportunities for smaller encounters on the streets. Use this section for some inspiration, especially if the characters take more time to reach the monastery.

However, before you allow the PCs to chart their course, read the following:

When you step on the street, you see a smoke rising from the city walls. Some people run away from that direction.
"The gate! They are attacking the gate!", one of them shouts.

From here, the characters can rush towards the city gates, sneak to the monastery or even attempt their luck to enter the palace. When they walk on the streets it is possible for the events below to happen:

3.2.1 More Proclamations

If long enough time have passed since the previous queen's proclamation read by her herald, a new one can be announced. Each proclamation starts with the same preamble:

We, Aesudan, by the grace of Allmighty and His Heralds, Queen of the Alethkar, do herby proclaim that...

Each new proclamation errs on the edge of insanity, painting the picture of a queen descending into madness and religious fanaticism. None of the announcements seem to acknowledge ongoing riots. Examples may include:

- All lights should be put out after dark and the spheres covered with cloth to make it harder for Voidbringers to find Kholinar in the dead of the night.
- People should pray to the Allmighty out in the open each day, including highstorm days, to beg for absolution and mercy for Kholinar.
- Each household should sacrifice a chul to beg the Allmighty for the King's victory over the Voidbringers on the Shattered Plains.
- All people, both men and women, should adjust their clothing to cover both freehand and safehand as a sign of modesty and humility.
- All people should face the Origin and sing ten songs to the ten heralds ten times a day.
- Tallew gathered on odd days of the week is proclaimed impure and should be burnt. Only tallew gathered on even days are admitted for consumption.

- People shall bring all of their foods and drinks to the ardents to be purified with prayers before they can be consumed.

3.2.2 Violent Clash

When starting this encounter, read the following:

You hear battle roars and cries of pain. The street is red with blood. You can't tell who started this fight, there are wounded on both sides.

Choose 2 groups of adversaries:

- 1d4 Wall Guards
- 1d6 Rioters
- 1d6 Cultists (each Cultist of Moments of random kind)

Those groups fight with each other. They ignore the characters, but will attack them once they enter the conflict helping one of the sides.

3.2.3 Helpless Parshmen

When starting this encounter, read the following:

You see a docile parshmen worker, hauling some boxes. Angry mob gathers around him. "Storming Voidbringer!", one of the rioters shouts as he raises his hammer. "Die, you filth!"

A Docile Parshmen is surrounded by 1d6 Rioters. Unless the characters intervene, they will kill the worker. The party can also join them and execute queen's order.

You can repeat this encounter multiple times, changing some details of the scene:

- You can change aggressors' fraction, cycling between Rioters, Wall Guards and Cultists.
- The parshmen can have different coloration of patterns and occupation.
- If the party is quick to follow queen's order, introduce moral dilemma by making subsequent parshmen even more helpless: make them old and barely moving, pregnant or just a kid.

3.2.4 Hostile Rioters

When you start this encounter, read the following:

You did not see that coming. A heavy blow hits you in the back. "You are one of them, aren't you?", the rioter asks. "Where do you think you are going? This street is ours!"

The party is attacked by 1d6 + 2 Rioters. Each character who doesn't pass DC 15 Perception check is Surprised in the first round of the fight. The enemies fight until there are only 2 of them left, at which moment they flee.

3.2.5 Cult Procession

1d4 + 4 Cultists (each Cultist of Moments of random kind) walk in procession through Kholinar streets. They seem oblivious to riots all around them and they will not attack if unprovoked. If the characters start the fight, they fight to the end. None of them carries anything valuable.

Spoiler Info

Similar procession is described in "Oath-bringer", Chapter 61: Nightmare Made Manifest.

3.2.6 Hungry Beggar

When the party meets the beggar, read the following:

You see an old and dirty man wearing rags, who begs on the side of the street. "Please, I haven't eaten for days", he asks, reaching his only healthy hand towards you.

The characters can share the food with the beggar. It is a right thing to do, but they cannot expect anything in return, and food is scarce in the city...

You can repeat this encounter several times, changing the beggar NPC each time to someone new.

3.2.7 Wounded Enemy

When you introduce this encounter, read the following:

You can see the rioters fought here not so long ago. The street is painted red with pools of blood, dead bodies lie scattered everywhere. You want to leave when you hear faint voice: "Please... help me..."

The party meets one badly wounded adversary (one from Wall Guard, Rioter and Cultist of Moments). They can help him if they so choose.

To make this encounter more interesting, choose an NPC from the faction the characters are the most hostile towards.

3.2.8 Trouble at Home

If the party decides to return to Gran-gran during the riots, read the following:

You hear grandma Veda even before you enter the building:

"Hey! Where are your manners! Just come here, you storming son of a chul! I will teach you! Hey, I am talking to you, you hear me? Come here! You will regret..."

Two Rioters and one Wall Guard are looting the place. They ignore the old lady and the parshmen, but they will turn hostile when they notice the PCs entering. When only one of them is left standing, he will try to flee the building.

3.2.9 It's a Hard Work

The characters may decide that the riots are the best opportunity for some side job in the goods liberation and redistribution business. Depending on the value of the loot they are aiming for, consider no resistance, some competition in a form of a few other Rioters, hired guards protecting the place (use Wall Guard stat block), or other adversaries from Stormlight World Guide.

Try to ensure the party will not spend entire chapter just looting random places in the city. If you feel this activity is repeated too many times, let the spren urge them to focus on their goals, increase security of looted places, or, if that wasn't enough, trigger the events of 3.6. "The Everstorm".

3.3 The Palace

At this point in the story, there is little to be gained in the palace. If characters attempt to enter the palace, they will find closed and heavily guarded gates.

Two knights guard the bared palace gates. Their armors shine in the sun, but there is a shadow falling over their eyes and the sense of wrongness to them. Their leader approaches you. "The palace is closed for the likes of you.", he says. "Go back where you belong!"

Two False Radiants keep watch on both sides of the gates. Their commander - False Radiant Leader will not allow the characters to enter. If the characters stay here too long, they will be attacked by palace forces. When the fight starts, two more False Radiant will reinforce palace forces after the first round of combat. All guards will fight to the end.

Path to Enlightenment

Approaching the gates of the Kholinar Palace influenced by Yelig-nar, the Blightwind, can expedite an Enlightened Skybreaker (see Appendix D: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

3.3.1 Talking Their Way In

The characters may wish to persuade the guards to let them in - run it as a conversation. False Radiant Leader has a Cognitive defense of 15, a Spiritual defense of 18, and 5 focus.

His loyalty to the Queen Aesudan is incredible and he will positively respond to people with similar values. All tests against him are made with disadvantage unless the character has very good reason to be allowed inside.

If False Radiant Leader's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

3.3.2 Sneaking Inside

The characters may decide to avoid the guards and sneak inside the palace behind their backs. You can run it as an endeavor. The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 6 successes before 2 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective. All tests of the endeavor made against the palace guards are made with disadvantage as they are on high alert.

If the characters succeed, they can enter the palace without the guards knowing. Otherwise, they are attacked by them. They will fight to the death, but they will not pursue fleeing characters.

3.3.3 Inside the Palace

If the characters convinced the guards to let them in, they will be escorted by two False Radiants. They will be allowed to the throne room to swear devotion and loyalty to Queen Aesudan (or whatever was the reason the guards let them in).

After that they will be escorted back to exit. Any sign of disobedience or lack of cooperation will turn the guards hostile and may result in lethal encounter.

Do not allow Queen Aesudan to participate in a fight in this chapter - she will have her own boss fight in Act II.

3.4 Battle at the Gates

If the players managed to reach this location before completing 3.5. "Ardent Monastery", they will see Highmarshal Azure and her Wall Guards defending the gate from the Cult of Moments. The PCs can join either side of the conflict. Start the encounter from 3.4.1. "Main Gate".

If they decided to complete 3.5. "Ardent Monastery" first, Highmarshal Azure successfully defended the gate by the time the characters reach it. In this case there is nothing more to do in here and you can skip the events of this section.

Roleplaying Highmarshal Azure

Characteristics: Determined, inspiring, resourceful

Goal: Protect the people of Kholinar

Appearance: Orange eyes and short, straight, black hair. Lean and grim, with couple scars on her face. Wears shining chainmail and an azure cloak.

Highmarshal Azure didn't ask for that - she just was around when Kholinar needed a Wall Guard commander and she stepped up to take the responsibility. She is not even from Alethkar, but this does not matter - there are people who need her and she will defend them!

Spoiler Info

Highmarshal Azure leading the defense of the city gates against the Cult of Moments is referenced in "Oathbringer", Chapter 70: Highmarshal Azure.

3.4.1 Main Gate

Start this encounter by reading the following:

"Form the line! Shields high! Don't give them an inch!" - you hear orders shouted from a small group of defenders surrounded by an assault of cultists in white.

Highmarshal Azure leads a small squad of four Wall Guards against an assault of eight Cultists (each Cultist of Moments of a random kind). Highmarshal Azure will retreat once all her troops are dead, but all others will fight to the end.

From here, the characters can take the stair to join the fight in 3.4.3. "City Walls". They can also enter the gate tower to fight in 3.4.2. "Guard Barracks".

Highmarshal Azure and other combatants form this location will remain here, it is up to the players to drive off the enemies.

3.4.2 Guard Barracks

When the PCs enter this room, read the following:

You enter the barrack room to see the last of the cultists being overwhelmed by the defenders.

Six Wall Guards are fighting here, and only two Cultists (random kinds) are remaining. All of them will fight to the end.

Both sides are vaguely familiar with the character's involvement during the fight in 3.4.1. "Main Gate", so the PCs cannot change sides now.

From here the characters can take an exit to reach 3.4.3. "City Walls".

3.4.3 City Walls

When the PCs enter the walls, read the following:

You enter just in time to see more cultists approaching on the walls. The lone guard will soon be overwhelmed...

Single Wall Guard is about to be attacked by six Cultists (random kinds). All will fight to the end.

Both sides are vaguely familiar with the character's involvement during the fight in 3.4.1. "Main Gate", so the PCs cannot change sides now.

From here the characters can enter 3.4.2. "Guard Barracks".

3.4.4 Aftermath

The fighting stops once the PCs defeat all enemies in all three locations. The gates are now under control of the faction the PCs were supporting during the fight.

Highmarshal Azure is gathering people to storm the Cultist Monastery (see 3.5. "Ardent Monastery"). She invites the characters to join her.

If Highmarshal Azure's forces were defeated by the PCs, she will retreat to recover and attack the Monastery alone.

3.5 Ardent Monastery

Sooner or later, the characters are bound to attempt entering the Monastery. When they arrive to the location, they will start from 3.5.1. "Monastery Yard".

Highmarshal Azure's Assault

If the party was quick to get here, they will find mostly Ardents and Cultists here. If they stopped to help one of the sides during 3.4. "Battle at the Gates", Highmarshal Azure will also storm the Monastery, and she will bring Wall Guards with her (if enough of them survived).

The party will meet her in 3.5.7. "Ithi and Her Sister", unless they are attacking the place together, allowing them to share most of the scenes.

Past Actions

Depending on players' actions so far, one of the sides of this conflict may be friendly towards the party. The PCs may storm the place alongside Highmarshal Azure or they may decide to help defend the place, hoping the newly-earned trust of the Ardents will help them achieve their goals.

If the characters were hostile to Cultist of Moments earlier in the story, they might be recognized, turning peaceful encounter into hostile one.

Spoiler Info

Highmarshal Azure attacking the low monastery by the eastern gates is referenced in "Oathbringer", Chapter 73: Telling Which Stories.

3.5.1 Monastery Yard

When the characters enter the Monastery, read the following:

You are surrounded by serenity, as though this place was oblivious to the chaos raging behind its walls. You see two figures in white robes approaching you:

"Hello, child!", one of them says. "What are you looking for in this place?"

Two Ardents (use Cultist's stat blocks) guard the entrance. They are not hostile, unless they sense an incoming danger. If the party decides to attack them, two more Cultists will join the fight after the first round of combat.

The PCs may attempt to talk their way in. Run this as a conversation. Cultist has a Cognitive defense of 11, a Spiritual defense of 16, and 3 focus. They live their lives devoted to the Allmighty, and recently - the spren. They will respond positively to arguments suggesting the characters want to take part in the religious rituals.

If Cultist's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

If the players ask about the Unmade artifacts, the Ardents will deny existence of such items, calling it a heresy and a blasphemy. They will cease any further conversation and will turn hostile if the characters will press the topic.

From here, the characters can enter 3.5.2. "Long Halls".

Highmarshal Azure's Assault

If Highmarshal Azure is storming the Monastery, there will be 4 Cultists and 3 Wall Guards fighting in here.

3.5.2 Long Halls

When the PCs enter the halls, read the following:

Long, dark halls connect the whole complex. The walls of cold stone are decorated only with the sparse glow of torchlight. A few ardents walk in here.

Sometimes an Ardent or Cultist of Moments can be found here, but they will ignore the characters. The halls lead to 3.5.3. "Monastery Chapel". One of the closed doors hides 3.5.4. "Lavish Feast". At the end of the corridors, there is 3.5.6. "Stairways". The PCs can also reach 3.5.5. "Locked Cells" in the farthest parts of the Monastery.

Highmarshal Azure's Assault

If Highmarshal Azure is storming the Monastery, there will be 2 Cultists and 2 Wall Guards fighting in here.

3.5.3 Monastery Chapel

On the walls of the chapel there are paintings of spren, before them a group of kneeling people is praying - ardents in white robes lead the incantations, while the common people repeat after them:

"Oh, bringers of joy, remember us!"
"Remember us!"
"Oh, dancers with flames, warm us!"
"Warm us!"
"Oh, tenders of life, tend to us!"
"Tend to us!"
"Oh, whispers of wind, whisper to us!"
"Whisper to us!"

Several Cultists (each Cultist of Moments of a different kind, no two repeating) pray in here with common people and brighteyes like. All of them ignore the PCs, but if they attack them, they will defend themselves. The Cultists will fight to the end, without any regard for the common people, who will attempt to run away.

3.5.4 Lavish Feast

The door to this location is closed. If a character wishes to enter despite that, they will need to pass DC 15 Strength or Thievery check. In that case, read the following:

You see a long table full of delights - meat, vegetables, cakes, exotic fruit - illuminated with spherelight from many chalices. More of the food lies on the floor and besides the walls. Some of it starts to rot.

A group of people in white robes feast on the delights. "You are not supposed to be here!", one of them shouts.

A Bibulous Reveler and eight Cultists (of random kinds) feast in here. They will turn hostile unless a character manages to quickly convince them to stand down - they would need to pass a Deception or Persuasion test against Masked Reveler's Spiritual Defense with disadvantage.

If a combat starts, the enemies will fight to the end.

Highmarshal Azure's Assault

If Highmarshal Azure is storming the Monastery, her forces will ignore this room, but some of Wall Guards can be called for help.

Treasure

In the chalices, there is 5d10 marks of spheres in total. Bibulous Reveler carries a key to 3.5.5. "Locked Cells".

The characters can also help themselves with the food or even bring something back home.

Path to Enlightenment

Participating in a lavish feast in the honor of Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel, may expedite an Enlightened Willshaper.

3.5.5 Locked Cells

If the characters enter this area, read the following:

This area of the Monastery seems abandoned. The halls are dark and nobody can be seen in here.

Suddenly, you hear a faint voice from one of the cells: "Please, have mercy... I am so hungry..."

Ardent Liha (she/her) is locked in one of the cells. She is imprisoned by Cult of Moments. She hasn't seen anyone since she was put in here.

Releasing Liha

A character may open the jail using key found on one of the Revelers in 3.5.4. "Lavish Feast". If they don't have it, they can attempt DC 20 Thievery check.

Talking with Liha

Liha is too weak and hungry for a proper conversation. If fed, she will gladly answer any questions:

Who are you?

I am Liha, an ardent from Devotary of Denial.

How long have you been locked in here?

Hard to say, I lost track of time... What day do have...? Anyway, they came for me a day after Pai got assigned to Queen's Retinue... Did she told them something about me? I thought we were friends...

Can you help us navigate the Monastery?

It isn't the one I've spent most of my life in, but it should be similar. I can be your guide, just please, don't leave me here!

Do you know about an Artifacts of the Unmade?

The Voidbringers are destroyed, nothing left from them. There is no such item, and if there were, you wouldn't find them in here, this is a holy place. You are wasting your time... And please, don't pursue such unholy items, they will only curse your soul... Trust in the Allmighty, He will guide your souls!

3.5.6 Stairways

When the PCs reach this place, read the following:

You see a spiral stairs cut from the stone, descending into a darkness. Several people in white robes are standing nearby. "This area is for ardents only. Return to the chapel", one of them says.

Six Cultists (each Cultist of Moments of random kind) guard the stairway. They will turn hostile unless the PCs quickly go back.

From here, the PCs can descend to 3.5.7. "Ithi and Her Sister".

Highmarshal Azure's Assault

If Highmarshal Azure is storming the Monastery, four Wall Guard will fight the Cultists. The party can help in combat or sneak downstairs.

3.5.7 Ithi and Her Sister

When the PCs reach this place, read the following:

You see two female ardents sitting in the middle of the room. Green vines pierce through their pale skins, entangling their frail bodies. One of them wears a Soulcaster on her hand.

Ithi and her sisters are Verdant Soulcaster Savants, but only one of them has the Fabrial required for Soulcasting. They will not attack any aggressors - in a case of combat, they will attempt to flee or slow down their enemies. They will use Soulcaster as a weapon only when they will be left with no other choice.

No matter the cost, they will not part with the Fabrial. They are not part of the Cult of Moments and they are not familiar with current events or political forces.

At the end of the room, the door lead to 3.5.8. "Forbidden Reliquary". Any character who bonded an Enlightened spren will feel a slight pull towards that area.

Spoiler Info

Ithi is met in "Oathbringer", Chapter 81: Ithi and Her Sister.

Highmarshal Azure's Assault

If Highmarshal Azure is storming the Monastery, she can be found in this room, attempting to persuade the Soulcaster sisters to join her and help the falling city.

3.5.8 Forbidden Reliquary

When the PCs reach this area, read the following:

The room is full of small chests, each standing on its own stone shelf and containing an ancient relic of ardents long gone. Two of the relics catch your attention - the artifacts that Sja-Anat described to you.

The party found Dustcaster and Black Scallop, securing their objective. Other items in this room have no practical use.

As the characters get hold of the fabrials from the reliquary, don't reveal all their secrets just yet. Let there be some mystery around them. Don't worry, the book will provide explanations when they are needed.

Path to Enlightenment

Seeing Dustcaster for the first time, an artifact of Chemoarish, the Dustmother, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Dust-bringer (see Appendix D: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

Path to Enlightenment

Seeing Black Scallop for the first time, an artifact of Dai-Gonarthis, the Black Fisher, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Elsecaller (see Appendix D: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

3.5.9 Aftermath

When the party secured the artifacts of the Unmade, trigger the events of 3.6. "The Everstorm" when they exit the monastery. The party will still be able to pursue other goals of this chapter, but the conditions in Kholinar will be much different.

3.6 The Everstorm

Introduce events of this section after the party completes 3.5. "Ardent Monastery".

The sky darkens as the thick, black clouds gather from the west. The wind raises, blowing with unnatural speed. Soon after, a red lightning strikes a building. More of them follows soon after.

In the midst of this, the usually quiet parshmen fell to their knees, screaming a soul-piercing wails of unimaginable anguish. Their bones break, their skin tears to shreds as dozens of spikes puncture through their bodies. Soon after, they all lie in pools of their own blood, with enough life in them to suffer agony.

The party faces two Newborn Warforms and three Newborn Nimbleforms. They are Prone, lying in blood, Stunned for two rounds and Surprised for one. Once they are back on their feet they will attack the characters or nearby NPCs.

If the party decides not to take shelter to hide from the Everstorm and hostile Singers you can run the following encounters:

3.6.1 Ungrateful Servants

If the party returns to Gran-gran's home, read the following:

The household you enter is unnaturally quiet. No shouting, no complaining, no insults or empty threats. The building sounds empty...

If the characters rushed here just after the Everstorm arrived, they will see Newborn Warform and Newborn Nimbleform standing above terrified Gran-gran, savoring their revenge and preparing for the kill. If someone enters the room, they will attack them instead.

If the characters are late, they will find Gran-gran brutally murdered by her own servants. They joined other Singers spreading mayhem in the city - the house is empty now.

3.6.2 Raging Everstorm

You can run this encounter multiple times and/or in pair with other events.

Gusts of wind grow heavier. Soon after, a series of lightning strikes from the sky, flashing red light on otherwise dark street.

Lightning bolts of Everstorm hit the area. For each character in the scene, roll as if Newborn Stormform Regal attacked them with Bolt of Lightning while having a disadvantage. If the attack misses the character, the bolt lands nearby, destroying the surrounding environment.

3.6.3 Clash With the Singers

Read the following:

In the howling wind you could not hear them, before you walked just into them: a group of Singers, still covered in their own blood after the transformation, fighting a terrified group of people. Red flashes of lightning flare every few seconds, but in between everything is black.

A group of Singers (Newborn Direform Regal or Newborn Stormform Regal, 1d4 Newborn Warforms and 1d4 Newborn Nimbleforms) fight against some humans (2d6 Cultists or 2d6 Rioters or 2d4 Wall Guards). Both groups ignore the party, but the characters may join on any side if they wish. All involved will fight to the end.

3.6.4 Massacre the Weak

Read the following:

You see a few Singers standing above a crying mother. One of them grabbed her infant and smashed it into the stone wall of a building. Another one lunged to the devastated woman soon after.

A Newborn Direform Regal and two Newborn Warforms are committing the atrocities. They did not notice the party yet, allowing them to sneak away. If they fail to do so, the singers will turn hostile towards them soon after. They will fight to the end.

3.6.5 Unfortunate Artifabrian

You can start similar encounter when a PC uses a fabrial or a non-Enlightened Radiant surgebends.

You see a group of guards fighting against two Singers with sparks of lightning dancing around their arms. One of the guards aims with her fabrial to one of them. Soon after a bright light flashes the street and the Singer falls to the ground, twitching.

Cheers don't last long - moments later a vicious, screaming spren darts from the above towards the fabrial. A majestic figure appeared shortly after. The singer rammed one of the guards with a lance and send another one flying in the air. With the fabrial secured, the figure fled away, its unnaturally long red robes flapping behind it on the wind.

Newborn Heavenly One ignores the characters as long as they are not using fabrials, but two wounded Newborn Stormform Regal (with roughly half of their Health) remain. Unless the characters flee right away, they will turn hostile towards them.

3.7 Dying Singer

When characters complete their objective for this chapter, end it with following:

You see a badly wounded Singer sitting on the ground. "I must reach the others, beyond the walls", she mumbles to herself.

The characters can help the wounded or finish her off. If they choose to be friendly, she will introduce herself as Rishai. She will invite them to the camp next to the city, where all other Singers gather, and she will ask them to help her get there.

3.7.1 Singer Camp

If the characters travel to the Singer camp, read the following:

You reach the camp that is setup in an alethi fashion. Two massive Singers stay on watch, accompanied with one sleek one standing behind.

"Stop! Who goes there?", one of them asks, raising his weapon.

Two Newborn Warforms and one Newborn Envoyform Regal named Serin stay at the gates. If the party wishes to enter the camp, they must convince them to let them through. Run this as a conversation encounter.

Serin has a Cognitive defense of 15, a Spiritual defense of 18, and 6 focus. Her goal is to grow Singer's camp in strength and she will welcome every potential ally, but she is wary of traitorous humans.

All tests done by the party have advantage if they are accompanied by a Singer. Also, if during 3.2. "Blood on the Streets" the characters stood in the defense of parshmen, one of them will step from the camp and vouch for the party, counting as one successful test.

If Serin's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 2 focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation. If the Singers fail to believe the characters, they will turn hostile at the end of the conversation.

If the party chooses violent solution, more Singers will soon join the fight. There is a full camp of them, the characters can't defeat them all and will soon need to flee back to the city.

3.8 Journeying Onward

Once you complete encounters with reborn Singers, advance characters to level 4 and proceed to Chapter 4 - Enemy Unmade to Dust.

Chapter 4 - Enemy Unmade to Dust

4.0 Running This Chapter

Kholinar is under siege by Singer forces. The characters will play their part and use an ancient Unmade fabrial to tip the balance for their favor. But before that, they must plan their escape!

Depending on characters' allegiance they will be able to help either Singer or the Kholinar forces. Either a Thunderclast or a gate barricade can be annihilated with the Dustcaster and it is up to the PCs to choose.

4.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters start this chapter at level 4. Advance them to level 5 at the end of the chapter.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Careful planning before the mission
- Heroic deeds to protect their allies
- Talking with Sja-Anat can expedite an Enlightened Lightweaver
- Using ancient artifacts of the Unmade can expedite an Enlightened Dustbringer

4.0.2 Forging Alliances

The following actions can help the characters to become allies with Kholinar factions:

- Eliminate a Thunderclast to earn Wall Guards' gratitude.
- Breach the city walls to prove your loyalty to the Singer forces
- Characters' attempts to get invited to the Cult of Moments may bring them closer to that faction

4.0.3 Weather Conditions

The Weeping is over. The rain stopped and a clear sky can finally be seen through the clouds. It is possible for a highstorm to appear, though the book does not include them in the nearest chapters. Add them, if you believe they will enrich your story or enable the Radiants.

4.1 Mission Briefing

4.1.1 The Objective

Start this chapter by reading the following:

As you are resting after a difficult day, you see a movement in the only mirror in the room. Looking at it you see a familiar reflection of a black woman with a big eyes, glowing white.

If the characters have no access to any of the mirrors (eg. they are in the Singer camp), instead read the following:

Suddenly, you see your shadow whirl, twist, and grow in a wrong direction - towards the light. Soon, it takes a familiar shape of a woman, with two eyes glowing brightly.

Regardless of a way Sja-Anat appears, continue with the following:

Sja-Anat smiles and addresses you: "So you survived. That is well, but not unexpected. But your task is yet completed. The city is under siege and now it's your time to make a change that will matter. Take the fabrial from the monastery, the one looking like a bracelet. You will need it sooner than you think."

Allow the characters to have a conversation with the Unmade. Use this opportunity to convey the task for the PCs: sneak up and use Dustcaster to annihilate enemy's biggest asset (the Thunderclast or a barricaded gate).

What is this fabrial?

It is Dustcaster, an ancient gift from Chemoarish, the Dustmother.

And the other one?

They call it Black Scallop, and it came from Dai-Gonarthis, the Black Fisher, but you shall not need it now. Later, weeks later, yes.

What does the fabrial do?

It can be used to turn your foes to dust, but only once. Do not use it before the time is right.

How do we use it?

Adorn your arm with it, and press your palm to your foe. The fabrial will do the rest, it yearns to be awoken again. But you must keep it under control, or it will run free and wild.

What are the risks of using it?

There are none, if your will reigns over its desire of destruction. If you fail, it may unmake you as well.

What should we destroy?

Odium forces just awaken a Thunderclast, a giant old as the war, strong enough to break the walls of the city. But then, the gates are being barricaded and the walls are defended by Highmarshal Azure who is stronger than you can imagine. If both sides clash in battle, the river of blood will be deep, and the slain will be many. You must prevent it, tip the scales of the battle, unmake the biggest thread.

4.1.2 Escape Route

Once the objective is clear for the PCs, you can add the following:

"Once the deed is done, your enemies will mark you for death and hunt you down", Sja-Anat continues. "You will need to flee the city. You must enter the Circle of Memories on the Monastery Dais. My son will help you disappear from the enemy eyes. You will need to travel south, until you reach Kharbranth. Use Black Scallop there, and King Taravangian will offer you help and shelter.

"However, you must first determine how will you reach the Circle of Memories here in Kholinar, as it is now in the hands of the ardents and I can sense Odium influence touching them."

Unknown to the PCs, Sja-Anat suggests their escape route through a corrupted Oathgate that will transport them to Shadesmar. Previously collected Black Scallop will help them get back to the Physical Realm from there.

When you present the escape route to the PCs, don't reveal all the secrets just yet. People who read the books may connect the dots, but for the others there might still be some surprises left. Don't mention Oathgates, Shadesmar and the purpose of Black Scallop at this stage.

However, as the Oathgate is now occupied by Cult of Moments, the characters will need to hatch a plan how to get there. There are several options for that:

Brute force.

For sure there will be guards, but the PCs can choose to just kill anyone blocking their path.

Use connections.

If the party helped enough Cultists so far, they might be friendly enough to just let them in.

Join the cult.

If the characters prove they are worthy, they might be invited to join the cult. In that case, nobody will try to stop them on their way to the Circle of Memories.

If the players have difficulty to come up with any idea how to enter the Monastery Dais, you can suggest them a single solution from the above list after passing a DC 15 Deduction check. Each subsequent suggestion raises difficulty of such test by 5.

Note: Details concerning the escape solutions are described in 5.1. "Entering the Revelry". Despite being located in the future chapter, the PCs should make preparations before they start 4.2. "Sneaking at Night".

Path to Enlightenment

Meeting or talking to Sja-Anat, the Taker of Secrets, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Lightweaver (see Appendix D: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

Path to Enlightenment

Wearing Dustcaster, an artifact of Chemoarish, the Dustmother, for the first time can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Dust-bringer (see Appendix D: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

4.1.3 Radiant Required

To activate the Oathgate in the Circle of Memories, the characters will need a living Shardblade summoned by a Radiant Knight. If at this point the party does not include a Radiant, Sja-Anat will urge the PCs to bond one of her children.

4.2 Sneaking at Night

Before they can perform Dustcasting, the characters must sneak close enough to their target. You can run it as an endeavor.

Sneaking to the Singer Camp

If the characters want to annihilate the Thunderclast, they will need to enter the Singer Camp. It is guarded by Newborn Warforms, and the endeavor tests will be done against their Defenses.

Sneaking to Kholinar Gates

If the characters wish to break the barricade at the gates, they will need to get close enough the wall, guarded by Wall Guards. The endeavor tests will involve their Defenses.

4.2.1 Possible Approaches

The characters are free to suggest their ideas how would they approach the endeavor. Potential proposals may include:

Being close to target.

If the party is already nearby their target (eg. they spent the night in the Singer Camp and they want to unmake the Thunderclast), immediately award them with 2 successes to their endeavor progress.

Hiding in the cover of the night.

A character can make a Stealth test against the guards' Perception test to attempt approaching without being spotted.

Melding with the surrounding.

A character can attempt a Survival test against the guards' Perception test if they want to use a camouflage.

Pretend to belong.

A character may deceive guards by making a Deception test against their Insight.

Threaten the guards.

A Intimidation test against guard's Discipline test may be attempted if a character wants to scare them away.

Work out guards' patrol patterns.

A character may attempt a DC 15 Deduction check to learn the paths and time the guards take during their patrols.

4.2.2 Resolving the Endeavor

The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 6 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

Even if the party gathers failures, they will be able to reach their target. The only question is - will they be seen?

Success!

If the party completes the endeavor, they can approach their target without being noticed by anyone.

1 Failure

A guard notices something. They are now on high alert and their future Perception tests are made with an advantage.

2 Failures

The guard now sees you. "Stop! Who goes there?", he shouts at you.

3 Failures

It's over, they now know you are not supposed to be here. The guards raise an alarm. The party will be attacked during 4.3. "Dustcasting".

4.3 Dustcasting

Once the party reaches their dustcasting target, read the following to the player doing the dustcasting:

You place your palm with the Dustcaster to the cold stone. Suddenly you have a feeling that everything else is gone - there is only you and the stone and the fabrial whispering eagerly: "Make... it... gone...!"

A character using Dustcaster must do a DC 10 Division check or DC 20 Discipline check three times. After the 3rd test, the dustcasting is complete and their objective and Dustcaster itself are annihilated. However, based on the number of failures, additional effects take place:

1+ Failures

The PC loses the tips of their fingers on the dustcasting hand. They take 1d6 Spirit damage.

2+ Failures

Whole dustcasting palm is gone. The PC takes additional 1d8 Spirit damage.

3 Failures

Entire arm of the PC is turned to dust. Its owner takes additional 1d10 Spirit damage.

Dropping to 0 Health

If the dustcasting failures reduce a character to 0 Health, that character's entire body turns to dust and the PC is gone. That doesn't stop the dustcasting.

Unable to Concentrate

If the dustcasting character takes damage (eg after guard's attack, see 4.3.1. "Guards! Guards!"), their next test for the dustcasting will gain disadvantage.

Please note, "Dustcasting" is not an official term from the "Stormlight Archive" lore. I based it on "soulcasting" term and modified it to indicate Chemoarish, the Dustmother's influence. I feel it fits, but it's not official.

Path to Enlightenment

Using Dustcaster, an artifact of Chemoarish, the Dustmother, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Dustbringer (see Appendix D: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

4.3.1 Guards! Guards!

If the party failed to sneak to their target (see 4.2. "Sneaking at Night"), they will be attacked by the guards. The PC performing the dustcasting cannot participate in the battle in any way and they must be defended by other characters.

During the fight, each dustcasting test roll takes a turn to complete. For three rolls, the fight will last for three turns. Once the dustcasting is complete, the party can safely flee the battle.

Singer Guards

If the dustcasting takes place in the Singer Camp, the characters are attacked by Newborn Direform Regal and four Newborn Nimbleforms. At beginning of each round, additional Newborn Warform joins the fight.

Wall Guard

If the dustcasting takes place at the Kholinar walls, the characters will be attacked by six Wall Guards. At beginning of each round, additional two Wall Guards will join the fight.

4.3.2 Aftermath

Once the dustcasting is completed (even if a character performing it dies in a process), read the following:

In an instant the great stony surface disappears in a puff of smoke. Huge gray cloud suddenly erupts many feet in all directions. You are sure it must be visible from far, far away.

But there is no time to ponder - you must flee! Now!

The dustcasting is complete, but every guard is now aware of the PCs' presence. They must run. Proceed to 4.4. "Running Away".

4.4 Running Away

The characters must flee the guards alerted by their dustcasting. You can run it as a slightly modified pursuit endeavor:

The party must run from Singer Camp to the city walls (assuming they were starting from there), then they must reach the Monastery. During all that time they will be chased by the guards.

During the pursuit scene, keep track of two Current Distances - one between the party and the Singer Camp and the second between them and the guards. The endeavor ends, when the party reaches Escape Distance of 9 from the Singer Camp (or 6 from the Gates, see below). When the Distance between them and the guards is reduced to 0, the chase does not end, but the guards can make a free attack against them.

Location	Distance to the next
Singer Camp	3
City Gates	1
Slumps	3
Rich Neighborhood	2
Monastery	(target reached)

Starting Distance

Cloud of dust risen after the dustcasting is enough for the characters to allow them start with a distance of 1. If they succeeded to sneak without alerting the guards before that, add 1 to that distance (Starting Distance of 2) as the guards need more time to get there.

Singer Guards

If the party decided to dustcast a Thunderclast, they will start from the Singer Camp (Escape Distance 9 to the Monastery) and they will be chased by Newborn Heavenly Ones. They can be deadly in the open space, but once the characters reach the city it might be easier for them to hide in narrow alleyways - allow for some advantages against the guards in there (or disadvantages for their rolls).

Wall Guard

If the party decided to remove gate barricade, they will need to outrun Wall Guard lead by Highmarshal Azure. Highmarshal Azure will bolster her men, but she will not attack the PCs unless they strike her first. Escape Distance from the gates is shorter - only 6, but the guards know the city well.

4.4.1 No Man's Land

The area between the Singer Camp and the Kholinar (total Distance of 3) is a vast, empty area. The characters can find a few laits here to hide in (Stealth), they can also sprint the distance (Athletics). However, watch out for a rockbuds growing here and there as well as for the rubble after the recent Everstorm.

4.4.2 At the Gates

If the characters flee from the Singer Camp, they will need to enter the city through the gates. If they made an alliance with the Wall Guards, they will let them pass without any problems.

However, if the characters fought them before, they might not be eager to let them through the gates. That may introduce another challenge during the pursuit. They might even join the chase themselves.

From there it is not that far (total Distance of 1) to the slumps.

4.4.3 An Odd Fellow

When the party reaches the gate barracks, you can optionally red the following:

You can see tall and thin figure in a black coat, sitting at the chull cart full of a metal sheets.

"...on the walls, yes. And then you can soulcast inside that room, they won't be able to sense it", you can hear him explaining to Highmarshal Azure.

When the characters run past him, you can add the following:

"Hey, don't rush like that!", he shouts at you.
"It's pointless. No matter how fast you run, you cannot outrun your stench!"

On the cart there is Hoid. If the characters stop to talk with him, he might even help them a little - but his help comes at a price of a few juicy insults.

Perhaps it's not the best moment for such a scene, but it was the only moment that I know for sure the party is at the gates. If in your game the characters reach this area on another occasion after 3.5. "Ardent Monastery", you can run this scene then.

Hoid has little impact on this story. However, it is mentioned in the "Oathbringer" that he was in the city during those events, so if you wish to roleplay him, introduce his cameo or just insult the characters - there is a perfect opportunity to do so.

Spoiler Info

Hoid helping Highmarshal Azure to prepare a room for soulcasting is referenced in "Oathbringer", Chapter 81: Ithi and Her Sister.

4.4.4 The Slumps

The slumps are a big part of the city (total Distance of 3) on the path to the palace. Though not the whole area is occupied by literal slumps and there are some decent streets in there, overall they all share some qualities that differentiate them from the nobles' mansions from the next area:

The alleys here are narrow, and it's easy to get lost in this labyrinth. The characters must navigate the tangled streets (Deduction), but it is also easier to hide in here (Stealth). They might also find a few folks who will eagerly help them... for the right price!

4.4.5 Rich Neighborhood

Closer to the palace (total Distance of 2) the nobles have their houses. This area is nice and tidy, and the lighteye lords often deploy their own guards. It is easier to sprint than in the slumps (Athletics), and perhaps the guards will be nice enough to help (Persuasion)... unless they decide to join the chase themselves.

4.4.6 Monastery Gates

The PCs made it! The gates are here! The Fused know better than to break into the area controlled by Ashertmarn, and Highmarshal Azure does not seek fight with Cult of Moments. The chase is over!

4.5 Journeying Onward

After the characters successfully escape into Kholinar, advance them to level 5 and proceed to Chapter 5 - Revel of Fools.

Chapter 5 - Revel of Fools

5.0 Running This Chapter

The PCs reached the gates of the Monastery controlled by Cult of Moments. To reach the Circle of Memories, they will need to enter the ongoing Revel conducted by Ashertmarn.

Festivities influenced by Heart of the Revel are the most indecent and scandalous events of indulgence in the entire "Stormlight Archive" series or perhaps even in the whole grand Cosmere. In this book I will not dare to go much further than family-friendly descriptions of tattered sleeves on a safehand, but it is possible go much further and darker than that.
IMPORTANT: If you do, please make sure beforehand that you do not exceed the boundaries of a comfortable roleplay for everyone on the table! (see 0.6.3. "Players' Expectations")

IMPORTANT: If you find some of the encounters here too intense for your group, please modify them or straight up remove them from this chapter.

5.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters start this chapter at level 5. Advance them to level 6 at the end of the chapter.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Solution to enter through the Revel gates.
- Joining or resisting the Revel.
- Helping or eliminating the revelers.
- The proximity of Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel may expedite an Enlightened Willshaper.
- Seeing Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother in the Spiritual Realm vision may expedite an Enlightened Edgedancer.
- Seeing Ba-Ado-Mishram in the Spiritual Realm vision may expedite an Enlightened Stoneward.

5.0.2 Forging Alliances

The following actions can help the characters to become allies with Kholinar factions:

- Joining Cult of Moments is a sure way to make an alliance with them.
- Joining forces with Crime Lords can lead to an alliance with them.

5.1 Gates to the Revel

When characters reach the gates to the Monastery, read the following:

You can see the guards at the Monastery gates. Two of them, with their spren costumes, are standing at both sides. Third one, wearing flat white mask with nothing but an eye holes, approaches you.
"Who are you?", she asks. "What are you looking for?"

Cult of Moments guards are defending the gates - one Masked Reveler and a number of Cultists equal to the number of PCs (each Cultist of Moments of a random kind). There are only two Cultists standing in front of the gate - the rest is resting nearby and will join the fight after one round.

Entering the Revelry

Before 4.2. "Sneaking at Night", the characters should plan how will they enter the Monastery once they complete the dustcasting. There are several approaches they may attempt, each with its own risks and challenges.

Once the party manages to enter the Monastery using one of the below methods, proceed to 5.2. "Revelry".

5.1.1 Allies of the Cult

If the characters managed to ally the Cult of Moments, they will be allowed inside without any problems.

To become allies, the characters must side with them during Chapter 3 - Enemy Reborn, especially during 3.5. "Ardent Monastery". On top of that, they couldn't have killed anyone from the cult.

Use your own judgment if the party was close to reach those goals. If you believe the party is close, but still not there yet, you can give them some bonuses during 5.1.2. "Joining Cult of Moments".

5.1.2 Joining Cult of Moments

If the characters wish to join the cult, they would need to get their attention by doing something grand and daring. You can run it as an endeavor.

Each day, allow one of the characters to attempt doing something that will attract cult's attention - probably something wasteful or extravagant. Use your judgment to adjust tested skill and the test's DC, then ask the player for the skill test to check if they succeeded.

If they succeed the corresponding test, note their total number of successes and ask them for a d20 roll. If the result of that roll increased by the total number of successes equals 21 or more, Cult of Moments notices their work and invites them in.

If they fail the test, nothing happens, except the day is lost. There is no threshold for a number of failures to end the endeavor. However, each passing they require the PCs to eat, and the food is scarce in the city.

The characters may stop their attempts at any time.

Modified formula of running this endeavor (DC 21 on d20 + number of successes) is introduced to represent uncertainty of the cult's reaction. If my math is correct, the PCs have following chances of completing the endeavor:

14% after 2nd success
27% after 3rd
41% after 4th
56% after 5th
69% after 6th
80% after 7th

If you don't like this idea, feel free to use constant number of successes required, eg. 6.

Criminal's Curiosity

After the 3rd success of the endeavor, the characters are approached by some shady individuals. They are sent by one of Kholinar's crime lords. They offer the characters help getting them behind the monastery walls for a right price.

The characters may choose to ally with them. That will get them easier time in 5.1.4. "Sneak Behind Their Backs" endeavor, but the paid cost will not allow them to join the cult.

Cult's Attention

When the characters succeed the endeavor, they will get a note from the cult. In it, there will be an invitation to the revelry and the price for it. The price must relate to the way the characters got their attention (eg. they must pay food if they used food as a means of the endeavor).

By pure coincidence, the Crime Lords and the Cult of Moments demand the same price. The PCs must choose who will they ally in this endeavor.

Spoiler Info

Shallan attempting to join the cult revelry is described in "Oathbringer": Chapter 72. Rockfall and Chapter 74. Swiftspren.

5.1.3 Talking Their Way In

The characters may attempt their smooth-talking skills to convince the guards (see 5.1. "Gates to the Revel") to let them in. You can run this as a conversation. During the conversation, only Masked Reveler will talk, other guards will remain silent.

Masked Reveler has a Cognitive defense of 14, a Spiritual defense of 15, and 3 focus. They are devoted to the cult and they want it to spread, but they are careful not to allow anyone dangerous inside.

If Masked Reveler's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 2 focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

If the conversation doesn't go as planned and the characters fail to leave the area, the guards will attack them. Proceed to 5.1.5. "Brute Force".

5.1.4 Sneak Behind Their Backs

If the characters prefer stealthy approach, they can decide to enter quietly. You can run this as an endeavor. However, if they are detected, proceed immediately to 5.1.5. "Brute Force".

If the characters decided to join forces with Crime Lords, they will help them in this endeavor - all PC's tests are made with an advantage.

Potential approaches may include:

Sneak next to the guards.

A PC may attempt a Stealth test against Masked Reveler's Perception test to act without being spotted.

Climb the walls.

Any PC attempting the climb must pass DC 15 Athletics check. Any character failing the test falls and takes amount of damage equal to the difference between their test's result and the DC.

Search for hidden passage.

With a DC 14 Perception check a PC may find a hidden gate somewhere in the wall.

Open locked doors.

If there are some doors that need opening, a DC 18 Thievery check may help with that.

Radiant powers.

Fly above the wall, walk through it or just appear behind it - the Radiants may find easier solutions than tedious climbing.

Resolving the Endeavor

The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 7 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

If the characters succeed, they can enter the Revelry. Proceed to 5.2.2. "Monastery Village".

If the endeavor fails, the party is attacked - proceed to 5.1.5. "Brute Force".

5.1.5 Brute Force

The characters may decide to deal with the guards in a quick and hostile way. The cultists will fight to the end.

If the characters are pushed into that solution due to their failures in other attempts (eg. 5.1.4. "Sneak Behind Their Backs") double the number of the guards as a consequence.

5.2 Revelry

The characters are entering the Revelry of Cult of Moments. If they entered through the gates, the party will start at 5.2.1. "Steps to Enlightenment".

Loosing Oneself in the Indulgence

Each time a character freely chooses to participate in revelry activities (by eg. eating food, enjoying drinks, joining the dance, etc), they slowly loose their resolve as they are more and more influenced by Ashertmarn.

Each time that happens, they loose 1 Focus and Maximum Focus and they cannot regain it as long as they are in the area influenced by Heart of the Revel.

Spoiler Info

Shallan entering the revel is described in "Oathbringer", Chapter 78. The Revel.

5.2.1 Steps to Enlightenment

When the PCs approach the stairs, read the following:

Just behind the gates, there are long stairs leading to the Monastery Dais. Up above, at the top of them, you can see a red glow of an ongoing revelry.

Each PC climbing the stairs must do DC 10 Athletics check. On a failure, the character is Exhausted [-1] until the next short rest.

After reaching the top of the stairs, the characters enter 5.2.2. "Monastery Village".

5.2.2 Monastery Village

Once the party reaches this location, read the following:

In here, the Monastery buildings are smaller, looking like a village inside the city. On your right you can see a blazing bonfire. On your left the Sunwalk leads to the Kholinar Palace.

From here, the characters could go to 5.2.3. "The Sunwalk", though there is little to do there. Another path leads to 5.2.4. "The Bonfire".

If the party was invited by the Cult of Moments to join them, there will be a Cultist waiting for them. In that case, read the following:

In the middle of a path between the buildings you can see a man in a dirty, greased ardent robes.
"Welcome! I am your guide tonight!", he says.
"You can call me... Kharat I believe...? It doesn't matter, really..."

Kharat will accompany the party. He will show them the revelry, but he won't allow them to enter 5.2.8. "Inner Ring" - the party will need to get rid of him before reaching the Circle of Memories, though it shouldn't be a very hard task for them.

5.2.3 The Sunwalk

When characters enter the Sunwalk, read the following:

You step on the Sunwalk, a long stone walkway leading to the Kholinar Palace. From here you can see the majestic royal residence, but there is nothing for you to find there. Your path leads to the center of the Revelry.

There is nothing to do here, the characters should go back. If they persist on walking the Sunwalk, they will soon meet False Radiants guarding the palace. They will be friendly for anyone approaching from the Revelry, but they will deny them entrance.

There is nothing important in here to do, this location is added only to align with the official lore.

5.2.4 The Bonfire

When characters reach this place, read the following:

In the center of the revelry, huge bonfire blazes away the darkness of the night. A few flamespren - jagged and blue - dance in its flames. Around it, the revelers in rich clothing dance to the shrieking sounds of flutes playing.

A bit further, there is a ring of tables full with food and wine. A women in purple havah, with her safehand sleeve torn and tattered, walks between them, enjoying the feast.

This is the central part of the Outer Ring revelry. There is delicious food, expensive wine, music, dance and laughter.

From here the PCs can quickly reach 5.2.5. "Herald's Statues". To reach the Circle of Memories, they will need to walk next to 5.2.6. "Meditation Rooms".

Path to Enlightenment

Being present on the revelry influenced by Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Will-shaper.

Food Tables

The tables around the bonfire are laid with an abundance of food. A hungry PC can feast on it to remove any related penalties.

Between the tables walks Bibulous Reveler. A bit further there are five Cultists. They are indulging in food and wine. Bibulous Reveler will invite characters to join, turning hostile if refused. Cultists will join her, but other revelers will be oblivious to the fight.

Dancing Floor

Some of the revelers are dancing around the bonfire, including two Wealthy Revelers, two Musical Revelers and three Cultists. A character can join the dance to attempt stealing riches or breath Stormlight from them.

The dancers will ignore the party, unless a character enters their midst without proper dance, at which point they will turn hostile. Wealthy Reveler will also attack anyone he suspects of stealing his glowing rings (either by taking the rings or breathing their Investiture).

5.2.5 Herald's Statues

When characters approach the statues, read the following:

You see a reveler facing a statue of Jezerezeh, standing one foot from a splattered stone surface. With a bottle risen high, he drinks straight from it. Next to him, another one lies on the floor, paying no heed to the puddle soaking his clothes.

The party finds two Bibulous Revelers in here (one of them lies Prone). They will ignore the PCs, but they will turn hostile when attacked, fighting to the end.

There is nothing beyond this place - only the edge of the platform and a long way down.

5.2.6 Meditation Rooms

When party enters this location, read the following:

You step into relatively quiet rooms. Once, ardents used to meditate in here. Now it is occupied by revelers seeking a bit of privacy. Most of the doors are closed; a few of them - invitingly opened.

The party can rest shortly in here. However, they can see that long rest is not safe in here. If they decide for one regardless, after roughly an hour (once the short rest is completed) three Sadistic Revelers will approach them from the nearby rooms. They will invite the PCs to share the ecstasy of the revel and will turn hostile if the PCs refuse.

If a character investigates the nearby rooms, they will see one of them is unexpectedly quiet. Behind a locked doors (DC 15 Thievery check to open, DC 20 Athletics check to break), they will find 5.2.7. "Imprisoned Kishi".

Path from this location leads straight to 5.2.8. "Inner Ring".

5.2.7 Imprisoned Kishi

If the characters investigate this location, read the following:

You see a dark room, with almost no sounds of the revelry coming from the outside. In the middle there is a young woman sitting on the cold stony floor.

The party can talk with the NPC. She will be thankful for freeing her and will join the party, though she will not be very helpful. If the characters decide to talk with the girl, she will share the following information:

Who are you?

They named me Kishi, I believe...? I'm not sure... I don't remember?

What is your real name?

My real name...? I don't think I have one, I don't remember...

What are you doing here?

The heart... I was hearing its beating... Calling me, inviting me in... I was curious. I joined them, but they locked me up.

Why were you locked?

I told them nobody will tell me what to do... I am my own master, I will not follow orders from a spren. They did not like that.

Kishi is an inspiring Enlightened Dust-bringer, though she did not develop any significant powers yet. She will keep away from danger, but if everything else fails, you can use her to activate the Oathgate. The main reason for her to be in this part of the story is to have a backup solution if the party loses all of their Radiant Knights before reaching the Circle of Memories.

Kishi has no ties to this story. You can insert any NPC that would be significant for the players. Perhaps Chanri survived? Or maybe someone from a PC's backstory can be found in here?

5.2.8 Inner Ring

When the PCs enter the Inner Ring, read the following:

In the unnatural darkness, you can see a people crawling on the floor. Once lighteyes, now filthy, in tattered rags and madness in their eyes. All of them are giggling or muttering, enslaved by their twisted emotions.

Everywhere around lie heaps of spoiled food, rotspren crawling all around them. One of the revelers grabs a handful of it and pushes it into her mouth, smiling at you with her bleeding mouth.

The scenery is unnaturally unnerving. Each character must pass a DC 20 Discipline check or lose 1 Focus. PCs who bonded an Enlightened spren gain an advantage on this roll. Each time a character chooses to interact with any of the Revelers, they must repeat the Discipline test.

Crawling on the floor there are two Bibulous Revelers, one Wealthy Reveler, one Musical Reveler and five Cultists. They are ignoring the PCs. If attacked, they will turn hostile for one turn, before they return to giggling and crawling.

From here there is a short path to 5.2.9. "Circle of Memories".

5.2.9 Circle of Memories

When the characters reach the center of the platform, read the following:

You approach the Circle of Memories, the very place Sja-Anat instructed you to find. However, your path is blocked - a huge black mass of flesh overgrows the central building. It beats with a slow and deep rhythm, like a giant heart.

"Give in!
Join the revel!"

The party reached the Circle of Memories, but it is blocked by Heart of the Revel. Proceed to 5.3. "Heart of the Revel".

5.3 Heart of the Revel

When the PCs face Heart of the Revel, read the following:

Thundering, irregular rhythm echoes in your skull. So loud... entire city must hear it, entire Alethkar!

And this alluring voice... "Give up your pain! Give up your loss! Embrace the end, and relish in it!"

The party stands against Heart of the Revel. The foe it is invulnerable to most weapons, but the characters must defeat it to get inside the building. Run this encounter as a conversation.

Heart of the Revel has a Cognitive defense of 18, a Spiritual defense of 22, and 9 focus. It recognizes and respects essence of Odium - it might be more responsive to actions of characters influenced by other Unmade.

It is more a force of nature than a intelligent opponent - it is unable to be persuaded and it won't bargain, but if the characters present will strong enough, it might be weakened enough to unblock the path.

If Heart of the Revel's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

Despite being run as a conversation, this is final boss fight of the act I. Try to make it as epic as possible, even if there is little sword swinging.

Path to Enlightenment

Seeing Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Willshaper (see Appendix D: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

Little Eloquence

Heart of the Revel does not possess human level of intelligence. It is more a force of nature made manifest, a huge and terrifying beast of a spren, but still - only a beast.

It will not ask or answer questions, it will not present well-formed arguments, nor will it show any nuance or finesse in this conversation. Instead, it's voice will carry simple thoughts and concepts:

Give in!
Join us!
Embrace the end!
Feast! Drink! Dance!
Revel! Indulge! Relish!
Give me your pain! Your longing!

Battlefield Effects

The following items can be found nearby. A character may interact with any of them if they so wish.

Rotten Food.

Heaps of food, once delicious, now spoiled and infested with rotspren.

Shards of Glass.

Wine Glasses lie shattered on the floor. It can painfully hurt, but is not dangerous.

Ruined Art.

Paintings, sculptures and other works of art lie under the rotten food. All of them are ruined and worthless.

Opportunities and Complications

You can use following table as an inspiration for ideas for the Plot Die rolls:

Result	Example
--------	---------

In the heaps of rotten food you find a sphere infused with Stormlight. Regain 1 Investure.

One of the Inner Ring revelers joins the fight for the next round.

Out of Focus

If during the conversation with Heart of the Revel a character has no more Focus to spend when they're being influenced by the Unmade, they are consumed by the overwhelming desire to indulge and they lose themselves in the revel, becoming Unconscious.

Depending on the difficulty level your group wants to play on, this may either affect them until the end of the scene, or it can be equivalent of mental death of the character. Please talk with your players beforehand how hard-core should the game be (see 0.6.3. "Players' Expectations").

Hour of Need

If the battle goes poorly, consider unexpected reinforcements helping the party in the crucial moment.

If freed, allow Kishi to step in with heroic determination, aiding a PC and granting them an advantage on their next test.

If Kishi is unable to join, consider similar help from Sja-Anat herself, appearing as a PC's shadow pointing towards the source of light.

Conversation's End

If Heart of the Revel is out of focus, it will retreat inside the stony platform, allowing the characters to enter the Circle of Memories. Proceed to 5.3.2. "The Oathgate".

If all characters loose themselves in the revel, the scene ends. They can wake up the following morning - proceed to 5.3.1. "The Morning After".

If your players are here to accept consequences of their failures and would find it insulting to Deus-Ex-Machina them back to life, you can also consider this TPK an epic end to the adventure.

5.3.1 The Morning After

If the party lost their conversation with Ashertmarn, read the following:

You wake up the following morning... Or was it an entire eternity...? Your heads are pounding, your skulls feel like a wine glasses shattered to a myriad tiny shards. Your clothes are torn to pieces and most of your possessions are gone.

"I did expect better from my children", you hear the voice of Sja-Anat forming out of your shadow. "Nevertheless, the spren of Odium was a formidable foe. It wasn't easy to bring your mind back..."

Sja-Anat brings the PCs back to consciousness. They are Exhausted [-2] and stripped of most of their possessions. Luckily, Black Scallop can be found nearby - the characters can continue to 5.3.2. "The Oathgate".

5.3.2 The Oathgate

When the characters enter the Circle of Memories, read the following:

You enter a round building. Light from the spheres illuminates mosaics that decorate the walls. On the other side of the building you can see a metal device, looking like a keyhole.

"We made it!", your spren says. "The Gate, it's here! Summon me, I can open it!"

Any Radiant can summon their spren as a Shardblade to activate the Oathgate. When they do, all characters standing in the room are transported away from the Physical Realm - proceed to 5.4. "Hateful Vision".

If your player's Radiant did not develop a talent to summon their Shardblade yet, please don't wait for that. Allow them for one-time Shardblade summon not to hinder the flow of the story.

Any Radiant can activate the Oathgate - Enlightened or not - but it must be a Radiant. If the party has lost their Radiant in the recent events, consider a helping hand from Kishi or allow a PC for a last-minute bonding. Enlightened Lightspren should lurk nearby, attracted by the revel.

5.4 Hateful Vision

When any Radiant activates the Oathgate, read the following:

In a flash of blinding light you are transported to a different place, different time, different self...

You wear a body of a Singer, standing in a ranks of a Singer army. The commander - a femalen with a proud and regal face streaming shadowy smoke behind her - approaches you and lays her carapaced hand on your shoulder.

"I am proud of you, my children, all of you!", she says. "But the fighting is not done, and will never be done while the children of Honor live", she adds, pointing upwards. Human figures are flying there, leaving streams of pale blue light behind them.

Allow PCs for some quick interactions with other characters in the vision. After a few moments, proceed to 5.4.1. "Midnight Reinforcements".

If your party prefers combat encounters more and you believe they might feel unsatisfied with the conversation as a final boss fight, you can expand the vision to include a proper battle. However, to keep the chapter pacing, I decided not to do that.

Path to Enlightenment

Seeing Ba-Ado-Mishram can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Stoneward (see Appendix D: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

5.4.1 Midnight Reinforcements

After a moment, continue the vision with the following:

"Your gods may have abandoned you...", Ba-Ado-Mishram continues. "But I will never! I am standing with you, and so are our allies!"

You look around and you see them: troops black as a tar, glistening like oil, moving through your ranks with a nightmarish grace. One turn to you and smiles with a terrifying sneer, before squeezing its body to move forward.

Again, you can give the PCs a few moments to interact with the scene. Once you are ready to end the vision, proceed to 5.4.2. "Flash of Hatred".

Ba-Ado-Mishram and Re-Shephir appearing in the visions have two purposes. For one, they foreshadow the future chapters. But more important is a possibility to expedite Enlightened Stonewards and Enlightened Edgedancers - the Unmade related to their Orders appear much later in the story, and it would feel bad and unbalanced to keep that bonus away from the players for most of the game.

Path to Enlightenment

Seeing the children of Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Edgedancer (see Appendix D: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

5.4.2 Flash of Hatred

As a final part of the vision, read the following:

Suddenly, Ba-Ado-Mishram's face changes: her pride and determination vanished, replaced by tormented visage of spite and hatred.

"I will destroy you!", she screams at you. "I will skin you alive! I will break every bone in your body, and your cries will be a music for my ears!"

The vision starts to unravel into misty streams, everything turning pale, but you still hear her threats for some more time: "I will pull every teeth and nail! I will boil your tortured body! I will..."

With the vision ending, proceed to 5.4.3. "Shadesmar" before completing the chapter.

Spoiler Info

Ba-Ado-Mishram appearing in Spiritual Realm visions is described in multiple chapters in "Wind And Truth". Her similar changes of personality are shown in Chapter 76. Concessions.

5.4.3 Shadesmar

When the vision ends, read the following:

You are thrown out of the vision into the realm of darkness. You land on a stony platform under a black sky. When you stand up, you see that the platform is just a small island on the endless sea of small glass beads.

The characters find themselves in the Cognitive Realm - the Shadesmar. Take a moment to describe their spren in here, then proceed to the next chapter.

5.5 Journeying Onward

Once the characters are transported to Shadesmar, advance them to level 6 and proceed to the next chapter.

Chapter 6 - TODO - Shadesmar

6.0 Running This Chapter

The characters must travel through the Shadesmar to Kharbranth.

6.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters start this chapter at level 6. Advance them twice in this chapter. When they use Black Scallop to exit Shadesmar into Kharbranth, they should reach level 8.

6.1 Journeying Onward

After the party uses Black Scallop to exit from Shadesmar and enter Kharbranth, move to the next chapter.

7.0 Running This Chapter

The characters reached Kharbranth. They will need to solve a mystery lurking in the hospital. When they reach King Taravangian, they will need to convince him to let them travel together to Urithiru.

7.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters start this chapter at level 8. Advance them twice in this chapter: once after they complete the hospital arc and once after they convince King Taravangian to take them to Urithiru.

7.1 Journeying Onward

Once the characters get their passage to Urithiru, proceed to the next chapter.

8.0 Running This Chapter

The characters travel to Vedenar, to use Oathgate there and get to Urithiru. They arrive there in a middle of a serial murder crisis. They need to support investigation efforts of Shallan to gain trust of the Urithiru Radiants.

8.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters start this chapter at level 10. Advance them twice in this chapter: once after finding the source of mysterious murders and once after they resolve a threat of an Unmade lurking in the city.

8.1 Journeying Onward

After characters defeat Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother or help her escape, proceed to the next chapter.

9.0 Running This Chapter

After they proved themselves to Dalinar, the characters can join a mission he and other Radiants are planning. They want to fly to Kholinar to scout the city and rescue King Elhokar's family. However, Sja-Anat has another mission for the party - Queen Aesudan must be slain.

9.0.1 Character Advancement

The party starts this chapter at level 12. Advance them twice in this chapter: once after they find their way to the Royal Palace and once after they kill Queen Aesudan.

9.1 Journeying Onward

After the party kills the queen allowing Sja-Anat to open Perpendicularity, the characters can enter the Spiritual Realm. Proceed to the next chapter.

Chapter 10 - TODO - The Spiritual Realm

10.0 Running This Chapter

The characters entered the Spiritual Realm. In here, they must find Ba-Ado-Mishram and free her from her prison.

10.0.1 Character Advancement

The party starts this chapter at level 14. Advance them twice in this chapter: after they learn the history of Ba-Ado-Mishram's imprisonment and once after their final confrontation.

10.1 Journeying Onward

The story ends here. If they characters survive perils of the Spiritual Realm they may start a new adventure.

Appendix A: Document History

This book might be expanded and improved based on players' feedback. The table below shows what was changed. You can compare it with the version you own to quickly spot the differences.

Appendix B: Adversaries

B.1 Hungry Axehound

Not only the people are subjected to the hunger troubling the city. Lack of food is affecting also the animals. Axehounds are not exception - without proper nourishment, their packs scour the city in hopes to find anything edible. Once they pick up the scent, they won't be stopped by any obstacle.

Kholinar breed of the Axehounds is slightly bigger and more aggressive than their cousins. Their carapace has more vibrant, red hue, marked with black and orange spots.

Tactics

Hungry Axehounds often work in a group and they gladly accept human leadership over their pack. They focus their efforts on one enemy, attempting to knock them prone and surround it with their On the Hunt reaction. They prefer sticking close to each other to benefit from their Pack Instincts.

FEATURES

Enhanced Senses. The axehound gains an advantage on non-attack tests that rely on smell.

Hungry. The axehound gains an advantage on Perception tests to sense food.

ACTIONS

► Strike: Bite. Attack +4, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 2 (1d4) keen damage. Hit: 6 (1d4 + 4) keen damage, and if the target is Medium or smaller, the axehound can spend 1 focus to knock the target Prone, then move up to 10 feet while dragging the target behind them.

► Pack Instincts. While within 5 feet of an ally, the axehound can use the Gain Advantage action as ►.

↻ On the Hunt. After an enemy within 30 feet of the axehound falls Prone, the axehound moves up to 15 feet toward them.

B.2 Rioter

Hunger and unrest in the city of Kholinar made plenty of people angry and desperate. At some point, enough is enough and those people - bakers, tailors and merchants - will grab whatever is nearby to fight for any glimmer of hope for a better tomorrow.

On their own, each Rioter is timid and cowardly. In a group, however, they lose all traces of any rational behavior, turning into mindless incarnations of mayhem. Do not try to reason with them or find any logic in their actions - they are way beyond that. Now, there is only riot!

Tactics

Not much a threat when they are alone. Fighting in larger groups gives them courage, however. A gang of Rioters will attempt to rain stones and rubble on their enemies with a hope to keep a safe distance. If that fails, they will use some wooden planks as maces to defend.

FEATURES

Momentum. If the Rioter moves at least 10 feet in a straight line toward a target then makes a Mace attack against them on that turn, the Rioter gains an advantage on that attack.

Minion. This creature's attacks can't critically hit, and they're immediately defeated when they suffer an injury

ACTIONS

► Strike: Mace. Attack +2, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 3 (1d6) impact damage. Hit: 5 (1d6 + 2) impact damage.

► Strike: Throw Rubble. Attack +2, range 20/60 ft., one target. Graze: 3 (1d6) keen damage. Hit: 5 (1d6 + 2) impact damage. This attack gains an advantage if another Rioter used the same action this round.

► Trip (1 Focus). The Rioter makes an Athletics test against a target within 5 feet of them, opposed by the target's choice of Athletics or Agility. If the Rioter succeeds on this test, the target is knocked Prone.

B.3 Royal Palace

The Royal Palace in Kholinar is under heavy influence of Yelig-nar, the Blightwind, one of the nine Unmade serving Odium. Queen Aesudan bonded the spren, and now she is convinced her loyal guard are a newly reformed Knights Radiant.

Despite the queen's delusions, her guards are the best Alethkar can offer - heavily armed and formidable in battle, they serve day and night to ensure nobody can cross the closed gates of the palace. Though they are not bonded to any spren, False Radiant are subjected to the corrupting influence Yelig-nar has over the whole palace and their souls, just like the queen's, are lost to the darkness.

Tactics

False Radiants are fearless in battle. They will fight to protect the queen and the palace and they will gladly die in their unyielding loyalty. Anyone threatening their liege will meet their blades. If the fight comes anywhere close to Queen Aesudan, she will join it, unleashing terrible powers the Unmade is granting her.

FEATURES

Ruthless. After the False Radiant knocks an enemy Prone, they can make an additional Strike against that target as on that turn (even if they've already used that Strike action).

Defensive Shield. False Radiant can use the Brace action without a cover nearby.

ACTIONS

► Strike: Longsword. Attack +6, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 4 (1d8) keen damage. Hit: 10 (1d8 + 6) keen damage.

► Strike: Shield. Attack +6, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 2 (1d4) impact damage. Hit: 8 (1d4 + 6) impact damage and the False Radiant can spend 1 Focus to knock the target Prone.

►► Intimidate (Costs 1 Focus). The False Radiant makes an opposed Intimidation test against the Discipline of a target they can influence. If the False Radiant succeeds, the target loses 1 Focus and is no longer Focused.

↶ Intercept. If an ally within 5 ft. of False Radiant is attacked, he can spend 1 Focus to redirect that attack to himself.

B.4 Wall Guards

When Queen Aesudan closed the gates of the Palace, it became clear that she has no intention to defend the people of the city. Lead by Highmarshal Azure, men of Wall Guards took that duty on themselves.

Despite being a woman - unprecedented in alethi culture - Highmarshal Azure shows great leadership skills and martial prowess, both desperately needed in those difficult times. She assumed command after the previous guard leader fell in riots and quickly ordered to assault the Monastery to secure a Soulcaster.

Despite their skilled and righteous leader, the Wall Guards cannot protect everyone... In the end, they decided to focus their attention on the city wall to defend from the Singers, leaving the streets of the city to various criminals and the Cult of Moments.

Tactics

When fighting against other Kholinar citizens, the guards seek to incapacitate and disarm their opponent instead of killing them. They will knock enemies Prone with their longspears attacks. If their opponent does not yield, they will proceed to more drastic measures.

A guard manning the wall will use crossbow to shoot the enemies below.

Tactics

Highmarshal Azure wields a great power few people can recognize. However, she refuses to use it against other people. In battle, she will focus on leading and bolstering her troops, but she will never strike other humans with her blade - at least as long as she doesn't feel threatened.

Defend the Wall. While on the wall or any related areas, the guard can use Brace action as ►.

ACTIONS

► Strike: Longspear. Attack +5, reach 10 ft., one target. Graze: 4 (1d8) keen damage. Hit: 9 (1d8 + 5) keen damage, and the guard can spend 1 Focus to knock the target Prone.

FEATURES

Soulcaster Essences. The Soulcaster's fabrial is set with three emeralds. If one of the Soulcaster's attacks reduces an enemy to 0 Health, the enemy is killed and transforms into the corresponding Essence.

ACTIONS

► Wood. Attack +7 vs. Spiritual, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 3 (1d6) spirit damage. Hit: 10 (1d6 + 7) spirit damage, and the Soulcaster can spend 1 Focus to make the target Slowed until the end of the target's next turn.

►► Moss. Attack +7 vs. Spiritual, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 7 (2d6) spirit damage. Hit: 14 (2d6 + 7) spirit damage.

►► Vines. The Soulcaster transforms ground into thorny vines. Each enemy within 5 feet of them takes 9 (2d8) keen damage. The Soulcaster can spend 1 Focus per enemy in range to make that enemy Restrained. As ►►, they can make a DC 17 Agility test to remove that condition.

►► Soulcasting. The Soulcaster touches a Medium or smaller object and makes a DC 17 Discipline test. On a success, they transform the object into one of their Essences. They can spend 2 Focus to target a Large object instead.

↺ Soulcast Protection (Costs 2 Focus). Before a ranged attack hits the Soulcaster or an ally within 5 feet of them, the Soulcaster makes a Discipline test. If their result is greater than the triggering attack test, the Soulcaster causes the attack to miss.

FEATURES

Nalthian Awareness. Highmarshal Azure gains an advantage on all Awareness skill tests. She can sense spren and invisible characters.

BioChromatic Sword. The Highmarshal wields Azure's Blade.

ACTIONS

► Shield Up. Target ally increases their Physical Defense by 2 until the end of the next round. This action can be used multiple times in a single round.

► Strike True. Target ally gains and advantage on their next attack. This action can be used multiple times in a single round.

►► Form a Line. All allies can each spend 1 Focus to move up to their speed as ↺. Until the end of the next round, all attacks targeting Azure's allies standing within 5 ft. of a friendly character gain disadvantage.

► Invested Healing. Azure can spend 1 Investiture to recover 5 (1d6 + 2) Health.

↺ Parry, Riposte. Before Azure is hit with a melee attack, she can add her Light Weaponry skill to her Physical Defense. If the attack misses as a result, she can strike the attacker: Attack +7, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 13 (2d12) spirit damage. Hit: 20 (2d12 + 7) spirit damage.

B.5 Cult of Moments

Ardents indulging in a life full of comfort quickly become a prime target for Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel and it's corruption. After the Everstorm, those ardens founded the Cult of Moments.

During the day, the Cultists are walking in processions, each wearing a different costume of a spren. They preach the upcoming end and call for the spren worship. At nights they all gather at the Monastery, where the revelry starts.

B.5.1 Spren Cultists

When they are out in the city, each Cultist wears a costume made of white ardent robes decorated with ribbons or other ornaments to reassemble one of the spren. The most common are:

Windspren

The Cultist attaches light blue ribbons to their robes. They move quickly to make them flap on the wind. During fight, they cut with their knives before running to another enemy.

Firespren

With short, bright red straps of ribbons attached to their white robes, those cultists often carry a flaming torch or a censer, which they can use as a weapon.

Painspren

Robes of those Cultists remain white, but they additionally wear orange gloves ended with sharp, steel claws. If attacked, they will use them to make deep, bleeding cuts.

Shockspre

Those Cultist attach plenty of strings with yellow glass shards to their robes. If needed, they can rip one off and fling it like with a slingshot. They are seldom lethal, but they can cut painfully.

Anticipationspren

They wear white robes with one, long, red ribbon around their arm. During fight, they use it as a whip and they can entangle their enemies with a precise strikes, restraining their movements.

Tactics

When drawn to combat, each Cultist will attempt to enact the spren they are representing: those with windspren ribbons will quickly move between multiple targets, the ones with painspren gloves will scratch their foes, while shockspren cultists will use slings to rain glass shards on their enemies.

Spren Cult. The Cultist wears outfit to represent one of the spren. That gives them one of the actions below: Wind, Fire, Pain, Shock or Anticipation.

ACTIONS

► Strike: Wind. Attack +5, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 2 (1d4) keen damage. Hit: 7 (1d4 + 5) keen damage. The Cultist can move up to their speed as a part of this action without provoking reactive strikes.

► Strike: Fire. Attack +5, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 2 (1d4) energy damage. Hit: 7 (1d4 + 5) energy damage and the attack ignites any flammable items.

► Strike: Pain. Attack +5, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 2 (1d4) keen damage. Hit: 7 (1d4 + 5) keen damage and the target is Afflicted [1d4 keen] until the target regains at least 1 Health.

► Strike: Shock. Attack +5, reach 30/120 ft., one target. Graze: 2 (1d4) keen damage. Hit: 7 (1d4 + 5) keen damage and the target loses 1 Focus.

► Strike: Anticipation. Attack +5, reach 20 ft., one target. Graze: 2 (1d4) keen damage. Hit: 7 (1d4 + 5) keen damage and the target is Restrained until Cultist uses this action again.

► Anticipation - Pull. If the Cultist Restrained an enemy with their attack, they can make an opposed Athletics check. On a success, the Cultist pulls the Restrained enemy up to 10 feet towards themselves.

B.5.2 Revelers of the Heart

After the set of sun, the revelry begins. All cultists return to the Monastery where they indulge in food, drinks, dance and other pleasures.

But the former ardents are not alone - with food being scarce in the city and the enemy army threatening with carnage any day now, many lost all hope and responded to the inviting call of Ashertmarn. In here, all their desires come true:

Masked Reveler

One of the most devoted servants of Ashertmarn - former ardent, now making sure the revelry continues undisturbed. Those revelers hide their faces behind pale blank masks without any features.

Bibulous Reveler

Desperate lighteyes and starving people ready to give everything for one more sip of wine, one additional bite of meat. They don't care about anything else, their clothes are often in shreds and food stains.

Musical Reveler

Broken people finding their last glimpse of joy in music and dance. Some of them are haunted with an eerie tune nobody else can hear. They are eager to share the musical rapture with other characters who do not follow the steps of the dance.

Wealthy Reveler

While you can't eat your money, some revelers desire wealth above all else. When they are surrounded by delicious food and exotic wine, they see only spheres and jewelry which they proudly wear, presenting to the world.

Sadistic Reveler

Those do not care about money or whatever it can buy. Instead they hunger for sensations and experiences - they seek thrill of pleasure, scream of pain, they are longing for fear and anticipation, each one unique and exceptional.

Tactics

The revelers do not wish to fight, they only want to relax and revel. They will invite the others to the revel to share the celebrations, but they will avoid physical conflict for as long as possible.

They can't willingly move away from the reveler on that turn.

B.5.3 Heart of the Revel

Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel is the Unmade whose influence corrupted the ardens until they formed Cult of Moments. It resides in the very center of the revelries in the Ardent Monastery - on top of the control building of the Kholinar Oathgate.

Ashertmarn's body is a huge mass of black flesh. It beats in uneven rhythm, which earned it a name of Heart of the Revel. However, there is nothing familiar in its form - if it really reassembles a heart, it is no heart of a human.

Despite being a powerful Unmade, it is not very intelligent. One cannot expect a meaningful conversation with it. Instead, it will try to enact its nature - calling weak and troubled to join the endless revel.

Tactics

Ashertmarn cannot be killed and any attempts will fail. To defeat it, one must show unyielding determination and a steel will.

In a conversation it will attempt to shake the resolve of its opponents with constant calls to the revel. It will use its thralls for help if that's what it takes.

If Heart of the Revel would see it has no power over a person, it will retreat.

FEATURES

Boss (Conversation). The Unmade makes a contribution twice in a conversation round: once after more than a half of enemies made their contribution, and the second time after all of them contributed.

After an enemy finishes a turn, the Unmade can spend 1 Focus to immediately use an extra ▶ or ▷. Additionally, they can spend 1 Focus on their turn to remove a condition from themselves.

Empowered by Revelry. Whenever a character is overwhelmed by the Unmade and is lost to the revel, Heart of the Revel regains 1 Focus.

ACTIONS

▶ Feast. The Unmade makes an Persuasion test against the target's Discipline test. If the Unmade succeeds, the target must spend their next round feasting on the nearby food. (they cannot contribute to the conversation that round)

▶ Embrace the End. The Unmade makes an Intimidation test against the target's Leadership test. If the Unmade succeeds, the target loses 2 Focus.

▶ Indulge in Your Desires. The Unmade makes an Insight test against the target's Deception test. If the Unmade succeeds, the target must spend 1 Focus or loses themselves to the revel.

▶ Give in (Costs 1 Focus). Each enemy must make DC 20 Discipline check or lose 1 Focus.

▶ Join the Revel (Costs 1 Focus). Choose one of the nearby Revelers. During this round they can use any action to support the Unmade in the conversation.

B.6 Singers

Millennia ago, Singer armies fought against Honor and his human forces. After their defeat, they were stripped of their forms and forced into slavery as parshmen. Years passed and now nobody remembers what happened back then. However, Singers’ hatred for their enemies never extinguished. Now, with the Everstorm they are reborn into forms lost to time, ready to have their revenge.

Singers’ skin looks like a marble, with red patterns on a white or black surface. Depending on the current form, a Singer can have a carapace - either ornamental or serving as an armor.

Tactics

Singer troops tend to work in warpairs, two warriors fighting as one. They often use aggressive tactics, striking hard and fast, utilizing abilities granted them by their forms.

Tactics

Newborn Heavenly Ones are the nobility among the Singers. They seldom join the fight, sending their troops instead. However, if the situation calls for a rapid air support, they will be there, enjoying every second of fight against the most hated humans.

Newborn. When this singer rolls a Complication, they become Disoriented until their next turn.

Skyborn. The Fused doesn't trigger Reactive Strikes while flying.

ACTIONS

► Strike: Raysium Lance. Attack +9, reach 10 ft., one target. Graze: 4 (1d8) keen damage. Hit: 16 (1d8 + 12) keen damage, and the target loses 1 Investiture.

► Surge of Gravitation (Costs 1 Investiture). The Fused performs a Basic Lashing on a Huge (15-foot) or smaller character or non-Invested object within their reach that isn't being worn or carried. An object Lashed in this way moves up to 30 feet in any direction. An ally Lashed in this way gains a 30-foot flying rate and Invariable Flight feature until the end of the Fused's next turn.

To Lash an enemy, the Fused makes a Gravitation test against the enemy's Physical defense. On a success, they move the target up to 30 feet in any direction, and the target becomes Restrained until the start of the Fused's next turn.

If a Lashed object collides with a character, or if a Lashed enemy collides with an object or surface during this movement, the character takes 20 (2d10 + 9) damage of a type appropriate to the object or surface.

► Regenerate (Costs 1 Investiture). The Heavenly One recovers 6 (1d6 + 3) health.

↺ Reflexive Strike. Before an enemy voluntarily moves while within 10 feet of the Fused, the Fused uses their Raysium Lance action against them.

Appendix C: Items

C.1 Dustcaster

An ancient fabrial of Chemoarish, the Dustmother. It looks similar to the Soulcasters, though it's more jagged and not as ornamental. It allows its wearer to perform single dustcasting, after which the fabrial turns to dust itself.

Dustcasting

As a ►► you can touch another character or an object. For the next three rounds neither of you can move or take any other actions. After three rounds the target you touched and the item itself turn to dust and are annihilated.

At the end of each of those three rounds, make a DC 10 Division check or DC 20 Discipline check. Each failure causes you to take damage as parts of yourself become dustcasted as well. If you drop to 0 Health, you are also annihilated and you cannot be healed, though it doesn't stop the dustcasting process.

1+ Failures

The PC loses the tips of their fingers on the dustcasting hand. They take 1d6 Spirit damage.

2+ Failures

Whole dustcasting palm is gone. The PC takes additional 1d8 Spirit damage.

3 Failures

Entire arm of the PC is turned to dust. Its owner takes additional 1d10 Spirit damage.

C.2 Black Scallop

An ancient fabrial of Dai-Gonarthi, the Black Fisher. It looks like a black scallop shell with purple markings. Once per game, the shell can be forced open.

Opening the Shell

As a ► you can open the fabrial. That will open a small perpendicularity lasting until the end of the next round. Any character stepping inside can travel to any other Realm (eg. to the Physical Realm from the Cognitive Realm).

Once the fabrial is opened, it loses its properties and cannot be used again.

C.3 Azure's Blade

This sword is one of a kind. It's a masterpiece equaling a Shardblade, though it's shorter and cannot be dismissed. It is owned by Highmarshal Azure and there is small chance she will ever choose to part with it.

Due to its small size, either a Shardblade expertise or a Side Sword expertise can be used for wielding this weapon.

Characters killed with this blade wither, their skin turning ashen gray.

Type: Shardblade / Side Sword

Skill: Heavy or Light Weaponry

Damage: 2d12 spirit

Range: Melee

Expertise: loses Dangerous trait

Traits and Rules: Dangerous, Deadly, Unique: Spiritual Injury, Bane of the Weak

Bane of the Weak

When an adversary with a Minion trait is hit with this weapon, the blade kills them immediately.

Appendix D: Enlightened Radiants Rules

D.0 General Rules

Enlightened Radiants are still Radiants, and all the rules from the Stormlight Handbook are still in place. However, on top of them, the following applies:

D.0.1 Philosophy Changes

Enlightening touch of Sja-Anat expands not only the powers granted by the spren, but also their belief system. Each of the Enlightened Orders has a short description suggesting such changes. Those can be used to better understand the new values of the Order and help players with their roleplay.

D.0.2 Neither Good Nor Evil

Despite being created with Voidlight by one of the Unmade, the spren are not inherently evil, nor are their Radiants. They are not forced onto the path of moral goodness, neither. Enlightened by the touch of Sja-Anat, the spren recognize the world is not black and white and it is up to their Radiants to determine what choices will they make.

D.0.3 Enlightened Talents

On top of standard talents available to each Radiant Path, Enlightened spren grant access to 5 additional talents from the Enlightened talent tree. Those are unique for each of the Orders. They follow the same rules as other talents.

D.0.4 Drawbacks and Complications

No great power comes without a cost. Each of the Enlightened Orders has listed some negative effects or events that can occur as a consequence of meddling with too much of Odium's powers. Some of them affect the scenes in a clearly defined rules, while others are less rigid. They can be an inspiration of complications to be used in a case of rolled , but in the end it is up to GM how often they will affect the characters.

D.0.5 Unmade Influence

Each of the nine Enlightened Radiant Orders is strangely connected to one of the Unmade. Perhaps it was only a pinch of inspiration that Sja-Anat took when creating her children, perhaps the connection is rooted more deeply in the laws governing the powers of Voidlight...

Whenever an Enlightened Radiant shares a scene with the Unmade (or something deeply connected with one) related to their Order, they are rewarded with expedited progress of their powers - they can immediately develop one of their talents from Enlightened talent tree. If there are no more talents left in that tree, they can develop another Radiant talent instead. In total, that can take effect up to 3 times in the entire game.

It is up to the GM to determine how many talents award to the player at once - while 1 would be a suggested number, the GM may decide that the Unmade will not make an appearance in the future story, making this last scene with them even more impactful.

Order	The Unmade
Windrunners	Nergaoul, the Thrill
Skybreakers	Yelig-nar, the Blightwind
Dustbringers	Chemoarish, the Dustmother
Edgedancers	Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother
Truthwatchers	Moelach
Lightweavers	Sja-Anat, the Taker of Secrets
Elsecallers	Dai-Gonarthis, the Black Fisher
Willshapers	Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel
Stonewards	Ba-Ado-Mishram

D.0.6 Speak the Words

With changed philosophy, the Oaths of the Knights Radiant are also different. This ruleset do not impose any specific Words - those are for you to find!

D.1 Enlightened Windrunner

*~~I will protect.~~
I will eliminate threat.*

D.1.1 Philosophy Changes

Enlightened Windrunners recognize that focusing on defense and protection is doomed to failure - sooner or later they are bound to make a mistake and someone will pay an ultimate price for that. Instead, they focus on quick and efficient threat elimination to ensure safer world for everyone.

At their best they are formidable warriors who eagerly deal with the biggest dangers on the battlefield.

At their worst, they turn violent, hostile to everyone and unable to stop themselves from bloodshed.

D.1.2 Enlightened Honorspren

In the Physical Realm, the Enlightened honorspren manifests like a small man made from an orange light, leaving red glow behind as they move.

In the Cognitive Realm, they keep that appearance, though they grow to a size of a grown man. Their eyes look like pools of blood dripping streams of scarlet tears on their cheeks.

D.1.3 Drawbacks and Complications

Enlightened Windrunners tend to lose themselves in the heat of battle. If they seem to avoid fighting during a battle, the GM may request a Discipline check (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failed check, the Windrunner cannot move away from their enemies and they must make a Strike action this turn (even if that would mean striking an ally).

D.1.4 Enlightened Talents

Keep the Momentum! (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened honorspren

Activation: ⤴

Don't stop! Don't think! Fight! Keep the momentum!

Spend 1 Focus to prevent from being moved or knocked Prone.

Lash Out

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal; Keep the Momentum! key talent

Activation: ⤴

Are you threatening me?!?

Spend 1 Focus after the you are attacked by an enemy within 5 feet of you. You can attack that enemy.

Berseker Rage

Prerequisite: Lash Out talent

Activation: ▶

I WILL KILL YOU ALL!!!

Spend 2 Focus. Your next Strike targets each character within 5 feet of you and deals an extra 3 (1d6) damage on a hit.

Invested Enhancement

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal; Keep the Momentum! key talent

Activation: ▶

This light will be the last thing you will see before your death.

Spend 1 Investiture to become Enhanced [Strength +1] and Enhanced [Speed +1] until the end of your next turn. This temporarily increases each of your Physical skills by 1, including attack and damage rolls. At the end of each of your turns, you can spend 1 Investiture to maintain this effect for an additional round.

Martial Experience

Prerequisite: Invested Enhancement talent

Activation: ∞

Just! Die! Already!

You can strike an additional time on your turn.

D.2 Enlightened Skybreaker

~~I will seek justice.~~
I will seek vengeance.

D.2.1 Philosophy changes

Skybreakers influenced by Sja-Anat recognize that all laws and legal systems exist to fulfill human desire for revenge - they may call it just and fair, but it's only to make them feel better while they aim to hurt others just like they were hurt. Those Skybreakers discard complex and inefficient legal procedures and instead focus on the core of the issue - avenging.

At their best, those Skybreakers are just and righteous warriors fighting in a name of weak and hurt.

At their worst they are blinded with their desire to punish everyone around them, without thinking about the consequences.

D.2.2 Enlightened Highspren

In the Physical Realm, Enlightened highspren manifest as small cavities filled with amethyst, looking like the inside of a purple geode.

In the Cognitive Realm, the geode-like cavity takes a shape of a man. Their silhouette's looks like a concave cluster of amethysts no matter at what angle you look at them.

D.2.3 Drawbacks and Complication

Consumed by their desire for revenge, the Skybreakers often deal massive collateral damage they might not be aware of. When they are using their Division or Enlightened talents, the DM may make them a Discipline check (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failure, they lose control over their abilities, dealing damage to their allies or NPCs on top of the enemy they were aiming for.

D.2.4 Enlightened Talents

Shocking Grasp (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened highspren

Activation: ▶

Your hands are sparkling with small electrical discharges.
Spend 1 Investure and make a Division skill check against a Spiritual Defense of an enemy you can touch. On a success, the enemy becomes Stunned. On a failure they cannot use ◀ until your next turn.

Storm Leap

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal, Shocking Grasp key talent

Activation: ▶

You fall from the skies, as the lightning made flesh.

Spend 1 Investure to jump up to 60 feet. If you land within 5 feet of an enemy, the you can use the Gain Advantage action as ▶.

Lightning Shield

Prerequisite: Storm Leap talent

Activation: ▶

Lightning arcs envelop you, shielding from the enemies.

After you use the Move action, you become electrically charged until the start of your next turn. While charged, you're immune to energy damage, and whenever the you are hit with an attack by an enemy within 5 feet of you, the attacker takes 1d8 energy damage.

Bolt of Lightning

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal, Shocking Grasp key talent

Activation: ▶▶

The lightning dances at the tips of your fingers, waiting to have pointed purpose.

Spend 1 Investure to make a Division attack against a Physical Defense of a target within 60 feet. That attack gains Disadvantage unless you spend 1 Focus to ignore it. The attack deals 2d8 energy damage. (As usual, if you hit, add your Division modifier. On miss, you can graze for 1 Focus.)

Summon Storm

Prerequisite: Bolt of Lightning talent

Activation: ▶▶

Dark clouds gather and the Everstorm yearns to be called down.

Spend 3 Investure to summon a lightning storm. As long as the storm is active, at the end of each round, choose N random characters within 60 feet from you (enemies, allies or NPCs), where N is twice your rank. Make a Division attacks against each of their Physical Defenses. Those attacks deal 2d8 energy damage each. (As usual, if you hit, add your Division modifier. On miss, you can graze for 1 Focus.)

During your subsequent turns you can sustain the storm as ▶▶ by spending 1 Investure. If you don't, the storm ends.

D.3 Enlightened Dustbringer

~~I will seek self-mastery.~~
I will be the master.

D.3.1 Philosophy Changes

Dustbringers enlightened by Sja-Anat believe that no self-growth or self-mastery can be done without glorious ambition shaping the whole process. They often focus on grand projects and they never hesitate to use others to achieve it.

At their best they are grand leaders, aiming for legendary deeds that will benefit entire kingdoms of populace.

At their worst they become selfish and ruthless tyrants, abusing others to achieve their own vain desires.

D.3.2 Enlightened Ashspren

In the Physical Realm, Enlightened ashspren manifest as a blood veins, scarlet and branching, leaving bloody smears behind when they move.

In the Cognitive Realm their gray bodies rot and decay, showing bloodied flesh and sometimes even their bones. Their gums always bleed, painting their sharp teeth red and sometimes dripping smears of blood from their mouths.

D.3.3 Drawbacks and Complications

While focusing on mastering the others, Enlightened Dustbringers sometimes fail to properly control their own powers.

The GM may ask a Dustbringer for a Discipline check (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failure an item they hold slips or even turns to dust.

D.3.4 Enlightened Talents

Decaying Touch (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened ashspren

Activation: ★

Under your touch, the wounds refuse to heal.

Before a character within your reach recovers health or focus, you can spend 1 Focus or 1 Investiture to prevent them from doing so. The character does not regain that Health or Focus, but any actions, Investiture, or other resources they spent still remain spent.

Drain Light

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal, Decaying Touch key talent

Activation: ►►

Dying flesh cannot hold the Light.

A character you touch loses 1d4 Investiture. You regain the same amount of Investiture up to your maximum value. Characters in Shardplates cannot be targeted.

Parasitic Relation

Prerequisite: Drain Light talent

Activation: ∞

Weakness of your enemies is your strength.

Your attacks heal you for half the damage dealt.

Chop To Pieces

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal, Decaying Touch key talent

Activation: ∞

One cannot heal what was chopped off by your hand.

Whenever your attack, skill, or talent reduces enemy's Health or Focus, their maximum of those is also reduced by the same amount until the character's next Long Rest.

Spreading Decay

Prerequisite: Chop To Pieces talent

Activation: ►

The rot and decay slowly spread through the flesh, consuming their victim alive.

Spend 1 Investiture to make a Division attack against a Physical Defense of an enemy you can touch. The attack deals 2d4 vital damage. On a hit, the target becomes Afflicted [1d4 vital] for 2 rounds. Once per turn you can extend duration of the Afflicted condition for 1 round as a ► for 1 Investiture.

The size of this attack's and affliction's damage dice increases with your ranks in Division; at 2 ranks, use d6s (instead of d4s), and so on. As usual, on a hit, add your Division modifier to damage, and on a miss, you can spend 1 focus to graze with the attack.

D.4 Enlightened Edgedancer

~~I will remember.~~
I will never forget, never forgive.

D.4.1 Philosophy Changes

Enlightened Edgedancers realize that mere compassion and memory of the forgotten does not fix their situation in the long run. Instead, they focus on the source of their misfortune, never yielding until all wrongs are made right and ensured to never happen again.

At their best, those Edgedancers are focus-driven Radicals, determined to improve the lives of common people.

At their worst, they can become petty, unforgiving individuals with little compassion and understanding in their hearts.

D.4.2 Enlightened Cultivationspren

In the Physical Realm, Enlightened cultivationspren reassemble a skull overgrown with entangled red vines trailing behind it and dripping blood-like sap.

In the Cognitive Realm, those vines form full human-like body. The spren wear rags in here, soaked with red sap still dripping from the vines.

D.4.3 Drawbacks and Complications

Progression and Enlightened talents cause terrible pain on the subjects of those abilities. The GM can request a Discipline check (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken by the Edgedancer) from the person being affected by those talents. On a failure, they lose 1 Focus.

Enlightened Edgedancers can be tempted to hurt, maim or even kill other creatures only to experiment with their abilities or subject them to their vines and gain more control over them. When the GM tempts an Edgedancer like that, they must pass a Discipline check (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken) or spend a Focus point. If they don't, they must take a hostile action against that creature (eg. make a Strike action).

D.4.4 Enlightened Talents

Sprouting Vines (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened cultivationspren

Activation: ►

Under your touch, red vines sprout from the ground.

Spend 1 Investure to sprout red rockbud vines. Those are edible and can sustain one person for a day, but you can divide them into multiple smaller portions. If another creature consumes the plants, you can sense a direction and distance to it for a number of days equal to your rank.

Enhancing Vines

Prerequisite: Enhancing Vines or Reanimate Remains talent

Activation: ►►

The vines you fed another person grow, piercing through their skin and entangling their body.

Choose a creature that was fed with Sprouting Vines talent. You can spend Investure to accelerate the growth of the vines, which will pierce their skin and grow over their body, granting them bonus Strength. Both Investure cost and amount of granted Strength are proportional to the size of the creature (1 for Small creatures, 2 for Medium and so on...).

The bonus affects all Strength derivatives (Defense, Health and skills) and lasts for a number of days equal to your rank.

Reanimating Vines

Prerequisite: Enhancing Vines talent

Activation: ►►

Your red vines grow stronger and more capable to puppeteer bigger bodies.

Choose a dead creature that was under the effect of Enhancing Vines. You may raise its body to fight for you for a number of days equal to your rank. A body controlled this way is still granted bonus Strength, but its Intelligence, Willpower and Focus drop to 0.

Reanimate Remains

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal; Sprouting Vines talent

Activation: ►

The red vines controlled by you can entangle an empty shell or a corpse, reanimating it to fight for you

Spend 1 Investure to sprout red vines around small remains of a dead creature. It will rise from the dead and fight for you as a Reanimated Remains for a number of days equal to your rank.

Puppeteering Vines

Prerequisite: Enhancing Vines or Reanimate Remains talent

Activation: ►►

Your red vines can overgrow and subdue other creatures

Touch a creature and spend Investiture to make a Progression check against its Spiritual Defense. If you succeed, you gain control over the creature as your red vines entangle its body and break its spirit. The amount of Investiture required to make a check is proportional to the size of the creature (1 for Small creatures, 2 for Medium and so on...).

After a number of rounds equal to your rank, repeat the Progression check. The creature breaks free if the check fails.

Reanimated Remains

Tier 1 Minion - Small Undead Plant

PHYSICAL			COGNITIVE			SPIRITUAL
Str	Def	Spd	Int	Def	Wil	Awa	Def	Pre
3	14	1	0	10	0	2	12	0

Health: 10 (8–12)

Focus: 0

Intesture: 0

Movement: 25 ft.

Senses: 10 ft. (touch)

Physical Skills: Stealth +3

Spiritual Skills: Survival +4

Languages: (none)

FEATURES

Unedad. This creature is immune to vital damage.

Plant. This creature suffers double energy damage from fire sources.

Rugged Camouflage. An undetected Reanimated Remains gain an advantage on attack tests. While the creature is motionless, they're almost indistinguishable from a normal plant, requiring a successful DC 14 Survival test to identify them. This test gains a disadvantage when the creature is in cover or in an area where the other character's primary sense is obscured.

Minion. This creature's attacks can't critically hit, and they're immediately defeated when they suffer an injury

ACTIONS

► Strike: Slam. Attack +3, reach 5 ft., one target. Hit: 5 (1d4 + 3) keen damage.

►► Take Root. The creature's Movement drops to 0 and it cannot be moved by enemy actions for as long the creature chooses to be rooted. At the end of each round the creature is rooted in place, it recovers 1d4 Health.

D.5 Enlightened Truthwatcher

*~~I will seek truth.~~
I will reveal bleak sooth.*

D.5.1 Philosophy Changes

Past is long gone and irrelevant - only the future matters. Enlightened Truthwatchers are so obsessed with uncovering the upcoming fate they often forget about the presence.

At their best they are skilled advisors, always ready for anything. Or rather - for the one thing that is bound to happen.

At their worst, they become hopeless doomsayers, spreading despair with their prophecies of inevitable end.

D.5.2 Enlightened Mistspren

In the Physical Realm, Enlightened mistspren manifest as red crystalline structures that drip red light upwards.

In the Cognitive Realm, they look like a red mist shaped into a humanoid form. Instead of faces, their heads are marked with swirling red void.

D.5.3 Drawbacks and Complications

The visions that Enlightened Truthwatchers experience are often too much for a mortal mind to handle. After showing the vision, the GM can request a Discipline check from the Truthwatcher (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failure they lose 1 Focus. If they have no Focus left, they become Stunned for 1 round.

The GM can send them visions without Knight's active attempts to see anything.

D.5.4 Enlightened Talents

Future Sight(Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened mistspren

Activation: ★

Cryptic visions descend upon you, showing you what might happen.

Once before a rest you can ask the GM about a specific event in the future. The GM can show you a vision containing most probable outcome, abstract symbolic images, mere impressions or feelings, or even some false information. It is up to the GM how truthful or specific the vision will be, though they can ask you for Illumination test (to determine how well you can control your powers) or for Deduction test (to see if your character was able decipher the meaning).

Glimpse the Future

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal; Future Sightkey talent

Activation: ★

Your visions allow you to determine what is not supposed to happen.

Once per round after you roll the dice for a test, you can spend 1 or more Investiture to reroll that many of the test's dice.

Alter Fortune

Prerequisite: Glimpse the Future talent

Activation: ↺

You see the outcome of the events before they could even start.

Each time you finish a long rest, roll a number of d20s equal to 1 + your tier, and record each result.

When an enemy or willing ally you can sense makes a test, you can use a reaction to replace the test's d20 roll with one of your recorded numbers. You can replace that number after you see their die roll and after they apply any advantages, but you must do so before the effects of the test are resolved.

Each recorded number can be used only once. When new set of numbers is rolled, all previous ones are lost.

Search the Past

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal; Future Sightkey talent

Activation: ★

Sometimes to uncover the future one must unravel the past long forgotten.

Once before a long rest you can choose a past event you know of and make a Lore skill check (DC set by the GM based on how long ago the event happened and on how familiar you are with it).

If you succeed, you are shown the vision of the event as though you were there. You are only the observer and you cannot affect the events of the vision.

Vision Void

Prerequisite: Glimpse the Future talent or Search the Past talent

Activation: ∞

Your powers shield you from the enemy's sight.

You and each ally within your spren bond range are immune to any enemy effect that would reroll or replace the result of any die rolled by you or those allies.

Additionally, if you're present in or strongly influencing an event, no enemy can ever see visions of that event.

D.6 Enlightened Lightweaver

*I will speak my truth.
I will uncover their lies.*

D.6.1 Philosophy Changes

After the Enlightenment, the cryptic's love for secrets is only magnified. They relish in uncovering the lies and decrypting hidden information, often discovering things seemingly impossible to gather.

At their best, Lightweavers bonding those spren make an excellent spies and agents with amazing attention to details.

At their worst, they pursue personal secrets without any regard to other peoples' privacy, often damaging reputation and spreading lies, gossip and misinformation in the process.

D.6.2 Enlightened Cryptic

In the Physical Realm Enlightened cryptics manifest as bone-white scribbles rotating around the center.

In the Cognitive Realm the rotating scribbles form the head of the cryptic. The rest of the body looks like of robes made of old parchment, with tears and bends in many places.

D.6.3 Drawbacks and Complications

The cryptics love discovering secrets so much, they will often do it without Radiant's instructions. They will always share their findings, but due to errors or spren's spite they can sometimes be misleading or false. On top of that, they enjoy dark secrets the most, so the character can be overwhelmed with gloomy reality uncovered by their spren.

The GM can make the Radiant roll for a Discipline check (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On the failure, the character cannot contain newly learned secrets and must confront their owner about them, spreading possibly false information and damaging their reputation.

D.6.4 Enlightened Talents

Interpret Body Language (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond and Enlightened cryptic

Activation: ∞

You can read people like an open book.

You gain an advantage on Insight tests made to interpret the desires or intentions of others.

Uncover Secrets

Prerequisite: Interpret Body Language key talent

Activation: ►

With a little help from your spren you can find out much more than the person is willing to share.

Spend 1 Focus to learn one secret of another person.

Decrypt Thoughts

Prerequisite: Uncover Secrets talent

Activation: ►

If you try hard enough, you can even read people's thoughts out of their faces.

Spend 1 Investure and choose a character. You can determine what exactly that character is thinking about in this very moment. If used in combat, that character's actions against you gain disadvantage. Lasts for a number of rounds equal to your rank.

Influential Tip

Prerequisite: Interpret Body Language key talent

Activation: ►

You can always determine the right words to motivate others.

An ally you can influence becomes Determined until the ally benefits from that condition or until the scene ends.

Suggestion

Prerequisite: Influential Tip or Decrypt Thoughts talent

Activation: ►►

When you can read the people this well, manipulating them is just a child's play.

Spend 1 Investure and make a Deception or Persuasion test against the Spiritual Defense of an enemy you can influence. You gain an advantage on that roll if you know target's secrets, goals or intentions that are relevant. If you succeed, you can suggest a reasonable action - they will be forced to enact it.

D.7 Enlightened Elsecaller

*I will reach my potential.
I will reject imperfection.*

D.7.1 Philosophy Changes

Aiming for one's full potential is never enough for Elsecallers influenced by Sja-Anat. Instead their goal is absolute perfection. They despise anything imperfect, rejecting it from their lives.

At their best, they reach an excellence in each task they set for themselves.

At their worst, they grow hateful and resentful towards everyone and everything, including themselves. They can never be satisfied by anything and they will punish any imperfection in themselves and others.

D.7.2 Enlightened Inkspren

In the Physical Realm, the Enlightened inkspren manifest as small iridescent person, capable of changing their size at will.

In the Cognitive Realm they look very similar, though they are always in their full size.

D.7.3 Drawbacks and Complications

Abilities granted by Enlightened talents cause the Elsecaller to be split between Physical and Cognitive Realms. At most of the time they can control it, but the GM may request a Discipline test from them (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failure, they are lost for a few moments in the Shadesmar, unable to assist the rest of the team and exposed to feral spren attacks.

After a few rounds they are always transported back to the Physical Realm.

D.7.4 Enlightened Talents

Perfected Body (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened inkspren

Activation: ★

Your physical body is full of imperfections. Reject it!

At the end of each round you can assume a shadowy, incorporeal form by spending 1 Investiture. While you're in this form, all attacks against your Physical Defense gain disadvantage, you can ignore difficult terrain and you can travel through any gaps with a diameter of 6 inches or greater, but you can attack only if you are in a darkened area. You may return to your physical form at the end of subsequent rounds.

Grieving Dirge

Prerequisite: First Ideal; Perfected Body key talent

Activation: ►

Perfection terrifies those of a weak mind. Present it to them, and watch them suffer! Punish their weakness!

Spend 2 Investiture to make an Intimidation test against the Spiritual defense of a target you can influence within 30 feet of you. On a success, the target becomes Exhausted (-1).

If you are in your incorporeal form, this action costs 1 less Investiture.

Shadow Walk

Prerequisite: First Ideal; Perfected Body key talent

Activation: ►

Embrace the shadows, walk through them, allow them to hide your imperfections.

If you are standing in a darkened area, spend 1 Investiture to move to any other darkened place you can see within 60 feet. This does not trigger Reactive Strikes.

If you are in your incorporeal form, this action does not require spending Investiture.

Long Shadow

Prerequisite: Shadow Walk talent

Activation: ∞

Physical boundaries mean nothing for those, who are perfected!

If you are standing in a darkened area, spend 1 Investiture to treat any enemy standing in darkened area as they were 5 feet from you. If you attack them this turn, your attack deals spirit damage instead of its usual type. If you are in your incorporeal form, this action does not require spending Investiture.

Drag Through Shadows

Prerequisite: Shadow Walk talent

Activation: ∞

Nobody can run away from the perfection!

When you are using Shadow Walk talent, you can also transport 1 character standing 5 feet from you. If the target is unwilling, you must first succeed on an Agility test against the target's Physical defense.

A transported target appears in an unoccupied space of your choice within 5 feet of you.

D.8 Enlightened Willshaper

*I will seek freedom.
I will revel in freedom.*

D.8.1 Philosophy Changes

What is the point of freedom if you don't indulge yourself in the pleasures of free people? Enlightened Willshapers celebrate every day to feel they are truly alive.

At their best they are jovial and joyful, capable of lifting anyone's spirit even in the gloomiest of times.

At their worst they are unreliable addicts wasting their lives and fortunes in an endless indulgence.

D.8.2 Enlightened Lightspren

In the Physical Realm, the Enlightened lightspren manifest as small black balls pulsing with darkness and leaving a smoke trail as they move.

In the Cognitive Realm, their matte metallic skin is covered in rust and patina. Streams of black smoke rise from the rusty tears in the metal.

D.8.3 Drawbacks and Complications

Enlightened Willshapers are slaves to their own desires. The GM can ask a Willshaper for a Discipline check (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failure, the Willshaper loses ► this round as they are indulging themselves in revelry activities (eg. feasting on food) and they cannot contribute in a conversation or an endeavor scenes this round.

D.8.4 Enlightened Talents

Freedom of Movement (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened Lightspren

Activation: ∞

Nobody will tell you where you can or can't go!

You are immune to being Slowed and Exhausted, and you are unaffected by difficult terrain caused by rocks, crem, or similar obstacles. You can spend 1 Investiture to grant the same bonus to a character you touch as an ►.

Call to the Revel

Prerequisite: First Ideal; Freedom of Movement key talent

Activation: ►►

Come! Join us! We have wine!

Make a Persuasion test opposed by the Discipline test of a character you can influence within 90 feet. If you succeed, the target loses 2 focus, and the first action the target takes on their next turn must be the Move action to approach you by the most direct route. They can't willingly move away from you on that turn.

Hedonistic Impulse

Prerequisite: Call to the Revel talent

Activation: ►

Hey! What do we have here?

Chooses up to two targets you can influence within 60 feet. Those characters must each make a Discipline test (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failure, they loose ►► during their next turn as they indulge themselves in revelry activities (searching for food, feasting, etc).

Firemoss

Prerequisite: Call to the Revel talent

Activation: ►►

You grind the firemoss and inhale its smoke.

Regain up to 6 Focus.

Eroding Inhibitions

Prerequisite: Call to the Revel talent

Activation: ∞

Come on! Just one more glass...

Your attacks cause the target to loose 1 Focus on hit. At any time you can spend 1 Investiture to cause all characters who have remaining Focus equal to 1 + 1 for each of Enlightened Talents you have (including yourself and your allies) to have disadvantage on Discipline tests until the end of next round.

D.9 Enlightened Stoneward

*I will be there when I'm needed.
I will prove myself needed.*

D.9.1 Philosophy Changes

With the enlightening touch of Sja-Anat, the Stonewards no longer passively wait for a time of need. Instead they take proactive actions to seek areas for improvements and show their skills.

At best they are always engaged in their communities, constantly seeking ways to improve things, even if everybody already believed them perfect.

At their worst, they are fabricating calamity after crisis with only goal to prove that they are the best person to fix them.

D.9.2 Enlightened Peakspreen

In the Physical Realm, Enlightened peakspreen manifest as a small puddles of crem-like mud. Occasionally, they emerge from the puddle as a small man, fully made of constantly dripping crem.

In the Cognitive Realm, their size is much bigger and they are taller than most of the men. They still look like they were made of crem, with their faces being shapeless creamy mass. They tend to leave stains on everything they touch.

D.9.3 Drawbacks and Complications

Double Trouble, key talent of the Enlightened talent tree tends to generate  more often for the Stonewards, allowing for unfortunate series of events around the Radiant.

Additionally, the GM can request a Discipline check from the Stoneward (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failure, the character is overcome by the temptation to cause some disaster - release their prisoner, destroy their food supplies, leave the door opened, etc.

D.9.4 Enlightened Talents

Double Trouble (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened peakspreen

Activation: ∞

You seem to be cursed with a bad luck, with strange unlucky accidents happening around you.

Whenever you roll with one or more Plot Dice, add additional Plot Die to the roll. You must use  result if it is rolled on one of them.

Daring Opportunist

Prerequisite: Double Trouble key talent

Activation: ★

With a little daring, you can now push your luck.

Whenever you make a roll, you can spend 1 Investiture to add a Plot Die to it. (That roll is affected by Double Trouble talent.)

Troublemaker

Prerequisite: Double Trouble key talent

Activation: ★

You are always eager to offer an advice, though it's not always a good advice.

Whenever another character is making a roll, you can spend 1 Investiture. If you do, you add an advantage or disadvantage on their Plot Die.

Not Today!

Prerequisite: Troublemaker talent

Activation:

Your presence can distract even the most focused minds.

After an enemy makes a roll, you can spend 1 Investiture before it takes an effect. If you do, the enemy is forced to repeat the roll and use the newest result.

Infectious Misfortune

Prerequisite: Troublemaker talent

Activation: ∞

Your tendency of bad luck seems to affect more and more people around you.

Double Trouble talent's effects are added to all rolls made by your allies and enemies.

D.10 Comments and Acknowledgments

D.10.1 Spren Appearance

Enlightened Mistspren's appearance is described several times in "Stormlight Archive". For the purpose of those rules I used those visuals for them and I didn't attempt to add anything from myself.

Enlightened Criptics are briefly described in "Wind And Truth". I attempted to extrapolate from their Physical Realm description there and I hope my Cognitive Realm ideas fit Brandon Sanderson's vision.

I found Enlightened Inkspren's appearance on coppermind wiki. I did not try to change anything from that version.

All other Enlightened spren described in this book cannot be considered cannon. While creating them I tried to make them fit the others with their nightmarish creepiness and similarities to their non-Enlightened cousins, but they are not an official lore. You can modify those if my ideas don't fit the story you want to tell.

D.10.2 Abilities

As you know, Stormlight Handbook provides an Enlightened Truthwatcher talent tree. This book presents a slightly modified alternative to the original, but overall the players should be familiar with them and I cannot take a credit for that part.

I also noticed that those talents align with one of the Singer's Forms of Power. Using this formula, I designed other talent trees presented here based on other Odium minions. You might notice that some of the talents are heavily inspired with those stat blocks.

For a few Orders I did not find applicable abilities or the abilities I found were not appealing enough for me. In those cases I attempted to provide my own proposals for them. I hope you will enjoy those.

D.10.3 Unmade Relation

While reading "Stormlight Archive" books, I had a strong impression that Enlightened Truthwatchers' abilities look oddly similar to what one of the Unmade - Moelach - can do. I always wondered if that's just a coincidence or something more...

When I considered other Unmade and their traits, I was able to identify more similarities with other Radiant Orders. For the purposes of my fan-made rules I decided to assume this is intentional and represents deeper connection to Odium and his powers.

However, this idea is never officially confirmed and cannot be considered a canonical piece of lore.

D.10.4 Drawbacks and Complications

Enlightened Truthwatcher talents presented in Stormlight Handbook seem to be working as an optional set of abilities a Radiant can opt to have. I honestly am not a great fan of that approach, for me it seems lacking and unbalanced - from the game mechanics point of view there is no downside of choosing Enlightened variant, making a standard option always an inferior, and therefore - wrong, choice.

I decided to address that issue with Drawbacks and Complications section. Access to additional abilities always comes at a cost. It can be unpredictable and depended on the GM's approach, but the players need to be aware of the risk.

I hope this rule will make standard Radiant Orders still a valid choice for players who prefer safer builds, while allowing an Enlightened alternative to provide more abilities.

D.10.5 Ties to Scarlet Sprouter

Those who are familiar with "The Lost Expedition of Chi-Ltik" may notice some similarities between the Red Vines presented there and an Enlightened Edgedancer talent tree from this book.

I will be honest - I like how this set of abilities enriches available trope range by adding Necromancy to the world of Roshar. I designed Scarlet Sprouter with Sja-Anat's influence in mind and though Chi-Ltik does not explore its origins in detail, I believe such spren would be a good counterpart for the usual cultivation-spren.

It also ties quite nicely with the whole Unmade relation idea. As Midnight Mother is known for her nearly-liquid legions, it makes sense for water-like Edgedancers to summon their own troops after Sja-Anat's Enlightenment.

D.10.6 Suggested Adventure

Those homebrew rules for Enlightened Radiant Knights can be used in any campaign you wish. However, if you are looking for some suggestions, they were designed for "Children of the Unmade" homebrew adventure that featured Sja-Anat and her corrupted children.

If you wish to play this adventure with your group, you can find it on my github:

https://github.com/pether-pg/CosmereRPG_Books_byPether/releases

Appendix E: Death Rattles

In most cases, when a character dies, there is no need to invoke Death Rattles as their final words. However, if you wish to indicate a close proximity of Moelach and you don't feel particularly creative at the moment, you can choose something from the pool below - either as a quote or an inspiration.

E.1 Foreshadowing Death Rattles

This pool refers to various events from the story. Make sure to always refer a future chapter, never the one that was completed by the players.

- Screams of pain, broken bones, blood flowing in rivers. Finally, the suffering ended!
(refers to Chapter 3 - Enemy Reborn)
- So grand! So majestic! Oh, Almighty... now it rains with ash and dust...
(refers to Chapter 4 - Enemy Unmade to Dust)
- Come! Sing! Dance with me! Let us relish in the world ending!
(refers to Chapter 5 - Revel of Fools)
- Sea of darkness, sky of void. How much longer must we run...?
(refers to Chapter 6 - TODO - Shadesmar)
- One cut to heal. Two to betray. Three to speak with the gods.
(refers to Chapter 7 - TODO - Kharbranth)
- I am the nightmare, and we are myriad. Oh mother, how can you love us?
(refers to Chapter 8 - TODO - Urithiru)
- Crystal broken, armor shattered, soul erased. We won! Let us step into death!
(refers to Chapter 9 - TODO - Kholinar)
- I hate you, child of lies and betrayal. I hate you and your kind! And I will have my revenge!
(refers to Chapter 10 - TODO - The Spiritual Realm)

E.2 Random Death Rattles

This pool does not reference anything specific. To avoid easy to deduce spoilers, use them in between the Rattles from E.1. "Foreshadowing Death Rattles".

- Cold! So much cold... Was the sun ever warm?
- No... No! This cannot be! This cannot come! NO!
- They told us we won! They promised peace! We loved them! They lied to us all...
- Who are you? Why are you staring at me? What have you done to me...?
- The song! The rhythm! So beautiful! How could we not hear it...?
- The stick! Burn the stick! Why can't you wish to live?
- Wield them high, mighty and glorious! The sword, the spear, the dining fork!
- Sky aflame, earth to ash, souls to despise!
- No eyes to cry, no voice to lament, the suffering is eternal!

Appendix F: Example Character Sheets

If you don't want to spend time on your own character's creation, here you can find some example character sheets prepared for this adventure. You can grab the one you like and just start playing. If you feel like it, you can modify your character's appearance, motivation or other details, but overall the sheets are ready to play.

In here you can find:

- Rish, Ardent
(Human Veden, Envoy - Faithful)
- Adelar, Wall Guard
(Human Alethi, Warrior - Soldier)
- Katleio, Criminal
(Human Herdzian, Hunter - Assassin)
- Ravir, Lighteye Noble
(Human Alethi, Leader - Champion)
- Elhamir, Retired Soldier
(Human Alethi, Scholar - Strategist)
- Nirith, Listener Spy
(Listener, Agent)

If none of those align to your vision of the character you want to play, make your own one! It's super easy and fun! Grab one empty character sheet, follow instructions from Stormlight Handbook or from other sources you prefer and you will have your own hero in no time!

You can find empty character sheet template in here:

Appendix G: Acknowledgments

I poured my heart into this project, but I couldn't make it by myself alone. Here is quick thank you for all of those, who helped me do it, as well as a few other acknowledgments.

Artists involved

I cannot express my gratitude enough to all talented artists whose masterpieces show us the world of Roshtar and its wonders. In particular I want to thank those, who created art for this book:

- Aki.
Cover art depicting Sja-Anat, the Taker of Secrets.

If you are an artist and this book inspired you to create some epic illustration, please reach out! It would be great if I could include your art in here!
