Introduction

0.1 About This Book

0.1.1 About me

Hello! I'm glad to meet you :)

You can call me Pether. I am a fantasy nerd who has played RPGs since childhood. Recently I've dived even deeper into this hobby as I am GMing a campaign for my friends for the past two years. I happily enjoyed various homebrew systems, Dungeons and Dragons, Warhammer RPG, Call of Cthulhu, and now - Cosmere RPG.

All my content and RPG resources are free for everybody. I would be happy to play with you, but since I can't, I will gladly share my ideas and notes, perhaps you will find them helpful. You are invited to modify my work to suit your own needs and playstyles.

I hope you will enjoy this adventure. If you would like to virtually hang out or to fuel my various future projects, you can always buy me a coffee using the link below ;)

You can find all of my Cosmere RPG homebrew content below:

0.1.2 Who is it for?

Though everyone is invited to play this adventure, it is designed for people familiar with the world - the story starts in Kholinar and expects players to be able to roleplay in that environment. This adventure does not include tutorial chapter and the plot may reveal some events and secrets from "Stormlight Archive".

0.1.3 Is it canon?

No. This is a fan-made campaign and the story presented in here cannot be considered canon. While I did my best to align with official lore of the world, some of the events here might contradict Brandon Sanderson's vision.

0.1.4 How many spoilers?

This book contains heavy spoilers of Kholinar arc from "Oathbringer". On top of that there are spoilers of "Wind And Truth" and minor spoilers of one of interludes from "Words of Radiance".

Please make sure that everyone on your table is fine with those.

0.1.5 Motivation behind this book

I always believed that desperate dark deals with ominous entities could greatly enhance the story. While other RPG systems do a good job of including this trope, "Stormlight Archive" focuses on Radiants following their ideals to become the best versions of themselves, leaving less space for "deal with the devil" storyline.

This book addresses this issue by introducing opportunity to bond a spren Enlightened by Sja-anat's touch. Those offer access to more powerful abilities that come at a cost. How much will the characters be willing to pay for this kind of power? And how desperate will they be before making another step on that path...?

0.2 About the Adventure

0.2.1 Campaign Themes

This campaign is using themes as listed below. Use this list to determine if you are interested in running this kind of campaign. In the game, you can encounter themes of:

- Corrupted spren
- Deals with the devil
- Lesser evil

0.2.2 Campaign Setting

The story starts in Kholinar ruled by Queen Aesudan, shortly before the arrival of Everstorm. The characters will spend roughly half of the story in here. Later, they will travel through Shadesmar to reach Kharbranth and later - Urithiru.

0.3 Running the Adventure

To run this adventure you will need Stormlight Handbook containing all rules and guidelines on how to run Cosmere RPG. This book contains only adventure-specific details and suggestions on how to run it.

You can read (or paraphrase) a text in such a box to your players. Alternatively, you can describe the scene using your own words.

Whenever a character's name appears in bold, it means there is corresponding stat block available. You can use it to get more info about the character's attributes and abilities.

Items appearing in bold italic have special rules you can find at the end of this book.

Boxes like this will help you understand the reason behind some of the design choices. Those boxes have no impact on the game, but they may help you modify some elements of the adventure if you so choose.

Path to Enlightenment

Some events or actions are relevant only for Enlightened Spren - the ones corrupted by Sja-anat's touch. Information about those will be displayed in such a box.

Spoiler Info

On many occasions, this book will reference events or characters from "Stormlight Archive" series. This box will warn you of spoilers, but also it will provide original source if you wished to read more details about what's referenced from official books.

If you are using this book in electronic version, it has also several quality-of-life improvements to make your life easier when you navigate this book:

Whenever a name of a chapter or section appears (e.g. "Running the Adventure"), you can click on it to quickly go to the chapter in question.

All characters' names (e.g. Sja-anat) are links that lead to Dramatis Personæ chapter, where all the NPCs are listed.

Unique items (e.g. Dustcaster) and adversaries (e.g. Cultist) are also links that will lead you to the page with their unique rules.

0.3.1 Adjusting Difficulty

This book assumes your players will form a party of 4 characters starting at 1st level. However, it is perfectly fine to have a different size of your group and/or to start playing at a different level (e.g. because the characters already shared another adventure together). Also, it is possible that challenges presented in this book are not aligning with strong suits of the party.

If you see that the balance is a bit off, feel free to adjust the difficulty. You can change a number or tier of the enemies, modify endeavors' requirements or weave some other changes into the story.

0.3.2 Handling Canon

Despite treating original source with respect, this adventure is not canon. While playing the game your primary focus should be fun. For everyone, "fun" means something different - either following official lore to the letter, creating your own touching story, or just hitting bad guys with your sword. Make sure you know what is fun for you and your group and make it your primary objective. If that means modifying this adventure or straying away from the canon - go for it!

You can find more information on that topic in "Canon and Continuity" section of Stormlight Handbook.

0.3.3 Playing with Singers

It is possible for players to play as Singers. However, they must be aware that for the first chapters of the story, they would need to hide their form and pretend to be parshmen not to raise too many questions from the Kholinar people.

Starting with Chapter 3 - Enemy Reborn, after the arrival of Everstorm, Parshmen are out of the picture. Hiding Singer's form is no longer required, but the Kholinar soldiers are actively fighting the newly-turned Singers and that may introduce new challenges to Singer characters. On the other hand, they can find new allays, possibly opening new paths to reach the party's goals.

0.3.4 Playing with Radiants

The adventure encourages players to play as Radiants. Please work with your players to know what Knight Order would they wish to join.

Unless the player explicitly states different wishes, assume they will bond Enlightened Spren touched by Sja-anat. Pay attention to the PC's actions that might attract a Spren. Even if no opportunity occurs to introduce them, they will be able to bond their Spren at the end of Chapter 2 - Dust and the Unmade.

0.3.5 Unique Rules

This adventure introduces possibility to bond Enlightened Spren touched by Sja-anat. For those, you can use any rules you prefer, but it is assumed you will be following the ones provided in Appendix E.

Spren

While traversing the Cognitive Realm, the characters will encounter many spren. In the "Stormlight Archive" it is stated that they cannot be killed like other living creatures can.

To reflect this, they gain this ability:

Spren. This creature cannot be killed with normal methods. Instead, if its Health drops to 0, the creature ceases fighting and flees the scene.

For the combat purposes, after reaching 0 Health, the creature with this feature is gone just like any other enemy.

However, that does not mean it was killed. Consider them running away, or yielding the fight. Either way, the party doesn't need to worry about them anymore.

Please note, that there exist very specific weapons capable of killing the spren, either in Cognitive or Physical Realm. In those cases, this feature will not save them from their doom.

Forbidden Knowledge [N]

In a moment of supreme intelligence, King Taravangian wrote "The Diagram" - set of cryptic prophecies treating about the fate of Roshar and future events.

Any character allied with him gains access to this knowledge, as a result gaining the feature below:

Forbidden Knowledge [N]. Roll Nd20 and note the results. As a , the character can spend one of those results to replace any d20 roll with it. Roll new set of d20s each time the character gains access to the source of the knowledge.

If the party manages to ally the king, they will also gain access to the Diagram and its knowledge. However, working afar may make the access to the prophecies more difficult, so the PCs must use the knowledge sparingly.

This ability works the same as Enlightened Truthwatcher's Alter Fortune talent, except it requires an access to The Diagram to refresh.

There might be also alternative sources of knowledge about the future: Death Rattles, fortune reading, and so on...

Suggested Expedition Events

If you are using Enlightened Radiant rules from Appendix E, you will be expected to expedite the Radiant's progression when they meet specific Unmade or their influence.

Each time an Enlightened Radiant is exposed to an Unmade related to their Order, they can immediately develop a talent from their Enlightened talent tree. Each Radiant can be rewarded like that up to 3 times.

Here is a list of suggested moments to do that so. You can adhere to those suggestion or modify something to your needs:

- Enlightened Windrunner (Nergaoul):
 - 3.2. "Blood on the Streets"
 - 3.6. "The Everstorm"
 - 9.8. "Royal Palace"
- Enlightened Skybreaker (Yelig-nar):
 - 2.5. "Taker of Secrets"
 - 3.3. "The Palace"
 - 9.10. "Fighting the Queen"
- Enlightened Dustbringer (Chemoarish):
 - 3.5.8. "Forbidden Reliquary"
 - 4.2. "Sneaking at Night"
 - 4.3. "Dustcasting"
- Enlightened Edgedancer (Re-Shephir):
 - 5.4.1. "Midnight Reinforcements"
 - 8.7.3. "Midnight Essence"
 - 8.10.4. "Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother"
- Enlightened Truthwatcher (Moelach):
 - 3.2. "Blood on the Streets"
 - 7.1.3. "Trouble on the Road"
 - 7.9.10. "Marked for Death"
- Enlightened Lightweaver (Sja-anat):
 - 2.5. "Taker of Secrets"
 - 4.1. "Mission Briefing"
 - 9.2. "Sja-anat's Plan"
- Enlightened Elsecaller (Dai-Gonarthis):
 - 3.5.8. "Forbidden Reliquary"
 - 6.1.1. "Shadesmar Guide"
 - 6.8. "To the Physical Realm"
- Enlightened Willshaper (Ashertmarn):
 - 3.5.4. "Lavish Feast"
 - 5.2. "Revelry"
 - 5.3. "Heart of the Revel"
- Enlightened Stoneward (Ba-Ado-Mishram):
 - 5.4. "Hateful Vision"
 - 6.8.1. "Visions of Disdain"
 - 10.11. "Trail of the Ages"

0.4 Adventure Summary

Here is a brief summary of the plot of the story. You can use it to quickly familiarize yourself with the adventure events.

Shorter Options

All chapters form together a long, cohesive story. However, each of the chapters 6-10 is large enough to be played by itself as a smaller adventure.

You should be able to pick any one of them and run it as a one-shot adventure with minimal changes to the plot. Just make sure to adjust the starting level of the PCs accordingly.

You can also cut the adventure after chapter 5, ending the story with a cliffhanger.

0.4.1 Chapter 1 Summary

In the People's Hall, the characters discover glyphs accusing Queen Aesudan of the ten foolish attributes. Pai, the responsible ardent, is imprisoned for the crime.

0.4.2 Chapter 2 Summary

After the execution of Pai, riots start in the city. The rioters storm the Kholinar Palace. In the palace halls, the characters find a room full of mirrors with Sja-anat reflected in one of them. She urges the characters to bond her children to prepare for the coming storm.

0.4.3 Chapter 3 Summary

The riots continue. Highmarshal Azure organizes defenses and storms the monastery with goal to secure a Soulcaster located there. The characters, instructed by Sja-anat, aim to retrieve different artifacts from there. Finally, the Everstorm wakes Kholinar Parshmen.

0.4.4 Chapter 4 Summary

Newly awaken Singers gather around the city, laying a siege to it. The characters will need to use a Dustcaster retrieved from the monastery to tip the scales of that conflict.

0.4.5 Chapter 5 Summary

The characters must flee the city. The only path leads through the Kholinar Oathgate, currently occupied by reveling ardents.

0.4.6 Chapter 6 Summary

The party is stranded in the Shadesmar. They must travel through it to Kharbranth.

0.4.7 Chapter 7 Summary

While in Kharbranth, the party must negotiate with King Taravangian and convince him to let them travel to Urithiru.

0.4.8 Chapter 8 Summary

While in Urithiru, the party hears about Shallan's investigation to uncover the mystery of a series of murders. Their help could secure their connections inside the Tower.

0.4.9 Chapter 9 Summary

Dalinar and King Elhokar are mounting a rescue mission to Kholinar. This is a perfect opportunity to travel back and face Queen Aesudan.

0.4.10 Chapter 10 Summary

The characters are tasked with their final quest - they must travel to Spiritual Realm and find Ba-Ado-Mishram as she is the only one who can overrule Odium's reign.

It might be hard to proceed with your campaign on Roshar after chapter 10. If your players want to continue playing as their PCs, you should probably consider worldhopping somewhere else. Due to some Ghostbloods NPCs coming from Scadrial, you can consider going over there.

0.5 Dramatis Personæ

Following NPCs and fractions appear in the adventure:

- Chanri (she/her) - adolescent woman, most probably friend or family of the PCs; enthusiastic and impulsive, prone to getting into trouble.
- Gran-gran (she/her) - Chanri's grandmother, grumpy and fast to insult.
- Pai (she/her) - ardent of Devotary of Denial, accused Queen Aesudan of ten foolish attributes; her execution sparks the riots in Kholinar.
- Liha (she/her) - ardent, friend of Pai, got locked up after her imprisonment.
- Hoid (he/him) - nobody really important...

Royal Palace

The Palace closed its doors to the hardships troubling the city. Only queen's most trusted allies have access inside.

Following NPCs are related to this fraction:

- Queen Aesudan (she/her) - wife of King Elhokar, at his absence she rules the city; bonded to Yelignar, the Blightwind she got her soul corrupted and her judgment clouded.
- King Elhokar (he/him) - king of Alethkar, currently located in the Shattered Plains.
- King Gavilar (he/him) - former king of Alethkar, father of King Elhokar, killed by the Assassin in White.

Cult of Moments

Ardents close to Queen Aesudan herself, whose lives full of excess lead to drawing the sight of Ashertmarn, the Ashertmarn. Now their minds are lost, following only the beating of the terrible heart.

Following NPCs can be found in this fraction:

- Kharat (he/him) - guides new cultists to their first revelry.
- Kishi (she/her) - got attracted to the revelry in the Monastery; her unwillingness to follow Ashertmarn got her imprisoned.

Wall Guards

With Queen Aesudan secluded in her Palace, the responsibility to defend the city fell to the Wall Guards.

Following NPCs are included here:

- Highmarshal Azure (she/her) - took charge once the previous commander fell in the city riots; now she does her best to protect the city and its people.
- Ithi (she/her) - an Emerald Soulcaster from the city Monastery, got rescued by Highmarshal Azure during the city riots to soulcast food for them.

Singers

During the Everstorm, Kholinar parshmen are transformed into Singers who devastate the city before establishing a camp beyond its walls.

Following NPCs are included in this group:

- Nal (he/him) - malen worker at Gran-gran's.
- Tir (she/her) - femalen worker at Gran-gran's.
- Rishai (she/her) - wounded during the fights in Kholinar.
- Serin (she/her) - Envoyform Singer at the camp.

Shadesmar

In Shadesmar, also known as the Cognitive Realm, true spren built their own civilization, with cities, craftsmen, travelers and merchants.

Following NPCs are included in this group:

- Echo (he/him) - an Enlightened Lightspren, sent by Sja-anat to help the party with their journey.
- Riino (he/him) - a lighthouse keeper and an oracle.
- Hoarfrost (he/him) - frosty Cultivationspren, trader. Travels with his Coldspren.
- Floe (she/her) - frosty Cultivationspren, sister of Hoarfrost. She tends to the gardens at Unyielding Fidelity. Always wanted to bond with a human.
- Dew (she/her) - Cultivationspren painter and art merchant.
- Captain Gale (he/him) - Honorspren, ship captain.
- Captain Ava (she/her) - Peakspren, ship captain.
- Captain Chart (he/him) - Cryptic, pirate captain.

The Ghostbloods

Ruthless organization from a world of Scadrial, wielders of Allomancy - a magic unknown to anyone on Roshar.

Following NPCs are included in this group:

- Steel (he/him) - scouts the Shadesmar for anything interesting.
- Ferrum (he/him) - wounded in Kharbranth, gone missing.
- Big Al (he/him) - leader of Kholinar network, lost contact with the rest of the organization.
- Mraize (he/him) - Ghostbloods' leader on Roshar. Bonds with an Enlightened Cryptic.
- Iyatil (she/her) - mentor of Mraize. Mysterious and elusive, with access to off-world magic. Bonds with an Enlightened Inkspren.
- Veil (she/her) - Shallan's persona, spy and assassin, Ghostblood initiate.

Kharbranth

Also known as the City of Bells is a home to the best surgeons in the world. The medical care is free for everyone in the city and the Palanaeum allows for the highest quality of medical training.

Following NPCs can be met here:

- Tareh (he/him) - trader, wounded on the road to the city.
- Sartvian - noble family. Lady Sartvian recently lost her husband.
- Kina (she/her) - sick orphan, taken to the hospitals.
- Dor (he/him) - homeless orphan, is searching for Kina.
- Dorlivana (she/her) - artifabrain from Vedenar.

The Diagram

Several years ago, during a day of godlike intelligence, King Taravangian created the Diagram - a set of prophetic notes, predicting the future of Roshar. Ever since, a group named after it uses the Diagram to their advantage with hopes to save humanity from the aftermath of the Last Desolation.

Following NPCs are included in this group:

- Telvash (he/him) - surgeon.
- Arvia (she/her) - archivist, gathers recorded samples.
- Malata (she/her) - Dustbringer, guards King Taravangian.
- King Taravangian (he/him) - king of Kharbranth and leader of the Diagram.

Urithiru

An ancient city of Knights Radiant was recently rediscovered by alethi forces under the command of Dalinar. Now the alethi colonized the tower, making it a seat of alethi power.

Following NPCs can be met here:

- Dalinar (he/him) - the Bondsmith, leader of alethi forces.
- Shallan (she/her) - artist, scholar and a Lightweaver, uses Veil and Brightness Radiant personas to deal with non-academic problems.
- Brightness Radiant (she/her) - Shallan's persona, skilled warrior accustomed with military life.
- Adolin (he/him) - son of Dalinar, Shardbearer and excellent duelist.
- Renarin (he/him) - son of Dalinar, a Truthwatcher bonded to an Enlightened spren.
- Navani (she/her) - wife of Dalinar, artifabrian and a patron to scholars.
- Jasnah (she/her) - daughter of Navani, scholar of a world renown, an Elsecaller with much experience.
- Gavinor (he/him) - son of King Elhokar and Queen Aesudan, 3-year old baby.
- Kaladin (he/him) - Dalinar's bodyguard, a Windrunner.
- Meridas Amaram (he/him) - alethi highlord, leader of the Sons of Honor.

The Unmade

Following Unmade are referenced or make an appearance in the adventure:

- Sja-anat, the Taker of Secrets - eerie, mysterious and secretive, Sja-anat subtly arms and leads the PCs, arming them and manipulating them to achieve her own agenda.
- Nergaoul, the Thrill - violent and brutal, relishes in the sounds of battle, fueling the rage of rioters and warriors fighting in Kholinar.
- Chemoarish, Dustmother - gone for millennia, now only Dustcaster remains as a memento of her terrible power.
- Ashertmarn, the Ashertmarn - drawn to indulgence and excess, influences Cult of Moments in Kholinar.
- Dai-Gonarthis, the Black Fisher - since the Scouring of Aimia, only tales and Black Scallop remain of him.
- Moelach - often found near the dying people, showing them visions of the future known as Death Rattles.
- Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother - lurks in the depths of Urithiru, spawning creatures of horrors to torment its new inhabitants.
- Yelig-nar, the Blightwind - capable of bestowing the power of Surges, he is now bonded to Queen Aesudan, corrupting her soul.
- Ba-Ado-Mishram - once carrying the power to rival Odium himself, captured by ancient Radiants, she is now imprisoned in the Spiritual Realm plotting her revenge.

Roleplaying Sja-anat

Characteristics: Eerie, mysterious, ancient

Goal: Release Ba-Ado-Mishram to break free from Odium

Appearance: Slender woman with black, long, flowing hair, appearing as a reflection in mirrors

Sja-anat is very secretive and will not share her motivations with the party, telling them only as much they must know at the moment. She doesn't want to serve Odium anymore, but to break free she must ensure he is defeated and removed from the scene. Her best hope is Ba-Ado-Mishram who already once proved she can replace their master.

However, Ba-Ado-Mishram is imprisoned and hidden away. Sja-anat must find agents who can be manipulated into entering the Spirit Realm to release Ba-Ado-Mishram, and she must ensure they are strong enough for the job. A group of Radiants bonding her Enlightened children seem to be perfect candidates.

0.6 Before Starting the Campaign

Here are some tips and suggestions intended for the GM. Following them is not mandatory, but it might help you prepare and run the game.

0.6.1 Required Knowledge

As the story starts in Kholinar and spends most of the time there, the characters are expected to be familiar with Alethi culture, and as an extension - the players should also know the basics, especially about alethi fauna, flora, spren and raging highstorms.

In the later chapters, the story will move alongside the events of "Words of Radiance" and "Oathbringer". The players will experience the Everstorm, rebirth of the Singers, Revelry of Ashertmarn, and the dangers of Shadesmar. Make sure you are familiar with those.

0.6.2 Read the Adventure

You, as a GM, are expected to know the overall story of the campaign, so you could present the events with greater ease to your players, and, if a situation calls for it, modify them to your table's needs. Please familiarize yourself with most important NPCs, their goals and beliefs.

0.6.3 Players' Expectations

Inform the players that the story will start in Kholinar and may contain spoilers from the books, especially "Words of Radiance" and "Oathbringer". Later, some events of "Wind And Truth" may be also presented.

Please warn the players that Radiant Spren are rare in the area. Discuss with them beforehand if they are expecting to join any specific Radiant Order and what are the reasons for that. If a player explicitly wishes to play non-Enlightened Radiant, they should be allowed to do so, but the adventure assumes all Radiants are by default the Enlightened ones (note: that doesn't mean the spren and their knight are evil).

Please make sure you know what spren to introduce for a player aiming for a Radiant Path. The book allows for an easy bonding with Enlightened spren in Chapter 2 - Dust and the Unmade, but the characters may meet their spren before that moment (especially if they are aiming for non-Enlightened path).

On top of that, please discuss with your players following topics:

- How serious should the adventure be?
- What topics players would prefer to avoid during the game?

- Is there anything the players would like to see in the game?
- Are the players comfortable with their characters dying?
- Are the players comfortable with characters' romance, nudity or other sexual content?
- If you are of age - should your group allow alcoholic drinks?
- What rule variants should be in effect?
- How often should your group meet and how long should a single game session take?
- How should you handle situations when one player cannot attend a game session?

Gathering answers to those questions is not a requirement, but it will help you create a comfortable and enjoyable atmosphere for everyone.

NOTE: In Chapter 5 - Revel of Fools, the characters will enter an area influenced by Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel, encountering many NPCs indulging their deepest desires. This book will provide relatively mild and family-friendly descriptions, but if you are aiming for more daring scenes, please make sure all players at the table are comfortable with that.

NOTE: In the end of Chapter 7 - Whispers of the Slain, the party will visit a secret hospital in Kharbranth. Some of the scenes there may be too graphic and gruesome for the more sensitive players. Please make sure you know the boundaries your table is comfortable with, before you proceed with those descriptions.

0.6.4 Create Player Characters

Unless your players have their characters ready after previous adventures, they must create a new party. This book contains several pre-made character sheets you can use in your game (see Appendix F.), but you should encourage players to create more personalized heroes for the story.

While creating new characters, you might want to follow those guidelines:

- Encourage Human Ancestry, unless the player is familiar with more complex Singer rules and culture.
- Encourage Alethi culture or at least an expertise in it, as most of the story will take place in that area.
- Share Character Backstory Ideas table with your players for possible inspirations for characters, their motivations and goals for the story.

- If a player plans playing as Knight Radiant, make sure you know what spren to introduce in the story.
- Warn players that the usual Radiant Spren may not be easily encountered in the area.

0.6.5 Character Relationships

Allow players to determine how their characters know each other and what is the reason they are traveling together. Establishing characters' relations before the start of the adventure will make it less likely the heroes will be motivated to split the party and follow their own goals.

You can add more details to character's relationship by suggesting each player to ask about some specific details two other characters. Players can think of their own questions they want to ask each other or they can choose something from the list of below:

- I noticed you play with some trinket. What is it and why is it so important to you?
- It seems you have some skills not considered appropriate for you by alethi culture. How did you learn them?
- We share some unusual hobby/interest. What is it and how did we discover that fact about us?
- You shared a secret with me, once. What was it and why did you trust me with it?
- When we first met you didn't do a good impression on me. Why, and what happened it changed later?
- You once told me that doing the right thing is not always right. What did you mean by that?
- Despite living in Kholinar you don't always act like a typical alethi. What are the differences in your lifestyle?
- You once showed me you carry a drawing of a spren. What spren is it and why do you have this picture?
- You seem to have rather peculiar view on parshmen. What is it and how did you develop it?
- We once discussed our views on vorin church. What was your opinion on that matter?
- Do you remember the reign of King Gavilar? How do you find the new king?
- What was the most terrible battle that changed you? Why, and how did it change you as a person?

0.6.6 Character Backstory

Encourage players to write a short character backstory to better root them in the world and the story. Consider if any NPCs from those backstories could make an appearance in this adventure and how they can enrich the story. You can modify scenes described in this book to include those NPCs, for example:

- An NPC from the PC's backstory may be met in Kholinar. They might need protection, or escalate the situation, putting others in danger.
- The party can meet an NPC they know in the hospital of King Taravangian.
- Someone they know might have went to war on the Shattered Plains. The party might meet them in Urithiru.

You can also invite players to share some connections with the NPCs appearing in the story (Chanri and Gran-gran). That will make the first chapters of the story much more smoother and personal.

It is not a secret for the citizens, that there are several fractions pulling the strings in the city: Queen Aesudan and her Palace Guard, the Ardents and the Wall Guard. Some even whisper about some mysterious criminal organization operating in the shadows. The PCs would probably know about them and may even have some ties with one of them.

Starting Path	Reason	Questions	Goals
Envoy or Scholar	You are an ardent from the Holy Enclave in Valath. You traveled from Jah Keved to Alethkar to establish a dialogue with Kholinar ardents. You just arrived in the city, but so far you have been denied access to the Monastery here.	How far can you bend your beliefs and values to establish a common ground?	Improve relations between ardents from Jah Keved and Alethkar.
Agent or Hunter	You are employed by the Weeper, the deadliest assassin in Alethkar. You suspect she might have a contract targeting the queen, but so far you were tasked only with target observation.	Will you follow your orders? Or will you go solo and steal the glory?	Infiltrate the Kholinar Palace to access the queen.
Leader or Warrior	You were given the highest honor a military man could ever hope for - you were assigned to serve the royal family in the Kholinar Palace. The queen herself chose you as a reward for your bravery and martial prowess.	Can the queen count on your unwavering loyalty?	Protect all members of the royal family.
Hunter or Warrior	As a lighteye of a lower dahn, you are not rich enough to enjoy the luxuries of the nobility. Instead, you joined the Wall Guard. It's a good job - perhaps you can hope for a promotion and for sure it is not as dangerous as the Shattered Plains - what could go wrong in the city so far away from the war front?	How much will you sacrifice for the common people of Kholinar?	Defend the city.
Leader or Scholar	You left the days of your military service far behind you. Now you enjoy a well-earned retirement in the city you fought for so many times in the past. Let the others fight. Peace, at last.	Are you ready to draw your sword one more time?	Enjoy your peaceful retirement from military life.
Agent or Envoy	You are a Listener sent to Kholinar from the Shattered Plains. Pretending to be a common parshmen, your task is to infiltrate the enemy city and possibly make contact with local parshmen populace.	Who do you consider "your people"? Who will you fight for?	Find something to tip the scales of the war with alethi.

Chapter 1 - Fool Revealed

1.0 Running This Chapter

This chapter is loosely structured, allowing the PCs for an introduction, meeting with other PCs, and bonding with the NPCs.

At the end of the chapter the PCs will witness Pai accusing Queen Aesudan in the People's Hall - an event that will trigger all of the story.

1.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters start this chapter at level 1. Advance them to level 2 at the end of the chapter.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Helping to capture Pai
- Attempting to defend Pai
- The PCs' reaction to the encounters in the city.

1.0.2 Forging Alliances

The following actions can help the characters to become allies with Kholinar fractions:

- Condemning Pai's accusations may be noticed by Ardents and the Palace Guards.

1.0.3 Weather Conditions

The story starts during the Weeping, after the Lightday. Heavy overcast and constant rain are expected during first three chapters of the story. There will be no high-storms in that time.

1.0.4 Scarce Food

Recently it is difficult to acquire food in Kholinar. If any merchant has anything to sell, the price will be higher and higher as the time progresses.

For each chapter, add food value to its final cost. (e.g. during chapter 3., the price will be 4 times higher than normal: to the base price of 1x add it 3 times more because of the progressed time)

1.1 Life in Kholinar

Start the adventure by reading the following:

It is a few days after Lightday - the Weeping still continues to pour endless rains over the city of Kholinar. In the puddles of water gathered on the streets Rinspren stretch upwards towards the clouds like a blue candles.

Few people can be found on the streets in this weather - most often those are parshmen workers hauling baskets and boxes, never complaining on the weather conditions.

This adventure doesn't have any particular scenes or events to start the story. In the first scenes, focus on introducing the characters and bringing them together - your goal should be to get ready to move towards 1.2. "Sweet Home". This section will provide several examples of scenes you can use. In each scene you play in this chapter, you should remember to show:

- The NPCs you want to introduce
- Parshmen working in the background
- Food being scarce and expensive
- Populace growing unhappy with the queen's rule

People being unsatisfied with the current rule and lack of food will trigger major events in Chapter 2 - Dust and the Unmade. Use this chapter to paint the picture for your players.

Parshmen will play major role in Chapter 3 - Enemy Reborn, so start foreshadowing them right away. There will be less opportunity for that in Chapter 2 - Dust and the Unmade, so don't wait with that.

Chanri the Troublemaker

All example scenes for this part of the adventure feature Chanri. It is assumed she knows at least some people in the party (as a distant family or just a friend).

Roleplaying Chanri

Characteristics: Impulsive, reckless, enthusiastic

Goal: Help Gran-gran survive in starving city

Appearance: Young and thin, with light eyes and strands of hair unable to keep in order

Chanri is the embodiment of the proverb "Curiosity killed the skyeel". Trouble seem to follow her, often as a direct consequence of her impulsive actions. This doesn't seem to bother her, as she can always find something fun in every scenario.

The role of Chanri in the story is to ensure the players will see the most important events of the plot. Being reckless and impulsive, she will rush towards any danger without thinking. If the PCs wish to protect her, they will need to step out of their comfort zone and risk some unsafe actions.

1.1.1 Messing with the Wrong People

Start this scene by reading the following:

You stroll on the streets of Kholinar, when suddenly you hear a racket behind you. You turn to see a thin teenage girl running away from a few thugs chasing her.

"Look, I'm sorry I stole your food, but I'm not giving it back!", she shouts to one of them, then she quickly adds looking at you: "A little help, perhaps?"

The thugs (use Rioter stat block) are chasing Chanri. There are as many of them as the PCs (at least two). If the characters intervene, the thugs will fight until there is only one of them left, at which point he will escape.

Chanri will not participate in the fight, but she will thank the characters for their help.

If possible, weave Chanri into your characters' backstories. She will appear quite a lot in the first chapters, often driving the plot forward.

1.1.2 Hungry Axehounds

When you start this scene, read the following:

You see a teenage girl surrounded by a pack of axehounds, clicking aggressively at her. The girl holds some package above her head.

"It's my food, guys!", she pleads with the pack. "Go buy your own!"

Chanri is being surrounded by Hungry Axehounds (two Axehounds per PC). If attacked, the pack will fight to the end.

The characters may also attempt an Intimidation test or a Leadership test against respective Defenses of an Hungry Axehound to scare them or command them away. Any test is made with disadvantage unless the PC uses some food before to befriend the animals.

1.1.3 Soaking Wet

When you start this scene, read the following:

You see a group of parshmen doing laundry in a clean waters of the Weeping. Nearby, a young woman observes their efforts.

"Do you think they have a havah in there?", Chanri asks. "I would need one, my old one is... well... well, I need a new one!"

Chanri attempts to find and steal a havah dress from the parshmen. The PCs can help her in this attempt, or they may try to persuade her to do better.

Helping Chanri

If the characters wish to help Chanri, you can run the rest of the scene as an endeavor. The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 5 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

The party must use Perception to find the dress, Thievery and Stealth to take it without being noticed and perhaps some Intimidation or Deception if they are caught by the workers.

Stopping Chanri

If the characters wish to stop Chanri, you can run the rest of the scene as a conversation. For the purpose of the scene, you can assume Chanri is an Expert Citizen (see Stormlight World Guide). Chanri has a Cognitive defense of 13, a Spiritual defense of 13, and 4 Focus. She leads a reckless life full of impulsive choices, but she is not a bad person.

If Chanri's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

1.1.4 Chull-sliding

Start this scene with the following:

You enter a marketplace, closed for the trade at this hour. There, a chull caravan is resting after a long travel.

"Hey, look, a real chulls!", Chanri says. "Have you ever played a chull-sliding? I always wanted to try!", she adds before running to the caravan.

Chanri will climb the biggest chull to slide down on its shell. The PCs can join her. Unless they finish the game soon enough, read the following:

Suddenly a merchant appears in the nearest building's window. "Thieves! They steal my chulls! Call the guards!"

A merchant - Expert Citizen (see Stormlight World Guide) - enters the scene. The PCs can quickly enter a conversation to calm him down. The merchant has a Cognitive defense of 13, a Spiritual defense of 13, and 4 Focus. He is very protective of the caravan and finds this kind of games foolish.

If the merchant's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

If the party fails or ignores attempts to calm the merchant down, four Wall Guards will soon appear. The party can fight them or flee the scene.

If they choose the latter, you can run it as a pursuit endeavor with a Starting Distance of 2 and an Escape Distance of 4. If the guards catch the party, they will attempt to arrest them, which probably will start a combat encounter.

1.1.5 Grateful Invitation

If the party helps Chanri to deal with her troubles, she will be really grateful for the aid. As a thank you, she will invite the PCs to her home, so they could eat something and warm themselves in a dry house. Proceed to 1.2. "Sweet Home".

1.2 Sweet Home

When the PCs enter Chanri's home, read the following:

You enter a stone building, dimly illuminated with a few candles. On the upper floor, in a sickbed lays an old woman.

"Chanri? Is that you, Chanri?", the woman asks. "Where have you been, you stupid girl? What took you so storming long?"

Laying in the bed is Gran-gran Veda, a grandmother of Chanri. She is seldom happy with anything and she always makes her disappointment vocal. In fact, her loud complaints are dominating each conversation.

Roleplaying Gran-gran Veda

Characteristics: Grumpy, ungrateful, unlikable

Goal: Complain and insult

Appearance: Elderly and frail lighteye

Bitter and resentful, Gran-gran remembers much better days. Nowadays everything is worse and everyone does everything wrong. Gran-gran cannot tolerate this foolishness, making sure every minor error is loudly complained about. She does not have a time to care about the feelings of others. She is a lighteye (of lower dahn) elder, and she deserves only the best!

In the whole scene, there is little to do for the characters. They can of course join conversation, react to a NPC's behavior, etc, but there is no larger goal. The scene is here to paint the picture of Chanri's family and it directs characters to 1.3. "People's Hall". You can modify the scenes from here as long as you achieve those goals.

The point of this location is to ensure the PCs always have a place in Kholinar they can call home and use for resting. Unlikable NPC of Gran-gran introduces moral choice - will they help her during the troubles ahead? Or will they ignore her? While rescuing good and friendly NPCs is an obvious choice, here the PCs can show their character and personality.

1.2.1 Parshmen Servants

For this scene, read the following:

A female parshmen approaches Gran-gran with a bowl of steaming meal. She kneels next to a bed and starts gently feeding weak woman. However, after the first spoon, she starts shouting:

"That's disgusting! What are you giving me, stupid chull? Talley? I am a storming lighteye!" She smashes the bowl on the floor, then adds: "Clean that up, you idiot! Damnation, you are so useless, I paid too much for you!"

Nal (he/him) and Tir (she/her) are two parshmen working for Gran-gran. Suffice to say - nobody is happy about this arrangement...

Give the characters a moment to interact with the PCs, perhaps comfort the parshmen, or try to calm Gran-gran down.

Gran-gran's terrible treatment of her parshmen workers will reap the consequences in 3.6.1. "Ungrateful Servants".

1.2.2 Unhospitable Host

After Chanri invites the party to eat something, read the following:

As the male parshmen starts preparing food for the dinner, Gran-gran shouts from her bed:

"Hey, what are you doing? This is our food, paid for with our money! We are not doing beggar's feast in here to give it for free! Go beg the queen for free scraps, it's her fault the city is starving now! But leave our storming supplies alone!"

Allow Chanri to mutter some awkward apologies and attract some shamespren. Unless the PCs act, proceed to the next interaction.

1.2.3 Gran-gran's Demand

Before you finish the scene in Gran-gran's home, read the following:

As you are gathering on the ground floor, you hear Gran-gran shouting to Chanri:

"You must get me a proper food this time, not this talley filled with cremlings! You can eat that yourself! Go to the market next to the People's Hall, they know who I am! You hear me? Tomorrow! First thing in the morning!"

As the characters leave the house, Chanri will see them off:

"Bye! And once again, thank you for today! Sorry for Gran-gran, she is just... well... she's just Gran-gran... But I know she liked you! Feel free to visit us anytime you need!"

"By the way, will you join me tomorrow morning at the market? The one next to the People's Hall! Please?"

Once the characters are invited to witness the events of 1.3. "People's Hall", you can end this section.

1.2.4 Aftermath

Once the players complete their interactions in this scene, you can proceed to 1.3. "People's Hall".

1.3 People's Hall

If the characters attempt to meet Chanri the next morning, start the scene with 1.3.1. "Gathering Crowd".

If they decide to skip this meeting, finish this chapter and proceed to Chapter 2 - Dust and the Unmade. There, they can learn what happened with Pai while hearing the gossiping people.

1.3.1 Gathering Crowd

Start the scene by reading the following:

As you approach the market and the People's Hall, you can see a small crowd rushing inside the Hall. The food merchant you wanted to trade with just closed his store. "Is that true? I must see it!", he mutters to himself as he rushes next to you.

As the characters follow the crowd inside, proceed to 1.3.2. "Ten Glyphs".

1.3.2 Ten Glyphs

Once the PCs push through the crowd, read the following:

You stop a few paces before a dais with the Common Throne, beneath which there is an ardent kneeling. Around you can see ten glyphs, one for each foolish attribute:

Avarice
Callousness
Profligacy

and so on...

A PC with an expertise in Vorin theology will recognize the glyphs as Ten Foolish Attributes from the teachings.

If at least one of the characters can read alethi women's script, they will be able to read:

Below each of the glyphs there is a smaller writing:

Avarice
The queen gathers goods she does not have a use for.

Callousness
Blind to her people's needs, the queen terminated Beggar's Feast.

Profligacy
Food rots and is wasted in the palace, while the city starves.

Spoiler Info

Events leading to this moment are described in "Words of Radiance", Interlude I-12: Lhan.

1.3.3 Blind Accusations

After the PCs discover the glyphs, read the following:

Suddenly several guards with queen's colors enter the People's Hall. One of them approaches you.

"Who did this?", he asks. "Was it you? Hey answer me! Why did you do that!", he shouts, his arm reaching to his sword.

False Radiant accuses one of the PCs of painting the glyphs. With hand on his sword, he is ready to arrest the characters, drawing weapons on the first sign of resistance. More False Radiants are nearby - starting a fight will probably make them join it.

The characters may try to talk their way out of the trouble. Run it as a conversation. False Radiant has a Cognitive defense of 15, a Spiritual defense of 18, and 5 Focus. The guard is clearly agitated and blind to reason. He fears the queen will punish him unless he quickly finds a person responsible for the glyphs.

In the conversation, False Radiant will use mostly Intimidation. If False Radiant's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

Try to convince your players the situation is serious. Make them terrified of a huge guard in full armor and his companions. Make other NPCs scared of the guards, making it clear they will not join the fight.

In this scene, there is no danger for the PCs. Instead, use it to make them roleplay their characters in the dire situation. What will they do? Will they instantly accuse harmless ardent? Or will they make a heroic sacrifice to protect her?

1.3.4 Pai's Capture

Regardless of the conversation result, follow with the below:

"Hey, give it a rest!", another guard says. "It's clearly the ardent, those here know nothing about it. You two, take her away", he adds, pointing at the kneeling clerk.

When the ardent is taken away, there is no fear in her eyes. Only calm acceptance.

Once the guards take Pai away, you can complete this chapter.

1.4 Journeying Onward

After the characters witness the arrest of Pai, advance them to level 2 and proceed to Chapter 2 - Dust and the Unmade.

Chapter 2 - Dust and the Unmade

2.0 Running This Chapter

In this chapter, public execution of Pai starts city riots. During those, the character will sooner or later need to find somewhere safe to find. At that moment, they will meet with Sja-anat, who will set their objectives for the future.

2.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters start this chapter at level 2. Advance them to level 3 after they meet Sja-anat.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Attempting to free Pai
- Defending people during riots
- Bonding Sja-anat's children

2.0.2 Forging Alliances

The following actions can help the characters to become allies with Kholinar factions:

- Defending ardents during the riots
- Helping palace guard defend the palace

2.1 Growing Unrest

After the events of 1.3. "People's Hall", give the characters full day before starting 2.2. "Execution". The PCs can follow their goals, continuing encounters from 1.1. "Life in Kholinar", with small changes in the general atmosphere:

- Common folk discuss the accusations Pai painted in the People's Hall
- Some people declare Pai a sower of discord, accusing her of being irresponsible and her manifesto groundless (see 2.1.1. "Blaming Pai")
- Some people blame incompetent ardents who lost their faith for all of this situation (see 2.1.2. "Heretic Thoughts")

- Others, very carefully, agree with the ardent, blaming Queen Aesudan for all the problems in the city (see 2.1.3. "Treasonous Whispers")

Allow at least one comment from each group slip into PC's encounters with NPCs, to show various range of opinions spreading through the city. After that, when full day have passed, proceed to 2.2. "Execution".

2.1.1 Blaming Pai

When roleplaying NPCs believing Pai was wrong, you can use the following quotes:

- She shouldn't have written that... No, she shouldn't have...
- That girl must have something wrong with her head...
- Unbelievable... To write such things...
- We're at war, doesn't she know that? We cannot turn on each other now...
- All this Weeping without the Highstorms must have made her insane!

2.1.2 Heretic Thoughts

When roleplaying NPCs losing their faith in the city ardents, you can use the following quotes:

- Those ardents should be locked in their monastery, I tell you!
- The ardents play the nobles' game far too long, they don't care about us, the common folk!
- It is Hierocracy all over again, mark my words!
- They can't control their own people, someone should show them where's their place!
- She blames the queen, but I blame the ardents. They are supposed to guide her, aren't they?

2.1.3 Treasonous Whispers

When roleplaying NPCs who blame the queen, you can use the following quotes:

- That ardent is right, the queen has forgotten us...
- King Gavilar at least cared about this city...
- Where are the Beggars' Feasts, hm? Where are they...?
- I'm hearing some rumors, the palace steals our food just to throw it away! No, really, it's true!
- I was told the queen is not faithful - neither to the Almighty, nor to her husband!

2.2 Execution

Start this section by reading the following:

You see Chanri rushing towards you. "The ardent!", she gasps. "They are executing her!", she adds before running towards the execution stage. You see more and more people rushing in that direction.

The PCs are expected to follow the crowd, in which case, proceed to 2.2.1. "Excited Populace".

If the characters decide to ignore this event, the next thing they know are riots starting in the city. Proceed to 2.3. "Riots at the Gallows", but don't describe things that could be experienced only at the gallows.

2.2.1 Excited Populace

when the characters reach the execution site, read the following:

The crowd here is growing with every minute.

"Finally, something is happening in this city", says someone. "We haven't got any proper execution since that meat thief guy!"

"Nah, they cannot kill her!", someone answers. "She did nothing wrong, she was right, actually..."

Give the characters some time to react to the crowd or perhaps come with some plan. Their attempts to stop the execution will not succeed, but they might help them attract spren or complete other goals.

Once there is nothing more the players wish to do, proceed to 2.2.2. "Queen's Verdict".

Pai's execution is a pivotal moment in the story, sparking the riots and as a result all future events. Reward players' planning and good rolls, but do not allow them to free Pai or stop the hanging.

2.2.2 Queen's Verdict

Once it seems the characters are ready for the situation to unfold, read the following:

The ardent is brought by palace guards and queen's faithful. She is placed right below the gallows' noose, while a fat ardent unrolls a scroll and starts reading the verdict:

"We are here to resolve a case of Ardent Pai from the Devotary of Denial. She is charged with crimes of lèse-majesté, heresy, and an attempt to refound the Hierocracy.

"The queen in her mercy decided to grant a royal pardon for all the insults from the mouth of the charged. However, the crimes of heresy and Hierocracy affiliation are too severe to be ignored. Therefore, you are sentenced to death by hanging. May the Almighty have a mercy on your soul!"

The crowd is unhappy with the verdict. Some of them boo, others throw rotten food on the guards. However, they are not actively hostile yet.

Give the characters some time to react. They won't be able to stop the execution, but their actions may affect their future story.

After a brief moment, read the following:

One of the ardents escorts Pai on the box, another puts a noose on her neck. She is calm and serene, accepting her fate with pride. Soon after, the rope jerks, and ardent Pai is no more...

Spoiler Info

Hanging Pai by the order of Queen Aesudan is referenced in "Oathbringer", Chapter 62: Research.

2.2.3 Aftermath

Immediately after hanging of Pai proceed to 2.3. "Riots at the Gallows".

2.3 Riots at the Gallows

After Pai is executed, read the following:

"She was innocent and you know it!", someone from the crowd shouts to the ardents. Another throws something disgusting at the guard, who gets hit right in the face.

"That's enough, you scum!", he bellows as he draws his sword and approaches the commoner.

Riots started at the Kholinar gallows. Play a few scenes from the list below, before you proceed to the next section: 2.4. "Storming the Palace".

2.3.1 Guard's Blood

You can start with the scene below:

With one slash of the sword, the guard cuts helpless men in half, his blood gathering in a scarlet pool on the stone. Everyone around is shocked, but only for a second. In the next moment angry mob is charging the guard standing in their midst.

One False Radiant is attacked by five Rioters. It is too late to calm any of the sides down, they are ready to kill each other and they will not run from the fight. The characters can join the fight to help one of the sides.

2.3.2 Ardent in Danger

Nearby, the PCs can witness another scene:

You can see furious rioters pulling one of the ardents from the gallows stand. Another man of the faith wanted to pull him back, but in the end both of them ended up falling from the wooden platform. Now, they are surrounded. "You will die just like her!" one of the rioters shouts.

Two Ardents (use Cultist of Moments, no variant, stat block) are surrounded by six Rioters ready to dismember them. One of them is Prone. If the PCs wish, they can join the fight for any of the sides. The Rioters will not stop, until the Ardents are slain.

2.3.3 Dangerous Accusation

If the PCs have sided with the Ardents or False Radiants since their arrival at the gallows, read the following:

"Hey, and who are you?!?", one of the rioters shouts to you. "Are you with them???"

Soon more of them turn towards you, hatred in their eyes.

The PCs are attacked by eight Rioters who will fight until death. Any character who wishes to flee may attempt a DC 12 Stealth check test to hide in the crowd.

2.4 Storming the Palace

Once there was enough encounters played at the gallows, read the following:

Through the chaos rising at the plaza, suddenly you hear angry voices:
"It's all queen's fault!"
"She stole our food!"
"Down with the queen!"
Suddenly, whole shapeless mass of people moved, running towards the palace.

Angry mob is storming the Kholinar Palace. If the PCs don't join them immediately, add the following:

From the moving crowd one hand reaches to you. Chanri catches your arm:
"Come on! We're gonna get her!", she manages to shout before the wave of people pushes her forward.

If the characters wish to protect Chanri, they should follow the crowd towards the palace - proceed with the events of 2.4.1. "Palace Gates".

If they decide they should probably flee somewhere safer, skip the palace part and proceed to 2.4.3. "Run For Your Life!" (just make it happen on the streets of Kholinar, not inside the palace).

2.4.1 Palace Gates

When the PCs reach palace gates, read the following:

You arrive with the mass of rioters at the palace entrance. The angry mob charged without thinking at fully armed guards, while the others forced the gates open. For a short moment, you think you see Chanri rushing inside with the others

There are two False Radiants here, each of them is fighting with numerous Rioters. The PCs may join the fight if they wish to gather better weapons. They can also rush after Chanri inside the palace - in that case, proceed to 2.4.2. "Palace Halls".

2.4.2 Palace Halls

When the PCs enter the palace to find Chanri, read the following:

You find Chanri deep inside the palace corridors. She's standing over the dead guard and dozen dead rioters, bloodied sword in her hand.

"Hey, over here!", she waves and grins to you, her face red with blood. "We've got one".

Her joy is short-lived. Soon after, another guard runs in from behind the corner.

If the characters decide to flee, continue to 2.4.3. "Run For Your Life!".

If the characters decide to stay, they will face False Radiant. Every round or two, allow another Rioter to join the fight. Once the combat is resolved, if it wasn't enough to scare the PCs off, read the following:

You hear more heavy steps running from the inside of the palace. "Over there!", you hear the guard's voice "More of those filth is in this corridor!"

You realize there is too many of them. "Oh storms!", pale Chanri cries, drawing fearspren. "They will storming kill us all...!"

The party must grab Chanri and run away. Proceed to 2.4.3. "Run For Your Life!".

2.4.3 Run For Your Life!

The characters must flee from the incoming palace forces. Run this as an Pursuit Endeavor with starting distance of 2 and escape distance of 5. Once the party reaches the escape distance, they will need to find some safe room to hide inside.

If the Pursuit distance is reduced to 0, allow False Radiant one free attack against one of the characters, but don't end the scene - allow them to still run away.

If at least one of the players started attracting an Enlightened Radiant spren, they will actively help during this scene. Award the party one free success in the endeavor. Also, at the end of the Pursuit, they will show the party the best room to hide in.

Once the characters are safely hidden from the palace guard, proceed to 2.5. "Taker of Secrets".

This entire scene is a setup for a meeting with Sja-Anat. The players cannot fail here, the meeting must happen as it enables all future events. If your players are having a bad luck in this scene, give them some help in a form of additional rioters appearing or simply spawning the proper room behind a corner, and allowing the guards to never see the party entering it, regardless of the Pursuit results.

2.5 Taker of Secrets

When the characters enter the Room of Mirrors, read the following:

As you close the door behind you, you hear the footsteps of your enemies running away. You are safe...

Without queen's forces on your heels, you take a moment to look around. You are in a room full of mirrors - some of them reaching the ceiling, the others - smaller and lying on the floor. They are all covered in dust, some of them are broken or hidden under a sheets of cloth.

Suddenly you see a movement. In one of the mirrors there is a black silhouette of a young woman, with huge, white eyes. She is looking at you, slowly smiling.

If one of the characters already started bonding an Enlightened Radiant spren who helped during the chase, add the following:

"You did well, my child", you hear the reflection saying to your spren. "You brought them to me, just as I asked!"

2.5.1 Talking with Sja-anat

Continue by reading:

The reflection turns you: "There is not much time! Big changes are coming, and you must be ready for them. But do not worry, I will guide you, and my children are here to help!"

It is natural for the characters to be confused and have some questions. Allow them to talk with Sja-anat before she points them their next objective.

Who are you?

I am Sja-anat. I am not your enemy.

What are you?

I am spren, an ancient one. We were made, then unmade. But now, I am your only hope if you wish to stay alive!

Is there more spren like you?

There are others like me in the city, yes. But you wouldn't like meeting them, they would not wish to help you.

What should we fear?

The storm is coming, an ancient storm, and with it, an ancient enemy. This city will fall, its people will fall, and the rivers of blood will flow.

How can you help us?

The people of this world wielded great power, once. My children can help you wield it once more.

Why should we trust you?

Fearful and careful. That is wise. But sadly, the time for wisdom is growing short. I am your only hope to leave this place alive.

Why are you helping us?

I will serve no longer, I am not of the enemy, I am of me. I will rise free, but for that, the changes must come.

Roleplaying Sja-anat

Detailed roleplay tips for Sja-anat are described in 0.5. "Dramatis Personæ".

2.5.2 Bonding an Enlightened Spren

If a character wishes to bond an Enlightened Spren, but hasn't attracted one so far, Sja-anat can facilitate a meeting. It is up to GM's discretion if the meeting will happen in this moment or in a few scenes later, but any character who wants to start this path should meet their spren before Chapter 3 - Enemy Reborn.

Sja-anat can only help with bonding an Enlightened spren. If a player does not wish for Enlightenment but would rather follow standard Radiant path, it is out of her power to help with that. Also, it might be hard for a character to find such a spren in the Kholinar, the area is not really welcoming for them right now.

Nobody To Bond With

If for some reason no character wishes to bond an Enlightened spren, Sja-anat will send one or two of them to accompany the party either way as she might wish to have an eye on them. On top of that - their presence might be important in the future parts of the story, so make sure there is always one ready for making a bond.

OK, let's be honest. This is a story about Enlightened Radiants, made with a sole purpose to play with Enlightened spren. It would be a huge missed opportunity if a player didn't want to follow that path, and I would suggest to encourage them to this adventure.

If for some reason the player is strongly convinced not to play as Enlightened Radiant, but still wishes to follow a Radiant path, you should probably make an exception and allow them to bond whoever they want.

If for roleplay reasons a player chooses not to trust Sja-anat, that is a valid choice. You should still allow them to bond her spren if they wanted to - they don't need to serve her, their story might follow them actively going for the artifacts she desires just not to let her get them.

Path to Enlightenment

Meeting or talking to Sja-anat, the Taker of Secrets, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Lightweaver (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

Path to Enlightenment

Entering the grounds of the Kholinar Palace influenced by Yelig-nar, the Blightwind, can expedite an Enlightened Skybreaker (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

Spoiler Info

Similar encounter with Sja-anat is shown in "Oathbringer", Chapter 84: The One You Can Save.

2.5.3 The Mission

Once the characters finished all the questions and meeting their new spren, read the following:

"Now, you must go!", Sja-anat says to you from the mirror. "The time is short. You must leave this place, gather your allies, and while everyone is distracted with the chaos all around them, enter ardent monastery in the city. There, in the deepest and darkest rooms, you will find ancient artifacts of my kind. Take them! You will need them sooner than you think, too soon... Hurry!"

Once Sja-anat points the PCs to their next objective, you can complete this chapter.

2.6 Journeying Onward

After the characters receive instructions from Sja-anat advance them to level 3 and proceed to Chapter 3 - Enemy Reborn.

Image 2.1: Sja-anat, the Taker of Secrets (art by Aki)

Chapter 3 - Enemy Reborn

3.0 Running This Chapter

In this chapter, the riots continue on the streets of Kholinar. Highmarshal Azure defends city gates and storms the monastery, while helpless parshmen are slaughtered on the streets by queen's orders.

In this chaos, the characters follow their own agenda - they must reclaim ancient artifacts of the Unmade from the Ardent Monastery.

Starting from this chapter, this book assumes Chanri might have died in the riots and she is referenced no more. If in your game she survived, it is up to you how to tell her story - she may die from the hands of newborn Singers during 3.6. "The Everstorm", or she may live to meet the PCs again during Chapter 9 - Darkness Slain. Who knows, she might even bond an Enlightened spren (knowing her personality, probably a lightspren)

3.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters start this chapter at level 3. Advance them to level 4 at the end of this chapter.

Depending on the player choices, this chapter may be encounter-rich, or finish quicker if the party remains focused to complete their objective as soon as possible.

If you feel the chapter is getting longer, consider advancing the party to level 4 as you trigger 3.6. "The Everstorm" events. If you do so, do not award them additional level at the end of the chapter, they should start Chapter 4 - Enemy Unmade to Dust at level 4 no matter how many encounters did they have during the riots.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Calming angry mob or leading them to riot against queen's herald
- Defending helpless parshmen or helping to execute them
- Fighting with Nergaoul nearby can expedite an Enlightened Windrunner
- Seeing ancient artifacts of the Unmade can expedite an Enlightened Dustbringer or Elsecaller

3.0.2 Forging Alliances

The following actions can help the characters to become allies with Kholinar fractions:

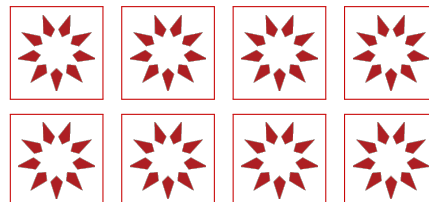

- Helping Highmarshal Azure to defend the gates and secure the monastery
- Fighting alongside the Cult of Moments against Highmarshal Azure and the parshmen
- Defending helpless parshmen and newly born Singers

3.0.3 Event: The Thrill of Battle

As the fights rise in the city, Nergaoul, the Thrill gets attracted by the screams of battle and the blood of the wounded.

EVENT

Triggers when the final Complication slot is filled.

The Thrill of Battle

Progressing the Event

Each time a complication is rolled during a fight in Kholinar, you can spend it to progress the event by 1, trading an immediate Complication for the Nergaoul's attention.

Each time a PC kills a foe in Kholinar while there are other enemies still alive, they must pass DC 15 Discipline check. On a failure, progress the event by 1.

Triggering the Event

Once the final complication slot is filled, Nergaoul arrives to Kholinar. From now on, during all combat scenes, all characters (PCs and NPCs) are affected by the following rules:

Thrill of Murder

Raise Stakes each time a melee attack is made. On a ✨, add +3 to that d20 roll and that attack grazes all characters adjacent to both the attacker and the defender (without spending Focus).

Keep Fighting!

If a character wishes to move away from the enemy or stop fighting (e.g. when there are no enemies left), they must make a DC 15 Discipline check. On a failure they must keep fighting and attempt an attack against any character in the scene, including an ally. If the character passes the test, they no longer repeat it during next rounds of this combat scene.

Path to Enlightenment

Fighting in the battle influenced by Nergaoul, the Thrill, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Windrunner (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

3.0.4 Death Rattles

When a nearby NPC dies, you can consider marking his death with a Death Rattle, especially if there is an Enlightened Truthwatcher in the party.

You can make up your own Death Rattles (either random nonsense or foreshadowing prophecy), or you can pick one from the examples presented in Appendix 3: Death Rattles.

Path to Enlightenment

Hearing a Death Rattle sent by a Moelach can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Truthwatcher (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

Moelach will have its own arc dedicated for its influence in Chapter 7 - Whispers of the Slain. Do not expedite an Enlightened Truthwatcher more than once in this chapter.

3.1 Proclamation

Start the events of this chapter by reading the following:

You see small crowd gathering around a woman wearing queen's colors who stands on some box in the middle of a street. She is accompanied by royal guards and is holding a piece of parchment.

The crowd around grows agitated with each passing moment.

Female herald is an Expert Citizen (see Stormlight World Guide) guarded by two False Radiants. The crowd throws rotten food at them, but they are ignoring it.

The characters can lead the riot against them or try to calm the people. If the fight starts, the herald flees, leaving her scroll behind for the PCs to find, but the guards will stand and fight against the people. If no fighting starts, after a few moments the herald reads the content of the scroll:

We, Aesudan, by the grace of Almighty and His Heralds, Queen of the Alethkar, do hereby proclaim that all parsh people are the Voidbringers in hiding and therefore enemies to the realm and our faith. It is our order to exterminate all parsh people taking shelter behind the walls of Kholinar.

After reading the proclamation, the herald and the guards walk away, leaving angry and confused people behind.

If the riots start before the herald can read the order, she leaves the scroll behind in a hurry. Any character who can read in alethi will be able to learn its contents.

Spoiler Info

Queen Aesudan proclaiming parsmen to be Voidbringers and ordering their execution is referenced in "Oathbringer", Chapter 62: Research.

3.2 Blood on the Streets

To reach the monastery, the characters will need to travel through streets of Kholinar. That will spawn multiple opportunities for smaller encounters on the streets. Use this section for some inspiration, especially if the characters take more time to reach the monastery.

However, before you allow the PCs to chart their course, read the following:

When you step on the street, you see a smoke rising from the city walls. Some people run away from that direction.
"The gate! They are attacking the gate!", one of them shouts.

From here, the characters can rush towards the city gates, sneak to the monastery or even attempt their luck to enter the palace. When they walk on the streets it is possible for the events below to happen:

3.2.1 More Proclamations

If long enough time has passed since the previous queen's proclamation read by her herald, a new one can be announced. Each proclamation starts with the same preamble:

We, Aesudan, by the grace of Almighty and His Heralds, Queen of the Alethkar, do hereby proclaim that...

Each new proclamation errs on the edge of insanity, painting the picture of a queen descending into madness and religious fanaticism. None of the announcements seem to acknowledge ongoing riots. Examples may include:

- All lights should be put out after dark and the spheres covered with cloth to make it harder for Voidbringers to find Kholinar in the dead of the night.
- People should pray to the Almighty out in the open each day, including highstorm days, to beg for absolution and mercy for Kholinar.
- Each household should sacrifice a chull to beg the Almighty for the King's victory over the Voidbringers on the Shattered Plains.
- All people, both men and women, should adjust their clothing to cover both freehand and safehand as a sign of modesty and humility.
- All people should face the Origin and sing ten songs to the ten heralds ten times a day.

- Tallew gathered on odd days of the week is proclaimed impure and should be burnt. Only tallew gathered on even days are admitted for consumption.
- People shall bring all of their foods and drinks to the ardents to be purified with prayers before they can be consumed.

3.2.2 Violent Clash

When starting this encounter, read the following:

You hear battle roars and cries of pain. The street is red with blood. You can't tell who started this fight, there are wounded on both sides.

Choose 2 groups of adversaries:

- 1d4 Wall Guards
- 1d6 Rioters
- 1d6 Cultists (each Cultist of Moments of random kind)

Those groups fight with each other. They ignore the characters, but will attack them once they enter the conflict helping one of the sides.

3.2.3 Helpless Parshmen

When starting this encounter, read the following:

You see a docile parshmen worker, hauling some boxes. Angry mob gathers around him.
"Storming Voidbringer!", one of the rioters shouts as he raises his hammer. "Die, you filth!"

A Docile Parshmen is surrounded by 1d6 Rioters. Unless the characters intervene, they will kill the worker. The party can also join them and execute queen's order.

You can repeat this encounter multiple times, changing some details of the scene:

- You can change aggressors' fraction, cycling between Rioters, Wall Guards and Cultists.
- The parshmen can have different coloration of patterns and occupation.
- If the party is quick to follow queen's order, introduce moral dilemma by making subsequent parshmen even more helpless: make them old and barely moving, pregnant or just a kid.

3.2.4 Hostile Rioters

When you start this encounter, read the following:

You did not see that coming. A heavy blow hits you in the back. "You are one of them, aren't you?", the rioter asks. "Where do you think you are going? This street is ours!"

The party is attacked by 1d6 + 2 Rioters. Each character who doesn't pass DC 15 Perception check is Surprised in the first round of the fight. The enemies fight until there are only 2 of them left, at which moment they flee.

3.2.5 Cult Procession

1d4 + 4 Cultists (each Cultist of Moments of random kind) walk in procession through Kholinar streets. They seem oblivious to riots all around them and they will not attack if unprovoked. If the characters start the fight, they fight to the end. None of them carries anything valuable.

Spoiler Info

Similar procession is described in "Oathbringer", Chapter 61: Nightmare Made Manifest.

3.2.6 Hungry Beggar

When the party meets the beggar, read the following:

You see an old and dirty man wearing rags, who begs on the side of the street. "Please, I haven't eaten for days", he asks, reaching his only healthy hand towards you.

The characters can share the food with the beggar. It is a right thing to do, but they cannot expect anything in return, and food is scarce in the city...

You can repeat this encounter several times, changing the beggar NPC each time to someone new.

3.2.7 Wounded Enemy

When you introduce this encounter, read the following:

You can see the rioters fought here not so long ago. The street is painted red with pools of blood, dead bodies lie scattered everywhere. You want to leave when you hear faint voice: "Please... help me..."

The party meets one badly wounded adversary (one from Wall Guard, Rioter and Cultist of Moments). They can help him if they so choose.

To make this encounter more interesting, choose an NPC from the faction the characters are the most hostile towards.

3.2.8 Trouble at Home

If the party decides to return to Gran-gran during the riots, read the following:

You hear grandma Veda even before you enter the building:

"Hey! Where are your manners! Just come here, you storming son of a chul! I will teach you! Hey, I am talking to you, you hear me? Come here! You will regret..."

Two Rioters and one Wall Guard are looting the place. They ignore the old lady and the parshmen, but they will turn hostile when they notice the PCs entering. When only one of them is left standing, he will try to flee the building.

3.2.9 It's a Hard Work

The characters may decide that the riots are the best opportunity for some side job in the goods liberation and redistribution business. Depending on the value of the loot they are aiming for, consider no resistance, some competition in a form of a few other Rioters, hired guards protecting the place (use Wall Guard stat block), or other adversaries from Stormlight World Guide.

Try to ensure the party will not spend entire chapter just looting random places in the city. If you feel this activity is repeated too many times, let the spren urge them to focus on their goals, increase security of looted places, or, if that wasn't enough, trigger the events of 3.6. "The Everstorm".

3.3 The Palace

At this point in the story, there is little to be gained in the palace. If characters attempt to enter the palace, they will find closed and heavily guarded gates.

Two knights guard the bared palace gates. Their armors shine in the sun, but there is a shadow falling over their eyes and the sense of wrongness to them. Their leader approaches you. "The palace is closed for the likes of you.", he says. "Go back where you belong!"

Two False Radiants keep watch on both sides of the gates. Their commander - False Radiant Leader will not allow the characters to enter. If the characters stay here too long, they will be attacked by palace forces. When the fight starts, two more False Radiant will reinforce palace forces after the first round of combat. All guards will fight to the end.

Path to Enlightenment

Approaching the gates of the Kholinar Palace influenced by Yelig-nar, the Blightwind, can expedite an Enlightened Skybreaker (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

3.3.1 Talking Their Way In

The characters may wish to persuade the guards to let them in - run it as a conversation. False Radiant Leader has a Cognitive defense of 15, a Spiritual defense of 18, and 5 Focus.

His loyalty to the Queen Aesudan is incredible and he will positively respond to people with similar values. All tests against him are made with disadvantage unless the character has very good reason to be allowed inside.

If False Radiant Leader's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

3.3.2 Sneaking Inside

The characters may decide to avoid the guards and sneak inside the palace behind their backs. You can run it as an endeavor. The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 6 successes before 2 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective. All tests of the endeavor made against the palace guards are made with disadvantage as they are on high alert.

If the characters succeed, they can enter the palace without the guards knowing. Otherwise, they are attacked by them. They will fight to the death, but they will not pursue fleeing characters.

3.3.3 Inside the Palace

If the characters convinced the guards to let them in, they will be escorted by two False Radiants. They will be allowed to the throne room to swear devotion and loyalty to Queen Aesudan (or whatever was the reason the guards let them in).

After that they will be escorted back to exit. Any sign of disobedience or lack of cooperation will turn the guards hostile and may result in lethal encounter.

Do not allow Queen Aesudan to participate in a fight in this chapter - she will have her own boss fight in Act II.

3.4 Battle at the Gates

If the players managed to reach this location before completing 3.5. "Ardent Monastery", they will see Highmarshal Azure and her Wall Guards defending the gate from the Cult of Moments. The PCs can join either side of the conflict. Start the encounter from 3.4.1. "Main Gate".

If they decided to complete 3.5. "Ardent Monastery" first, Highmarshal Azure successfully defended the gate by the time the characters reach it. In this case there is nothing more to do in here and you can skip the events of this section.

Roleplaying Highmarshal Azure

Characteristics: Determined, inspiring, resourceful

Goal: Protect the people of Kholinar

Appearance: Orange eyes and short, straight, black hair. Lean and grim, with couple scars on her face. Wears shining chainmail and an azure cloak.

Highmarshal Azure didn't ask for that - she just was around when Kholinar needed a Wall Guard commander and she stepped up to take the responsibility. She is not even from Alethkar, but this does not matter - there are people who need her and she will defend them!

Spoiler Info

Highmarshal Azure leading the defense of the city gates against the Cult of Moments is referenced in "Oathbringer", Chapter 70: Highmarshal Azure.

3.4.1 Main Gate

Start this encounter by reading the following:

"Form the line! Shields high! Don't give them an inch!" - you hear orders shouted from a small group of defenders surrounded by an assault of cultists in white.

Highmarshal Azure leads a small squad of four Wall Guards against an assault of eight Cultists (each Cultist of Moments of a random kind). Highmarshal

Azure will retreat once all her troops are dead, but all others will fight to the end.

From here, the characters can take the stair to join the fight in 3.4.3. "City Walls". They can also enter the gate tower to fight in 3.4.2. "Guard Barracks".

Highmarshal Azure and other combatants form this location will remain here, it is up to the players to drive off the enemies.

3.4.2 Guard Barracks

When the PCs enter this room, read the following:

You enter the barrack room to see the last of the cultists being overwhelmed by the defenders.

Six Wall Guards are fighting here, and only two Cultists (random kinds) are remaining. All of them will fight to the end.

Both sides are vaguely familiar with the character's involvement during the fight in 3.4.1. "Main Gate", so the PCs cannot change sides now.

From here the characters can take an exit to reach 3.4.3. "City Walls".

3.4.3 City Walls

When the PCs enter the walls, read the following:

You enter just in time to see more cultists approaching on the walls. The lone guard will soon be overwhelmed...

Single Wall Guard is about to be attacked by six Cultists (random kinds). All will fight to the end.

Both sides are vaguely familiar with the character's involvement during the fight in 3.4.1. "Main Gate", so the PCs cannot change sides now.

From here the characters can enter 3.4.2. "Guard Barracks".

3.4.4 Aftermath

The fighting stops once the PCs defeat all enemies in all three locations. The gates are now under control of the faction the PCs were supporting during the fight.

Highmarshal Azure is gathering people to storm the Cultist Monastery (see 3.5. "Ardent Monastery"). She invites the characters to join her.

If Highmarshal Azure's forces were defeated by the PCs, she will retreat to recover and attack the Monastery alone.

3.5 Ardent Monastery

Sooner or later, the characters are bound to attempt entering the Monastery. When they arrive to the location, they will start from 3.5.1. "Monastery Yard".

Highmarshal Azure's Assault

If the party was quick to get here, they will find mostly Ardents and Cultists here. If they stopped to help one of the sides during 3.4. "Battle at the Gates", Highmarshal Azure will also storm the Monastery, and she will bring Wall Guards with her (if enough of them survived).

The party will meet her in 3.5.7. "Ithi and Her Sister", unless they are attacking the place together, allowing them to share most of the scenes.

Past Actions

Depending on players' actions so far, one of the sides of this conflict may be friendly towards the party. The PCs may storm the place alongside Highmarshal Azure or they may decide to help defend the place, hoping the newly-earned trust of the Ardents will help them achieve their goals.

If the characters were hostile to Cultist of Momentss earlier in the story, they might be recognized, turning peaceful encounter into hostile one.

Spoiler Info

Highmarshal Azure attacking the low monastery by the eastern gates is referenced in "Oath-bringer", Chapter 73: Telling Which Stories.

3.5.1 Monastery Yard

When the characters enter the Monastery, read the following:

You are surrounded by serenity, as though this place was oblivious to the chaos raging behind its walls. You see two figures in white robes approaching you:

"Hello, child!", one of them says. "What are you looking for in this place?"

Two Ardents (use Cultist's stat blocks) guard the entrance. They are not hostile, unless they sense an incoming danger. If the party decides to attack them, two more Cultists will join the fight after the first round of combat.

The PCs may attempt to talk their way in. Run this as a conversation. Cultist has a Cognitive defense of 11, a Spiritual defense of 16, and 3 Focus. They live their lives devoted to the Almighty, and recently - the spren. They will respond positively to arguments suggesting the characters want to take part in the religious rituals.

If Cultist's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

If the players ask about the Unmade artifacts, the Ardents will deny existence of such items, calling it a heresy and a blasphemy. They will cease any further conversation and will turn hostile if the characters will press the topic.

From here, the characters can enter 3.5.2. "Long Halls".

Highmarshal Azure's Assault

If Highmarshal Azure is storming the Monastery, there will be 4 Cultists and 3 Wall Guards fighting in here.

3.5.2 Long Halls

When the PCs enter the halls, read the following:

Long, dark halls connect the whole complex. The walls of cold stone are decorated only with the sparse glow of torchlight. A few ardents walk in here.

Sometimes an Ardent or Cultist of Moments can be found here, but they will ignore the characters. The halls lead to 3.5.3. "Monastery Chapel". One of the closed doors hides 3.5.4. "Lavish Feast". At the end of the corridors, there is 3.5.6. "Stairways". The PCs can also reach 3.5.5. "Locked Cells" in the farthest parts of the Monastery.

Highmarshal Azure's Assault

If Highmarshal Azure is storming the Monastery, there will be 2 Cultists and 2 Wall Guards fighting in here.

3.5.3 Monastery Chapel

On the walls of the chapel there are paintings of spren, before them a group of kneeling people is praying - ardents in white robes lead the incantations, while the common people repeat after them:

"Oh, bringers of joy, remember us!"

"Remember us!"

"Oh, dancers with flames, warm us!"

"Warm us!"

"Oh, tenders of life, tend to us!"

"Tend to us!"

"Oh, whispers of wind, whisper to us!"

"Whisper to us!"

Several Cultists (each Cultist of Moments of a different kind, no two repeating) pray in here with common people and brighteyes like. All of them ignore the PCs, but if they attack them, they will defend themselves. The Cultists will fight to the end, without any regard for the common people, who will attempt to run away.

3.5.4 Lavish Feast

The door to this location is closed. If a character wishes to enter despite that, they will need to pass DC 15 Strength or Thievery check. In that case, read the following:

You see a long table full of delights - meat, vegetables, cakes, exotic fruit - illuminated with spherelight from many chalices. More of the food lies on the floor and besides the walls. Some of it starts to rot.

A group of people in white robes feast on the delights. "You are not supposed to be here!", one of them shouts.

A Bibulous Reveler and eight Cultists (of random kinds) feast in here. They will turn hostile unless a character manages to quickly convince them to stand down - they would need to pass a Deception or Persuasion test against Masked Reveler's Spiritual Defense with disadvantage.

If a combat starts, the enemies will fight to the end.

Highmarshal Azure's Assault

If Highmarshal Azure is storming the Monastery, her forces will ignore this room, but some of Wall Guards can be called for help.

Treasure

In the chalices, there is 5d10 marks of spheres in total. Bibulous Reveler carries a key to 3.5.5. "Locked Cells".

The characters can also help themselves with the food or even bring something back home.

Path to Enlightenment

Participating in a lavish feast in the honor of Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel, may expedite an Enlightened Willshaper.

3.5.5 Locked Cells

If the characters enter this area, read the following:

This area of the Monastery seems abandoned. The halls are dark and nobody can be seen in here.

Suddenly, you hear a faint voice from one of the cells: "Please, have mercy... I am so hungry..."

Ardent Liha (she/her) is locked in one of the cells. She is imprisoned by Cult of Moments. She hasn't seen anyone since she was put in here.

Releasing Liha

A character may open the jail using key found on one of the Revelers in 3.5.4. "Lavish Feast". If they don't have it, they can attempt DC 20 Thievery check.

Talking with Liha

Liha is too weak and hungry for a proper conversation. If fed, she will gladly answer any questions:

Who are you?

I am Liha, an ardent from Devotary of Denial.

How long have you been locked in here?

Hard to say, I lost track of time... What day do have...? Anyway, they came for me a day after Pai got assigned to Queen's Retinue... Did she told them something about me? I thought we were friends...

Can you help us navigate the Monastery?

It isn't the one I've spent most of my life in, but it should be similar. I can be your guide, just please, don't leave me here!

Do you know about an Artifacts of the Unmade?

The Voidbringers are destroyed, nothing left from them. There is no such item, and if there were, you wouldn't find them in here, this is a holy place. You are wasting your time... And please, don't pursue such unholy items, they will only curse your soul... Trust in the Almighty, He will guide your souls!

3.5.6 Stairways

When the PCs reach this place, read the following:

You see a spiral stairs cut from the stone, descending into a darkness. Several people in white robes are standing nearby. "This area is for ardents only. Return to the chapel", one of them says.

Six Cultists (each Cultist of Moments of random kind) guard the stairway. They will turn hostile unless the PCs quickly go back.

From here, the PCs can descend to 3.5.7. "Ithi and Her Sister".

Highmarshal Azure's Assault

If Highmarshal Azure is storming the Monastery, four Wall Guard will fight the Cultists. The party can help in combat or sneak downstairs.

3.5.7 Ithi and Her Sister

When the PCs reach this place, read the following:

You see two female ardents sitting in the middle of the room. Green vines pierce through their pale skins, entangling their frail bodies. One of them wears a Soulcaster on her hand.

Ithi and her sisters are Verdant Soulcaster Savants, but only one of them has the Fabrial required for Soulcasting. They will not attack any aggressors - in a case of combat, they will attempt to flee or slow down their enemies. They will use Soulcaster as a weapon only when they will be left with no other choice.

No matter the cost, they will not part with the Fabrial. They are not part of the Cult of Moments and they are not familiar with current events or political forces.

At the end of the room, the door leads to 3.5.8. "Forbidden Reliquary". Any character who bonded an Enlightened spren will feel a slight pull towards that area.

Spoiler Info

Ithi is met in "Oathbringer", Chapter 81: Ithi and Her Sister.

Highmarshal Azure's Assault

If Highmarshal Azure is storming the Monastery, she can be found in this room, attempting to persuade the Soulcaster sisters to join her and help the falling city.

3.5.8 Forbidden Reliquary

When the PCs reach this area, read the following:

The room is full of small chests, each standing on its own stone shelf and containing an ancient relic of ardents long gone. Two of the relics catch your attention - the artifacts that Sja-anat described to you.

The party found Dustcaster and Black Scallop, securing their objective. Other items in this room have no practical use.

As the characters get hold of the fabrials from the reliquary, don't reveal all their secrets just yet. Let there be some mystery around them. Don't worry, the book will provide explanations when they are needed.

Path to Enlightenment

Seeing Dustcaster for the first time, an artifact of Chemoarish, the Dustmother, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Dustbringer (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

Path to Enlightenment

Seeing Black Scallop for the first time, an artifact of Dai-Gonarthis, the Black Fisher, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Elsecaller (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

3.5.9 Aftermath

When the party secured the artifacts of the Unmade, trigger the events of 3.6. "The Everstorm" when they exit the monastery. The party will still be able to pursue other goals of this chapter, but the conditions in Kholinar will be much different.

3.6 The Everstorm

Introduce events of this section after the party completes 3.5. "Ardent Monastery".

The sky darkens as the thick, black clouds gather from the west. The wind raises, blowing with unnatural speed. Soon after, a red lightning strikes a building. More of them follows soon after.

In the midst of this, the usually quiet parshmen fell to their knees, screaming a soul-piercing wails of unimaginable anguish. Their bones break, their skin tears to shreds as dozens of spikes puncture through their bodies. Soon after, they all lie in pools of their own blood, with enough life in them to suffer agony.

The party faces two Newborn Warforms and three Newborn Nimbleforms. They are Prone, lying in blood, Stunned for two rounds and Surprised for one. Once they are back on their feet they will attack the characters or nearby NPCs.

If the party decides not to take shelter to hide from the Everstorm and hostile Singers you can run the following encounters:

3.6.1 Ungrateful Servants

If the party returns to Gran-gran's home, read the following:

The household you enter is unnaturally quiet. No shouting, no complaining, no insults or empty threats. The building sounds empty...

If the characters rushed here just after the Everstorm arrived, they will see Newborn Warform and Newborn Nimbleform standing above terrified Gran-gran, savoring their revenge and preparing for the kill. If someone enters the room, they will attack them instead.

If the characters are late, they will find Gran-gran brutally murdered by her own servants. They joined other Singers spreading mayhem in the city - the house is empty now.

3.6.2 Raging Everstorm

You can run this encounter multiple times and/or in pair with other events.

Gusts of wind grow heavier. Soon after, a series of lightning strikes from the sky, flashing red light on otherwise dark street.

Lightning bolts of Everstorm hit the area. For each character in the scene, roll as if Newborn Stormform Regal attacked them with Bolt of Lightning while having a disadvantage. If the attack misses the character, the bolt lands nearby, destroying the surrounding environment.

3.6.3 Clash With the Singers

Read the following:

In the howling wind you could not hear them, before you walked just into them: a group of Singers, still covered in their own blood after the transformation, fighting a terrified group of people. Red flashes of lightning flare every few seconds, but in between everything is black.

A group of Singers (Newborn Direform Regal or Newborn Stormform Regal, 1d4 Newborn Warforms and 1d4 Newborn Nimbleforms) fight against some humans (2d6 Cultists or 2d6 Rioters or 2d4 Wall Guards). Both groups ignore the party, but the characters may join on any side if they wish. All involved will fight to the end.

3.6.4 Massacre the Weak

Read the following:

You see a few Singers standing above a crying mother. One of them grabbed her infant and smashed it into the stone wall of a building. Another one lunged to the devastated woman soon after.

A Newborn Direform Regal and two Newborn Warforms are committing the atrocities. They did not notice the party yet, allowing them to sneak away. If they fail to do so, the singers will turn hostile towards them soon after. They will fight to the end.

3.6.5 Unfortunate Artifabrian

You can start similar encounter when a PC uses a fabrial or a non-Enlightened Radiant surgebends.

You see a group of guards fighting against two Singers with sparks of lightning dancing around their arms. One of the guards aims with her fabrial to one of them. Soon after a bright light flashes the street and the Singer falls to the ground, twitching.

Cheers don't last long - moments later a vicious, screaming spren darts from the above towards the fabrial. A majestic figure appeared shortly after. The singer rammed one of the guards with a lance and send another one flying in the air. With the fabrial secured, the figure fled away, its unnaturally long red robes flapping behind it on the wind.

Newborn Heavenly One ignores the characters as long as they are not using fabrals, but two wounded Newborn Stormform Regal (with roughly half of their Health) remain. Unless the characters flee right away, they will turn hostile towards them.

3.7 Dying Singer

When characters complete their objective for this chapter, end it with the following:

You see a badly wounded Singer sitting on the ground. "I must reach the others, beyond the walls", she mumbles to herself.

The characters can help the wounded or finish her off. If they choose to be friendly, she will introduce herself as Rishai. She will invite them to the camp next to the city, where all other Singers gather, and she will ask them to help her get there.

3.7.1 Singer Camp

If the characters travel to the Singer camp, read the following:

You reach the camp that is setup in an alethi fashion. Two massive Singers stay on watch, accompanied with one sleek one standing behind.

"Stop! Who goes there?", one of them asks, raising his weapon.

Two Newborn Warforms and one Newborn Envoyform Regal named Serin stay at the gates. If the party wishes to enter the camp, they must convince them to let them through. Run this as a conversation encounter.

Serin has a Cognitive defense of 15, a Spiritual defense of 18, and 6 Focus. Her goal is to grow Singer's camp in strength and she will welcome every potential ally, but she is wary of traitorous humans.

All tests done by the party have advantage if they are accompanied by a Singer. Also, if during 3.2. "Blood on the Streets" the characters stood in the defense of parshmen, one of them will step from the camp and vouch for the party, counting as one successful test.

If Serin's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 2 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation. If the Singers fail to believe the characters, they will turn hostile at the end of the conversation.

If the party chooses violent solution, more Singers will soon join the fight. There is a full camp of them, the characters can't defeat them all and will soon need to flee back to the city.

3.8 Journeying Onward

Once you complete encounters with reborn Singers, advance characters to level 4 and proceed to Chapter 4 - Enemy Unmade to Dust.

Chapter 4 - Enemy Unmade to Dust

4.0 Running This Chapter

Kholinar is under siege by Singer forces. The characters will play their part and use an ancient Unmade fabrial to tip the balance for their favor. But before that, they must plan their escape!

Depending on characters' allegiance they will be able to help either Singer or the Kholinar forces. Either a Thunderclast or a gate barricade can be annihilated with the Dustcaster and it is up to the PCs to choose.

4.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters start this chapter at level 4. Advance them to level 5 at the end of the chapter.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Careful planning before the mission
- Heroic deeds to protect their allies
- Talking with Sja-anat can expedite an Enlightened Lightweaver
- Using ancient artifacts of the Unmade can expedite an Enlightened Dustbringer

4.0.2 Forging Alliances

The following actions can help the characters to become allies with Kholinar factions:

- Eliminate a Thunderclast to earn Wall Guards' gratitude.
- Breach the city walls to prove your loyalty to the Singer forces
- Characters' attempts to get invited to the Cult of Moments may bring them closer to that fraction

4.0.3 Weather Conditions

The Weeping is over. The rain stopped and a clear sky can finally be seen through the clouds. It is possible for a highstorm to appear, though the book does not include them in the nearest chapters. Add them, if you believe they will enrich your story or enable the Radiants.

4.1 Mission Briefing

4.1.1 The Objective

Start this chapter by reading the following:

As you are resting after a difficult day, you see a movement in the only mirror in the room. Looking at it you see a familiar reflection of a black woman with a big eyes, glowing white.

If the characters have no access to any of the mirrors (e.g. they are in the Singer camp), instead read the following:

Suddenly, you see your shadow whirl, twist, and grow in a wrong direction - towards the light. Soon, it takes a familiar shape of a woman, with two eyes glowing brightly.

Regardless of a way Sja-anat appears, continue with the following:

Sja-anat smiles and addresses you: "So you survived. That is well, but not unexpected. But your task is yet completed. The city is under siege and now it's your time to make a change that will matter. Take the fabrial from the monastery, the one looking like a bracelet. You will need it sooner than you think."

Allow the characters to have a conversation with the Unmade. Use this opportunity to convey the task for the PCs: sneak up and use Dustcaster to annihilate enemy's biggest asset (the Thunderclast or a barricaded gate).

What is this fabrial?

It is Dustcaster, an ancient gift from Chemoarish, the Dustmother.

And the other one?

They call it Black Scallop, and it came from Dai-Gonarthis, the Black Fisher, but you shall not need it now. Later, weeks later, yes.

What does the fabrial do?

It can be used to turn your foes to dust, but only once. Do not use it before the time is right.

How do we use it?

Adorn your arm with it, and press your palm to your foe. The fabrial will do the rest, it yearns to be awoken again. But you must keep it under control, or it will run free and wild.

What are the risks of using it?

There are none, if your will reigns over it's desire of destruction. If you fail, it may unmake you as well.

What should we destroy?

Odium forces just awaken a Thunderclast, a giant old as the war, strong enough to break the walls of the city. But then, the gates are being barricaded and the walls are defended by Highmarshal Azure who is stronger than you can imagine. If both sides clash in battle, the river of blood will be deep, and the slain will be many. You must prevent it, tip the scales of the battle, unmake the biggest thread.

4.1.2 Escape Route

Once the objective is clear for the PCs, you can add the following:

"Once the deed is done, your enemies will mark you for death and hunt you down", Sja-anat continues. "You will need to flee the city. You must enter the Circle of Memories on the Monastery Dais. My son will help you disappear from the enemy eyes. You will need to travel south, until you reach Kharbranth. Use Black Scallop there, and King Taravangian will offer you help and shelter.

"However, you must first determine how will you reach the Circle of Memories here in Kholinar, as it is now in the hands of the ardent and I can sense Odium influence touching them."

Unknown to the PCs, Sja-anat suggests their escape rout through a corrupted Oathgate that will transport them to Shadesmar. Previously collected Black Scallop will help them get back to the Physical Realm from there.

When you present the escape root to the PCs, don't reveal all the secrets just yet. People who read the books may connect the dots, but for the others there might still be some surprises left. Don't mention Oathgates, Shadesmar and the purpose of Black Scallop at this stage.

However, as the Oathgate is now occupied by Cult of Moments, the characters will need to hatch a plan how to get there. There are several options for that:

Brute force.

For sure there will be guards, but the PCs can choose to just kill anyone blocking their path.

Use connections.

If the party helped enough Cultists so far, they might be friendly enough to just let them in.

Join the cult.

If the characters prove they are worthy, they might be invited to join the cult. In that case, nobody will try to stop them on their way to the Circle of Memories.

If the players have difficulty to come up with any idea how to enter the Monastery Dais, you can suggest them a single solution from the above list after passing a DC 15 Deduction check. Each subsequent suggestion raises difficulty of such test by 5.

Note: Details concerning the escape solutions are described in 5.1. "Entering the Revelry". Despite being located in the future chapter, the PCs should make preparations before they start 4.2. "Sneaking at Night".

Path to Enlightenment

Meeting or talking to Sja-anat, the Taker of Secrets, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Lightweaver (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

Path to Enlightenment

Wearing Dustcaster, an artifact of Chemoarish, the Dustmother, for the first time can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Dustbringer (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

4.1.3 Radiant Required

To activate the Oathgate in the Circle of Memories, the characters will need a living Shardblade summoned by a Radiant Knight. If at this point the party does not include a Radiant, Sja-anat will urge the PCs to bond one of her children.

4.2 Sneaking at Night

Before they can perform Dustcasting, the characters must sneak close enough to their target. You can run it as an endeavor.

Sneaking to the Singer Camp

If the characters want to annihilate the Thunderclast, they will need to enter the Singer Camp. It is guarded by Newborn Warforms, and the endeavor tests will be done against their Defenses.

Sneaking to Kholinar Gates

If the characters wish to break the barricade at the gates, they will need to get close enough the wall, guarded by Wall Guards. The endeavor tests will involve their Defenses.

4.2.1 Possible Approaches

The characters are free to suggest their ideas how would they approach the endeavor. Potential proposals may include:

Being close to target.

If the party is already nearby their target (e.g. they spent the night in the Singer Camp and they want to unmake the Thunderclast), immediately award them with 2 successes to their endeavor progress.

Hiding in the cover of the night.

A character can make a Stealth test against the guards' Perception test to attempt approaching without being spotted.

Melding with the surrounding.

A character can attempt a Survival test against the guards' Perception test if they want to use a camouflage.

Pretend to belong.

A character may deceive guards by making a Deception test against their Insight.

Threaten the guards.

A Intimidation test against guard's Discipline test may be attempted if a character wants to scare them away.

Work out guards' patrol patterns.

A character may attempt a DC 15 Deduction check to learn the paths and time the guards take during their patrols.

4.2.2 Resolving the Endeavor

The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 6 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

Even if the party gathers failures, they will be able to reach their target. The only question is - will they be seen?

Success!

If the party completes the endeavor, they can approach their target without being noticed by anyone.

1 Failure

A guard notices something. They are now on high alert and their future Perception tests are made with an advantage.

2 Failures

The guard now sees you. "Stop! Who goes there?", he shouts at you.

3 Failures

It's over, they now know you are not supposed to be here. The guards raise an alarm. The party will be attacked during 4.3. "Dustcasting".

4.3 Dustcasting

Once the party reaches their dustcasting target, read the following to the player doing the dustcasting:

You place your palm with the Dustcaster to the cold stone. Suddenly you have a feeling that everything else is gone - there is only you and the stone and the fabrial whispering eagerly: "Make... it... gone...!"

A character using Dustcaster must do a DC 10 Divination check or DC 20 Discipline check three times. After the 3rd test, the dustcasting is complete and their objective and Dustcaster itself are annihilated. However, based on the number of failures, additional effects take place:

1+ Failures

The PC loses the tips of their fingers on the dustcasting hand. They take 1d6 Spirit damage.

2+ Failures

Whole dustcasting palm is gone. The PC takes additional 1d8 Spirit damage.

3 Failures

Entire arm of the PC is turned to dust. Its owner takes additional 1d10 Spirit damage.

Dropping to 0 Health

If the dustcasting failures reduce a character to 0 Health, that character's entire body turns to dust and the PC is gone. That doesn't stop the dustcasting.

Unable to Concentrate

If the dustcasting character takes damage (eg after guard's attack, see 4.3.1. "Guards! Guards!"), their next test for the dustcasting will gain disadvantage.

Please note, "Dustcasting" is not an official term from the "Stormlight Archive" lore. I based it on "soulcasting" term and modified it to indicate Chemoarish, the Dustmother's influence. I feel it fits, but it's not official.

Path to Enlightenment

Using Dustcaster, an artifact of Chemoarish, the Dustmother, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Dustbringer (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

4.3.1 Guards! Guards!

If the party failed to sneak to their target (see 4.2. "Sneaking at Night"), they will be attacked by the guards. The PC performing the dustcasting cannot participate in the battle in any way and they must be defended by other characters.

During the fight, each dustcasting test roll takes a turn to complete. For three rolls, the fight will last for three turns. Once the dustcasting is complete, the party can safely flee the battle.

Singer Guards

If the dustcasting takes place in the Singer Camp, the characters are attacked by Newborn Direform Regal and four Newborn Nimbleforms. At beginning of each round, additional Newborn Warform joins the fight.

Wall Guard

If the dustcasting takes place at the Kholinar walls, the characters will be attacked by six Wall Guards. At beginning of each round, additional two Wall Guards will join the fight.

4.3.2 Aftermath

Once the dustcasting is completed (even if a character performing it dies in a process), read the following:

In an instant the great stony surface disappears in a puff of smoke. Huge gray cloud suddenly erupts many feet in all directions. You are sure it must be visible from far, far away.

But there is no time to ponder - you must flee! Now!

The dustcasting is complete, but every guard is now aware of the PCs' presence. They must run. Proceed to 4.4. "Running Away".

4.4 Running Away

The characters must flee the guards alerted by their dustcasting. You can run it as a slightly modified pursuit endeavor:

The party must run from Singer Camp to the city walls (assuming they were starting from there), then they must reach the Monastery. During all that time they will be chased by the guards.

During the pursuit scene, keep track of two Current Distances - one between the party and the Singer Camp and the second between them and the guards. The endeavor ends, when the party reaches Escape Distance of 9 from the Singer Camp (or 6 from the Gates, see below). When the Distance between them and the guards is reduced to 0, the chase does not end, but the guards can make a free attack against them.

Location	Distance to the next
Singer Camp	3
City Gates	1
Slumps	3
Rich Neighborhood	2
Monastery	(target reached)

Starting Distance

Cloud of dust risen after the dustcasting is enough for the characters to allow them start with a distance of 1. If they succeeded to sneak without alerting the guards before that, add 1 to that distance (Starting Distance of 2) as the guards need more time to get there.

Singer Guards

If the party decided to dustcast a Thunderclast, they will start from the Singer Camp (Escape Distance 9 to the Monastery) and they will be chased by Newborn Heavenly Ones. They can be deadly in the open space, but once the characters reach the city it might be easier for them to hide in narrow alleyways - allow for some advantages against the guards in there (or disadvantages for their rolls).

Wall Guard

If the party decided to remove gate barricade, they will need to outrun Wall Guard lead by Highmarshal Azure. Highmarshal Azure will bolster her men, but she will not attack the PCs unless they strike her first. Escape Distance from the gates is shorter - only 6, but the guards know the city well.

4.4.1 No Man's Land

The area between the Singer Camp and the Kholinar (total Distance of 3) is a vast, empty area. The characters can find a few laits here to hide in (Stealth), they can also sprint the distance (Athletics). However, watch out for a rockbuds growing here and there as well as for the rubble after the recent Everstorm.

4.4.2 At the Gates

If the characters flee from the Singer Camp, they will need to enter the city through the gates. If they made an alliance with the Wall Guards, they will let them pass without any problems.

However, if the characters fought them before, they might not be eager to let them through the gates. That may introduce another challenge during the pursuit. They might even join the chase themselves.

From there it is not that far (total Distance of 1) to the slumps.

4.4.3 An Odd Fellow

When the party reaches the gate barracks, you can optionally red the following:

You can see tall and thin figure in a black coat, sitting at the chull cart full of a metal sheets.

"...on the walls, yes. And then you can soulcast inside that room, they won't be able to sense it", you can hear him explaining to Highmarshal Azure.

When the characters run past him, you can add the following:

"Hey, don't rush like that!", he shouts at you.
"It's pointless. No matter how fast you run, you cannot outrun your stench!"

On the cart there is Hoid. If the characters stop to talk with him, he might even help them a little - but his help comes at a price of a few juicy insults.

Perhaps it's not the best moment for such a scene, but it was the only moment that I know for sure the party is at the gates. If in your game the characters reach this area on another occasion after 3.5. "Ardent Monastery", you can run this scene then.

Hoid has little impact on this story. However, it is mentioned in the "Oathbringer" that he was in the city during those events, so if you wish to roleplay him, introduce his cameo or just insult the characters - there is a perfect opportunity to do so.

Spoiler Info

Hoid helping Highmarshal Azure to prepare a room for soulcasting is referenced in "Oathbringer", Chapter 81: Ithi and Her Sister.

4.4.4 The Slumps

The slumps are a big part of the city (total Distance of 3) on the path to the palace. Though not the whole area is occupied by literal slumps and there are some decent streets in there, overall they all share some qualities that differentiate them from the nobles' mansions from the next area:

The alleys here are narrow, and it's easy to get lost in this labyrinth. The characters must navigate the tangled streets (Deduction), but it is also easier to hide in here (Stealth). They might also find a few folks who will eagerly help them... for the right price!

4.4.5 Rich Neighborhood

Closer to the palace (total Distance of 2) the nobles have their houses. This area is nice and tidy, and the lighteye lords often deploy their own guards. It is easier to sprint than in the slumps (Athletics), and perhaps the guards will be nice enough to help (Persuasion)... unless they decide to join the chase themselves.

4.4.6 Monastery Gates

The PCs made it! The gates are here! The Fused know better than to break into the area controlled by Ashertmarn, and Highmarshal Azure does not seek fight with Cult of Moments. The chase is over!

4.5 Journeying Onward

After the characters successfully escape into Kholinar, advance them to level 5 and proceed to Chapter 5 - Revel of Fools.

Chapter 5 - Revel of Fools

5.0 Running This Chapter

The PCs reached the gates of the Monastery controlled by Cult of Moments. To reach the Circle of Memories, they will need to enter the ongoing Revel conducted by Ashertmarn.

Festivities influenced by Heart of the Revel are the most indecent and scandalous events of indulgence in the entire "Stormlight Archive" series or perhaps even in the whole grand Cosmere. In this book I will not dare to go much further than family-friendly descriptions of tattered sleeves on a safehand, but it is possible go much further and darker than that.

IMPORTANT: If you do, please make sure beforehand that you do not exceed the boundaries of a comfortable roleplay for everyone on the table! (see 0.6.3. "Players' Expectations")

IMPORTANT: If you find some of the encounters here too intense for your group, please modify them or straight up remove them from this chapter.

5.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters start this chapter at level 5. Advance them to level 6 at the end of the chapter.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Solution to enter through the Revel gates.
- Joining or resisting the Revel.
- Helping or eliminating the revelers.
- The proximity of Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel may expedite an Enlightened Willshaper.
- Seeing Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother in the Spiritual Realm vision may expedite an Enlightened Edgedancer.
- Seeing Ba-Ado-Mishram in the Spiritual Realm vision may expedite an Enlightened Stoneward.

5.0.2 Forging Alliances

The following actions can help the characters to become allies with Kholinar factions:

- Joining Cult of Moments is a sure way to make an alliance with them.
- Joining forces with Crime Lords can lead to an alliance with them.

5.1 Gates to the Revel

When characters reach the gates to the Monastery, read the following:

You can see the guards at the Monastery gates. Two of them, with their spren costumes, are standing at both sides. Third one, wearing flat white mask with nothing but an eye holes, approaches you.
"Who are you?", she asks. "What are you looking for?"

Cult of Moments guards are defending the gates - one Masked Reveler and a number of Cultists equal to the number of PCs (each Cultist of Moments of a random kind). There are only two Cultists standing in front of the gate - the rest is resting nearby and will join the fight after one round.

Entering the Revelry

Before 4.2. "Sneaking at Night", the characters should plan how will they enter the Monastery once they complete the dustcasting. There are several approaches they may attempt, each with its own risks and challenges.

Once the party manages to enter the Monastery using one of the below methods, proceed to 5.2. "Revelry".

5.1.1 Allies of the Cult

If the characters managed to ally the Cult of Moments, they will be allowed inside without any problems.

To become allies, the characters must side with them during Chapter 3 - Enemy Reborn, especially during 3.5. "Ardent Monastery". On top of that, they couldn't have killed anyone from the cult.

Use your own judgment if the party was close to reach those goals. If you believe the party is close, but still not there yet, you can give them some bonuses during 5.1.2. "Joining Cult of Moments".

5.1.2 Joining Cult of Moments

If the characters wish to join the cult, they would need to get their attention by doing something grand and daring. You can run it as an endeavor.

Each day, allow one of the characters to attempt doing something that will attract cult's attention - probably something wasteful or extravagant. Use your judgment to adjust tested skill and the test's DC, then ask the player for the skill test to check if they succeeded.

If they succeed the corresponding test, note their total number of successes and ask them for a d20 roll. If the result of that roll increased by the total number of successes equals 21 or more, Cult of Moments notices their work and invites them in.

If they fail the test, nothing happens, except the day is lost. There is no threshold for a number of failures to end the endeavor. However, each passing they require the PCs to eat, and the food is scarce in the city.

The characters may stop their attempts at any time.

Modified formula of running this endeavor (DC 21 on d20 + number of successes) is introduced to represent uncertainty of the cult's reaction. If my math is correct, the PCs have following chances of completing the endeavor:

14% after 2nd success
27% after 3rd
41% after 4th
56% after 5th
69% after 6th
80% after 7th

If you don't like this idea, feel free to use constant number of successes required, e.g. 6.

Criminal's Curiosity

After the 3rd success of the endeavor, the characters are approached by some shady individuals. They are sent by one of Kholinar's crime lords. They offer the characters help getting them behind the monastery walls for a right price.

The characters may choose to ally with them. That will get them easier time in 5.1.4. "Sneak Behind Their Backs" endeavor, but the paid cost will not allow them to join the cult.

Cult's Attention

When the characters succeed the endeavor, they will get a note from the cult. In it, there will be an invitation to the revelry and the price for it. The price must relate to the way the characters got their attention (e.g. they must pay food if they used food as a means of the endeavor).

By pure coincidence, the Crime Lords and the Cult of Moments demand the same price. The PCs must choose who will they ally in this endeavor.

Spoiler Info

Shallan attempting to join the cult revelry is described in "Oathbringer": Chapter 72. Rockfall and Chapter 74. Swiftspren.

5.1.3 Talking Their Way In

The characters may attempt their smooth-talking skills to convince the guards (see 5.1. "Gates to the Revel") to let them in. You can run this as a conversation. During the conversation, only Masked Reveler will talk, other guards will remain silent.

Masked Reveler has a Cognitive defense of 14, a Spiritual defense of 15, and 3 Focus. They are devoted to the cult and they want it to spread, but they are careful not to allow anyone dangerous inside.

If Masked Reveler's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 2 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

If the conversation doesn't go as planned and the characters fail to leave the area, the guards will attack them. Proceed to 5.1.5. "Brute Force".

5.1.4 Sneak Behind Their Backs

If the characters prefer stealthy approach, they can decide to enter quietly. You can run this as an endeavor. However, if they are detected, proceed immediately to 5.1.5. "Brute Force".

If the characters decided to join forces with Crime Lords, they will help them in this endeavor - all PC's tests are made with an advantage.

Potential approaches may include:

Sneak next to the guards.

A PC may attempt a Stealth test against Masked Reveler's Perception test to act without being spotted.

Climb the walls.

Any PC attempting the climb must pass DC 15 Athletics check. Any character failing the test falls and takes amount of damage equal to the difference between their test's result and the DC.

Search for hidden passage.

With a DC 14 Perception check a PC may find a hidden gate somewhere in the wall.

Open locked doors.

If there are some doors that need opening, a DC 18 Thievery check may help with that.

Radiant powers.

Fly above the wall, walk through it or just appear behind it - the Radiants may find easier solutions than tedious climbing.

Resolving the Endeavor

The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 7 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

If the characters succeed, they can enter the Revelry. Proceed to 5.2.2. "Monastery Village".

If the endeavor fails, the party is attacked - proceed to 5.1.5. "Brute Force".

5.1.5 Brute Force

The characters may decide to deal with the guards in a quick and hostile way. The cultists will fight to the end.

If the characters are pushed into that solution due to their failures in other attempts (e.g. 5.1.4. "Sneak Behind Their Backs") double the number of the guards as a consequence.

5.2 Revelry

The characters are entering the Revelry of Cult of Moments. If they entered through the gates, the party will start at 5.2.1. "Steps to Enlightenment".

Losing Oneself in the Indulgence

Each time a character freely chooses to participate in revelry activities (by e.g. eating food, enjoying drinks, joining the dance, etc), they slowly lose their resolve as they are more and more influenced by Ashertmarn.

Each time that happens, they lose 1 Focus and Maximum Focus and they cannot regain it as long as they are in the area influenced by Heart of the Revel.

Spoiler Info

Shallan entering the revel is described in "Oath-bringer", Chapter 78. The Revel.

5.2.1 Steps to Enlightenment

When the PCs approach the stairs, read the following:

Just behind the gates, there are long stairs leading to the Monastery Dais. Up above, at the top of them, you can see a red glow of an ongoing revelry.

Each PC climbing the stairs must do DC 10 Athletics check. On a failure, the character is Exhausted [-1] until the next short rest.

After reaching the top of the stairs, the characters enter 5.2.2. "Monastery Village".

5.2.2 Monastery Village

Once the party reaches this location, read the following:

In here, the Monastery buildings are smaller, looking like a village inside the city. On your right you can see a blazing bonfire. On your left the Sunwalk leads to the Kholinar Palace.

From here, the characters could go to 5.2.3. "The Sunwalk", though there is little to do there. Another path leads to 5.2.4. "The Bonfire".

If the party was invited by the Cult of Moments to join them, there will be a Cultist waiting for them. In that case, read the following:

In the middle of a path between the buildings you can see a man in a dirty, greased ardent robes. "Welcome! I am your guide tonight!", he says. "You can call me... Kharat I believe...? It doesn't matter, really..."

Kharat will accompany the party. He will show them the revelry, but he won't allow them to enter 5.2.8. "Inner Ring" - the party will need to get rid of him before reaching the Circle of Memories, though it shouldn't be a very hard task for them.

5.2.3 The Sunwalk

When characters enter the Sunwalk, read the following:

You step on the Sunwalk, a long stone walkway leading to the Kholinar Palace. From here you can see the majestic royal residence, but there is nothing for you to find there. Your path leads to the center of the Revelry.

There is nothing to do here, the characters should go back. If they persist on walking the Sunwalk, they will soon meet False Radiants guarding the palace. They will be friendly for anyone approaching from the Revelry, but they will deny them entrance.

There is nothing important in here to do, this location is added only to align with the official lore.

5.2.4 The Bonfire

When characters reach this place, read the following:

In the center of the revelry, huge bonfire blazes away the darkness of the night. A few flamespren - jagged and blue - dance in its flames. Around it, the revelers in rich clothing dance to the shrieking sounds of flutes playing.

A bit further, there is a ring of tables full with food and wine. A woman in purple havah, with her safehand sleeve torn and tattered, walks between them, enjoying the feast.

This is the central part of the Outer Ring revelry. There is delicious food, expensive wine, music, dance and laughter.

From here the PCs can quickly reach 5.2.5. "Herald's Statues". To reach the Circle of Memories, they will need to walk next to 5.2.6. "Meditation Rooms".

Path to Enlightenment

Being present on the revelry influenced by Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Willshaper.

Food Tables

The tables around the bonfire are laid with an abundance of food. A hungry PC can feast on it to remove any related penalties.

Between the tables walks Bibulous Reveler. A bit further there are five Cultists. They are indulging in food and wine. Bibulous Reveler will invite characters to join, turning hostile if refused. Cultists will join her, but other revelers will be oblivious to the fight.

Dancing Floor

Some of the revelers are dancing around the bonfire, including two Wealthy Revelers, two Musical Revelers and three Cultists. A character can join the dance to attempt stealing riches or breath Stormlight from them.

The dancers will ignore the party, unless a character enters their midst without proper dance, at which point they will turn hostile. Wealthy Reveler will also attack anyone he suspects of stealing his glowing rings (either by taking the rings or breathing their Investiture).

5.2.5 Herald's Statues

When characters approach the statues, read the following:

You see a reveler facing a statue of Jezerezeh, standing one foot from a splattered stone surface. With a bottle risen high, he drinks straight from it. Next to him, another one lies on the floor, paying no heed to the puddle soaking his clothes.

The party finds two Bibulous Revelers in here (one of them lies Prone). They will ignore the PCs, but they will turn hostile when attacked, fighting to the end.

There is nothing beyond this place - only the edge of the platform and a long way down.

5.2.6 Meditation Rooms

When party enters this location, read the following:

You step into relatively quiet rooms. Once, ardens used to meditate in here. Now it is occupied by revelers seeking a bit of privacy. Most of the doors are closed; a few of them - invitingly opened.

The party can rest shortly in here. However, they can see that long rest is not safe in here. If they decide for one regardless, after roughly an hour (once the short rest is completed) three Sadistic Revelers will approach them from the nearby rooms. They will invite the PCs to share the ecstasy of the revel and will turn hostile if the PCs refuse.

If a character investigates the nearby rooms, they will see one of them is unexpectedly quiet. Behind a locked doors (DC 15 Thievery check to open, DC 20 Athletics check to break), they will find 5.2.7. "Imprisoned Kishi".

Path from this location leads straight to 5.2.8. "Inner Ring".

5.2.7 Imprisoned Kishi

If the characters investigate this location, read the following:

You see a dark room, with almost no sounds of the revelry coming from the outside. In the middle there is a young woman sitting on the cold stony floor.

The party can talk with the NPC. She will be thankful for freeing her and will join the party, though she will not be very helpful. If the characters decide to talk with the girl, she will share the following information:

Who are you?

They named me Kishi, I believe...? I'm not sure... I don't remember?

What is your real name?

My real name...? I don't think I have one, I don't remember...

What are you doing here?

The heart... I was hearing its beating... Calling me, inviting me in... I was curious. I joined them, but they locked me up.

Why were you locked?

I told them nobody will tell me what to do... I am my own master, I will not follow orders from a spren. They did not like that.

Kishi is an inspiring Enlightened Dust-bringer, though she did not develop any significant powers yet. She will keep away from danger, but if everything else fails, you can use her to activate the Oathgate. The main reason for her to be in this part of the story is to have a backup solution if the party loses all of their Radiant Knights before reaching the Circle of Memories.

Kishi has no ties to this story. You can insert any NPC that would be significant for the players. Perhaps Chanri survived? Or maybe someone from a PC's backstory can be found in here?

5.2.8 Inner Ring

When the PCs enter the Inner Ring, read the following:

In the unnatural darkness, you can see a people crawling on the floor. Once lighteyes, now filthy, in tattered rags and madness in their eyes. All of them are giggling or muttering, enslaved by their twisted emotions.

Everywhere around lie heaps of spoiled food, rotspren crawling all around them. One of the revelers grabs a handful of it and pushes it into her mouth, smiling at you with her bleeding mouth.

The scenery is unnaturally unnerving. Each character must pass a DC 20 Discipline check or lose 1 Focus. PCs who bonded an Enlightened spren gain an advantage on this roll. Each time a character chooses to interact with any of the Revelers, they must repeat the Discipline test.

Crawling on the floor there are two Bibulous Revelers, one Wealthy Reveler, one Musical Reveler and five Cultists. They are ignoring the PCs. If attacked, they will turn hostile for one turn, before they return to giggling and crawling.

From here there is a short path to 5.2.9. "Circle of Memories".

5.2.9 Circle of Memories

When the characters reach the center of the platform, read the following:

You approach the Circle of Memories, the very place Sja-anat instructed you to find. However, your path is blocked - a huge black mass of flesh overgrows the central building. It beats with a slow and deep rhythm, like a giant heart.

"Give in!
Join the revel!"

The party reached the Circle of Memories, but it is blocked by Heart of the Revel. Proceed to 5.3. "Heart of the Revel".

5.3 Heart of the Revel

When the PCs face Heart of the Revel, read the following:

Thundering, irregular rhythm echoes in your skull. So loud... entire city must hear it, entire Alethkar!

And this alluring voice... "Give up your pain! Give up your loss! Embrace the end, and relish in it!"

The party stands against Heart of the Revel. The foe it is invulnerable to most weapons, but the characters must defeat it to get inside the building. Run this encounter as a conversation.

Heart of the Revel has a Cognitive defense of 18, a Spiritual defense of 22, and 9 Focus. It recognizes and respects essence of Odium - it might be more responsive to actions of characters influenced by other Unmade.

It is more a force of nature than a intelligent opponent - it is unable to be persuaded and it won't bargain, but if the characters present will strong enough, it might be weakened enough to unblock the path.

If Heart of the Revel's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

Despite being run as a conversation, this is final boss fight of the act I. Try to make it as epic as possible, even if there is little sword swinging.

Path to Enlightenment

Seeing Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel, can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Will-shaper (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

Little Eloquence

Heart of the Revel does not possess human level of intelligence. It is more a force of nature made manifest, a huge and terrifying beast of a spren, but still - only a beast.

It will not ask or answer questions, it will not present well-formed arguments, nor will it show any nuance or finesse in this conversation. Instead, it's voice will carry simple thoughts and concepts:

Give in!
Join us!
Embrace the end!
Feast! Drink! Dance!
Revel! Indulge! Relish!
Give me your pain! Your longing!

Battlefield Effects

The following items can be found nearby. A character may interact with any of them if they so wish.

Rotten Food.

Heaps of food, once delicious, now spoiled and infested with rotspren.

Shards of Glass.

Wine Glasses lie shattered on the floor. It can painfully hurt, but is not dangerous.

Ruined Art.

Paintings, sculptures and other works of art lie under the rotten food. All of them are ruined and worthless.

Opportunities and Complications

You can use following table as an inspiration for ideas for the Plot Die rolls:

Result	Example
	In the heaps of rotten food you find a sphere infused with Stormlight. Regain 1 Investiture.
	One of the Inner Ring revelers joins the fight for the next round.

Out of Focus

If during the conversation with Heart of the Revel a character has no more Focus to spend when they're being influenced by the Unmade, they are consumed by the overwhelming desire to indulge and they lose themselves in the revel, becoming Unconscious.

Depending on the difficulty level your group wants to play on, this may either affect them until the end of the scene, or it can be equivalent of mental death of the character. Please talk with your players beforehand how hard-core should the game be (see 0.6.3. "Players' Expectations").

Hour of Need

If the battle goes poorly, consider unexpected reinforcements helping the party in the crucial moment.

If freed, allow Kishi to step in with heroic determination, aiding a PC and granting them an advantage on their next test.

If Kishi is unable to join, consider similar help from Sja-anat herself, appearing as a PC's shadow pointing towards the source of light.

Conversation's End

If Heart of the Revel is out of Focus, it will retreat inside the stony platform, allowing the characters to enter the Circle of Memories. Proceed to 5.3.2. "The Oathgate".

If all characters lose themselves in the revel, the scene ends. They can wake up the following morning - proceed to 5.3.1. "The Morning After".

If your players are here to accept consequences of their failures and would find it insulting to Deus-Ex-Machina them back to life, you can also consider this TPK an epic end to the adventure.

5.3.1 The Morning After

If the party lost their conversation with Ashertmarn, read the following:

You wake up the following morning... Or was it an entire eternity...? Your heads are pounding, your skulls feel like a wine glasses shattered to a myriad tiny shards. Your clothes are torn to pieces and most of your possessions are gone.

"I did expect better from my children", you hear the voice of Sja-anat forming out of your shadow. "Nevertheless, the spren of Odium was a formidable foe. It wasn't easy to bring your mind back..."

Sja-anat brings the PCs back to consciousness. They are Exhausted [-2] and stripped of most of their possessions. Luckily, Black Scallop can be found nearby - the characters can continue to 5.3.2. "The Oathgate".

5.3.2 The Oathgate

When the characters enter the Circle of Memories, read the following:

You enter a round building. Light from the spheres illuminates mosaics that decorate the walls. On the other side of the building you can see a metal device, looking like a keyhole.

"We made it!", your spren says. "The Gate, it's here! Summon me, I can open it!"

Any Radiant can summon their spren as a Shardblade to activate the Oathgate. When they do, all characters standing in the room are transported away from the Physical Realm - proceed to 5.4. "Hateful Vision".

If your player's Radiant did not develop a talent to summon their Shardblade yet, please don't wait for that. Allow them for one-time Shardblade summon not to hinder the flow of the story.

Any Radiant can activate the Oathgate - Enlightened or not - but it must be a Radiant. If the party has lost their Radiant in the recent events, consider a helping hand from Kishi or allow a PC for a last-minute bonding. Enlightened Lightspren should lurk nearby, attracted by the revel.

5.4 Hateful Vision

When any Radiant activates the Oathgate, read the following:

In a flash of blinding light you are transported to a different place, different time, different self...

You wear a body of a Singer, standing in a ranks of a Singer army. The commander - a femalen with a proud and regal face streaming shadowy smoke behind her - approaches you and lays her carapaced hand on your shoulder.

"I am proud of you, my children, all of you!", she says. "But the fighting is not done, and will never be done while the children of Honor live", she adds, pointing upwards. Human figures are flying there, leaving streams of pale blue light behind them.

Allow PCs for some quick interactions with other characters in the vision. After a few moments, proceed to 5.4.1. "Midnight Reinforcements".

If your party prefers combat encounters more and you believe they might feel unsatisfied with the conversation as a final boss fight, you can expand the vision to include a proper battle. However, to keep the chapter pacing, I decided not to do that.

Path to Enlightenment

Seeing Ba-Ado-Mishram can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Stoneward (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

5.4.1 Midnight Reinforcements

After a moment, continue the vision with the following:

"Your gods may have abandoned you...", Ba-Ado-Mishram continues. "But I will never! I am standing with you, and so are our allies!"

You look around and you see them: troops black as a tar, glistening like oil, moving through your ranks with a nightmarish grace. One turn to you and smiles with a terrifying sneer, before squeezing its body to move forward.

Again, you can give the PCs a few moments to interact with the scene. Once you are ready to end the vision, proceed to 5.4.2. "Flash of Hatred".

Ba-Ado-Mishram and Re-Shephir appearing in the visions have two purposes. For one, they foreshadow the future chapters. But more important is a possibility to expedite Enlightened Stonewards and Enlightened Edgedancers - the Unmade related to their Orders appear much later in the story, and it would feel bad and unbalanced to keep that bonus away from the players for most of the game.

Path to Enlightenment

Seeing the children of Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother can expedite the progression of an Enlightened Edgedancer (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

5.4.2 Flash of Hatred

As a final part of the vision, read the following:

Suddenly, Ba-Ado-Mishram's face changes: her pride and determination vanished, replaced by a tormented visage of spite and hatred.

"I will destroy you!", she screams at you. "I will skin you alive! I will break every bone in your body, and your cries will be a music for my ears!"

The vision starts to unravel into misty streams, everything turning pale, but you still hear her threats for some more time: "I will pull every tooth and nail! I will boil your tortured body! I will..."

With the vision ending, proceed to 5.4.3. "Shadesmar" before completing the chapter.

Spoiler Info

Ba-Ado-Mishram appearing in Spiritual Realm visions is described in multiple chapters in "Wind And Truth". Her similar changes of personality are shown in Chapter 76. Concessions.

5.4.3 Shadesmar

When the vision ends, read the following:

You are thrown out of the vision into the realm of darkness. You land on a stony platform under a black sky. When you stand up, you see that the platform is just a small island on the endless sea of small glass beads.

The characters find themselves in the Cognitive Realm - the Shadesmar. Take a moment to describe their spren in here, then proceed to the next chapter.

5.5 Journeying Onward

Once the characters are transported to Shadesmar, advance them to level 6 and proceed to the next chapter.

Chapter 6 - The Realm Beyond

6.0 Running This Chapter

The characters must travel through the Shadesmar to Kharbranth.

6.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters start this chapter at level 6. Advance them twice in this chapter: once after they depart from Celebrant and once when they reach Kharbranth.

In this chapter, the party will have an opportunity to rescue a stranded Deadeye, allowing them to earn their Shardblade when they exit Shadesmar with her. They can also encounter and tame a Mandra.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Trading secrets with Ghostbloods
- Rescuing stranded Deadeye
- Freeing Tukari prisoners
- Joining the fight at Unyielding Fidelity
- Using Black Scallop can expedite an Enlightened Elsecaller

6.0.2 Forging Alliances

While traveling in the Shadesmar, the party will be presented with following opportunities to improve relations with other factions:

- Trading secrets with Ghostbloods agents will benefit them in future relations.

6.0.3 Spren Attitude

When traveling in Shadesmar, the party will encounter a variety of spren. Each of them can have a different attitude towards the party, based on number of factors:

Sja-anat's Touch

The spren will not be fond to see one of them corrupted by the Unmade, especially if they see one of their kind affected. Mistspren being curious by nature will show more leniency in that matter.

Radiant Bonds

In general the spren will respond positively to another one of their kind bonding one of the PCs. However, there are exceptions to this rule: Honorspren and Inkspren refused renewing the bonds and will react negatively if they see one of their kind is bonded to a character.

Traveling with a Deadeye

Having Deadeye in the party, suggesting their corpse might be used as a weapon in the Physical Realm, might hurt relations with other spren, especially with Honorspren, Inkspren or the ones of the Deadeye's kind.

Living Spren's Ideals

Character's behavior might positively impact their relations with any spren if they enact the ideals the spren believe in. (e.g., *Cultivation*spren will react better to a person living by Edgedancers' ideals of remembering the forgotten)

6.1 Path to the Lighthouse

Start this chapter by reading the following:

In the realm of the endless darkness, you see a figure approaching you. Their skin looks like a rusty metal with a dark smoke rising from the cracks.

"Greetings, travelers", he says. "The mother sends me. The mother asks to guide you to the river. The travelers will come."

Echo (he/him) is an Enlightened Lightspren sent by Sja-anat to help the party traverse the sea of beads. He guides the PCs to the nearby boat. When the characters board it, he will stand at its end and use a long pole to make it move.

6.1.1 Shadesmar Guide

As the party swims through the sea of beads, read the following:

Thud! The pole hits the sea floor. Click! Click! Click! Click! The beads scatter before the boat.

"Mother says the travelers go to Kharbranth", thud! "The travelers must go south, to Unyielding Fidelity, and use the fabrial there", click, click, click! "The path will lead you to the lighthouse", thud! "There you can wait for ship to take you", click, click, click!

It will take a few moments to reach the shore. Echo will remain silent for the most part, unless the party asks him more questions:

Who are you?

I was a Lightspren once, before the mother showed me the truth. Now, I am Enlightened. Easier to hide nearby the revelry.

Why are you helping us?

The mother speaks highly of you. The mother asked to help you.

Will you travel with us?

I must return before the night. They must not see I am gone. They will suspect me, they will suspect mother.

What is this place?

It is where the spren live. It is how the people think of things. Like a reflection of your world, but more true.

Do you have any advice?

There is little food. You can trade to buy more. You pay with light in here, dun spheres are worthless. Control your emotions, don't draw them.

What path should we take?

Board a ship. Sail to Celebrant. It is The Rift on your side. There you will find more ships, take one sailing to Unyielding Fidelity. Some will suggest you go to the Perpendicularity. Don't go, not safe!

Treasure

In the boat there is some provisions for the party: just enough food to reach the Lighthouse and 100 marks worth of Stormlight. The light will slowly fade, but most of it should survive until the party reaches Celebrant. It will fade before reaching Unyielding Fidelity.

Path to Enlightenment

Investigating or prolonged holding of Black Scallop will expedite an Enlightened Elsecaller (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

6.1.2 Obsidian River

Once the boat reaches the shore, read the following:

You land on the black, glassy surface. It's not too wide and spreading southward. In the Physical Realm, a river flows here, but in here, the land seems to be inverted.

"My journey ends here", Echo says. "Your journey continues. Death before life, radiants!"

The path leads south. It will take 3 days of hike to reach the lighthouse, unless the characters are slowed down for some reason. Keep track of party resources (food, water, Investiture) as it is not trivial to renew them in here.

There is little variety in the surrounding environment. If you wish to enrich this part of the story, you can run some of the encounters from 6.2. "Feral Spren Encounters".

In the middle of 3rd day of hike, the party reaches their first stop. Proceed to 6.1.3. "The Lighthouse".

Spoiler Info

Journey on the same path is described in "Oathbringer", Chapter 95. Inescapable Void.

6.1.3 The Lighthouse

When the party reaches the lighthouse, read the following:

Light-skinned man welcomes you to the tall building with light shining on top.

"Are you here for the fortune? You are lucky, the storm should rage tonight."

Lighthouse keeper Riino (he/him) is an Expert Citizen (see Stormlight World Guide) who might be looking Shin for the characters, though in truth he is from Shu-Korath on Sel. He offers fortune reading and can trade with basic supplies.

The party is welcome in the lighthouse and they can wait in here for a ship that will take them south.

Spoiler Info

Kaladin interacting with the lighthouse keeper is described in "Oathbringer", Chapter 97. Riino.

Trading with Riino

Riino can sell canned food, full waterskins, and most of the items listed in Equipment section of Stormlight Handbook. Refer to that section for item prices.

He will accept only spheres full of light as dun ones are worthless in here.

Fortune Reading

For a price of 2 marks of stormlight, Riino will read fortune for one of the characters during the next high-storm. That can be something you prepare for a specific PC or one of the Death Rattles (see Appendix 6: Death Rattles).

A character who received the reading will gain Forbidden Knowledge [1]:

Forbidden Knowledge [N]. Roll Nd20 and note the results. As a , the character can spend one of those results to replace any d20 roll with it. Roll new set of d20s each time the character gains access to the source of the knowledge.

Ship Schedule

Riino knows about two ships that should be sailing here soon: a Reacher vessel with accommodation for human passengers and a smaller Mistspren boat.

He does not know how expensive would it be to board any of them, though he suspects it will be cheaper on a boat that does not provide food or water for humans.

If the characters decide to wait for the arrival of a ship, proceed to 6.3. "Sailing to Celebrant".

6.2 Feral Spren Encounters

Strong emotions attract spren in the Cognitive Realm just as usual. However, in here the spren can physically interact with the characters and even attack them.

When a PC shows an emotion, either during a player's roleplay or an action taken by the character, you can consider an encounter similar to one of the suggested here:

6.2.1 Fearspren

Scared PCs can attract Feral Fearsprens. They converge towards the character subjected to fear, and unless the PC succeeds on DC 14 Discipline check test to calm down, they will engage.

If the character fails the test, 2d4 Feral Fearsprens will attack them. They are not lethal, but they can harm them in other ways. During the fight, the character can repeat the test with disadvantage as .

The fight ends either when the spren are defeated, or when the character successfully passes the test. The spren will also retreat after they successfully attack a character 4 times.

Spoiler Info

6.2.2 Angerspren

A character filled with anger can attract Feral Angersprens. At first, the party can hear only screeching, metallic noises of the pack. When they do, allow the angry PC for a DC 14 Discipline check while they attempt to calm down.

If they fail, they are attacked by 1d4 Feral Angersprens. They can repeat the check during the fight as , but now it is made at disadvantage.

The fight ends either when angerspren are defeated or when the angry character manages to calm down.

Spoiler Info

Kaladin's anger attracting the spren is shown in "Oathbringer", Chapter 95. Inescapable Void.

6.2.3 Painspren

Characters who are hurt may attract up to 2d6 Feral Painsprens. They will latch to the hurting PC, causing even more pain.

Those cannot be escaped from, the encounter ends when they are defeated in a fight or when the hurting character loses consciousness.

6.2.4 Anticipationspren

When a character is nervous or anticipates something to happen, they can attract 1d6 Feral Anticipationsprens. They are not hostile, but they signal the PC's location with their long, streamer-like tongues, granting disadvantage to any Stealth checks.

If a character decides to attack one of them, they will defend themselves until defeated.

6.2.5 Lifespren

Lifespren can be found in the parts of the Cognitive Realm that correspond to the lush areas of the Physical Realm that are overgrown with verdant life.

Those spren are not interested with the PCs and they will continue to swarm around the plants they detect in the Physical Realm. Should a player gently interact with them, however, they will heal them for 1d4 Health. This can happen only once per encounter.

Lifespren were never shown on a cards of "Stormlight Archive" in a scene where they healed someone, but I think it's good to have something positive happening to the party in such a hostile environment.

6.2.6 Creationspren

Creationspren can be attracted by a PC using their Crafting skill, e.g. during a free time. They are attracted to the process of creation and they are intrigued by the thing being crafted.

At the end of this encounter, the character attracting them receives 1 Focus and 1 Maximum Focus until the next Long Rest.

6.3 Sailing to Celebrant

The characters must choose their transport to Celebrant. Riino knows about two ships that are expected to sail there soon.

Lightspren ship is the first one to arrive at the light-house. They charge the party for 30 marks of Stormlight for the passage to Celebrant. The voyage should take 3 days and they have a cabin for human passengers, offering food and water for the time of the trip.

If the party chooses this option, proceed to 6.3.1. "Sailing with Reachers".

If that price is too high for them, soon after mistspren arrive. They don't charge the party for the travel, as they are intrigued by humans and wish to know them better. However, their ship does not have any human adaptations - the party will need to provide their own food and water.

The party must board their ship or they will be stranded here for many days. Proceed to 6.3.2. "Sailing with Mistspren".

6.3.1 Sailing with Reachers

In the middle of 2nd day, their ship is attacked by Shademar Pirates. The attackers aim to steal Reacher's cargo to sell on the black market. The PCs can defend the Lightspren or step back.

Pirate's attack consists of three mistspren Mandra Riders. Their ship looms behind them with a cryptic standing on a bow, but he doesn't give an order to join the riders. The riders fight to the end.

At the end of the trip, when the party reaches Celebrant, they will lose 50% of their Stormlight as the Investiture leaks from the imperfect gems.

The same group of pirates can be met later in this chapter: see 6.5.2. "Sailing with Ashspren Pirates" or 6.6.1. "Pirate Attack".

6.3.2 Sailing with Mistspren

It should take 3 days for mistspren to reach Celebrant. However, as they treat the plan with little rigor, each day will come with spontaneous idea to change the course and visit some locations around Celebrant:

- day 1: Candlemore (one of them has family over there and wants to see them)
- day 2: The Burning Gardens (the captain always wanted to see them)
- day 3: Emberdark (to perhaps buy some goods for a trade in Celebrant)

Each sidetrack will add 1 day to the total travel time. The party can enter a Conversation with the captain each time to discourage them from their ideas and keep course on Celebrant. Each time they succeed in influencing the captain, the crew agrees to visit the location later.

Spren Captain has a Cognitive defense of 17, a Spiritual defense of 15, and 5 Focus. Like all mistspren she is a free spirit, yearning for new experiences.

If Spren Captain's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

At the end of the trip, the party will lose 50% of their Stormlight increased by additional 10% for each unplanned course change (up to 80% total).

6.3.3 Sailing to the Perpendicularity

The party should be discouraged to sail in that direction. Despite being the only reliable method of exiting the Cognitive Realm, Sja-anat's instruction are to go south.

If the characters insist on going there, make them enter the Conversation with their ship's captain. The spren are aware of some nasty rumors about this place and do not wish to sail there. The PCs must convince them to change the course.

If that didn't stop them, proceed with an encounter with a Newborn Heavenly One patrolling the skies. If they win that fight, introduce more and stronger Singers ready to fight the party.

At some point, the party should agree to take the safer route and sail to Celebrant.

6.4 Celebrant

Celebrant is a rather big spren city in the Cognitive Realm. The characters can explore the city and the surrounding island.

Their main objective should be to find a ship that will take them to Unyielding Fidelity, but they can engage with local sidequests if they have more time.

6.4.1 Money Exchange

If the characters fear for their Stormlight running out, they can visit the Money Exchange. Spren here have perfect gemstones they use to store the Investiture indefinitely.

The party can give the Stormlight to them and receive a credit ticket to be used as money in the city. They can also exchange those credits back for Stormlight, e.g. if a Radiant wanted to have some spare Investiture.

Spoiler Info

Celebrant moneychangers are referenced in "Oathbringer", Chapter 99. Reachers.

6.4.2 Dark Alley

While walking on the streets of Celebrant, the party might meet with a Ghostblood agent. To start the encounter, read the following:

Suddenly, you feel you're being watched. You turn back to see a man in a dark cloak observing you from a narrow alley. When he realizes he was spotted, he turns and starts walking back.

If the characters decide to follow him, add the following:

You quickly catch up to the man. It's a short human, one of the few in the Celebrant. On an arm, he has a strange, triangular tattoo.

"Rusts! There are no proper shadows to hide in this place!", he curses.

Steel (he/him) is a Ghostblood Scout on his post here in the Cognitive Realm. His job is to report anything suspicious and unusual. If any of the characters bonded an Enlightened Spren, he will try to learn more about them.

Trading Information

If an Enlightened Spren travels with the party, Steel will try to learn more about them. He will offer to trade this information for a off-book ship that will sail nearby Celebrant soon.

If the characters agree and they share what they know about Sja-anat and her children, Steel will tell them about a Shadesmar pirates who will sail to their secret cove on the island in four days.

Friendly Favor

If the characters sided with Ghostblood criminals before (eg during 5.1.2. "Criminal's Curiosity"), if the characters decided to trade information with him, Steel will also give the party Foreign Coin, saying:

"Pay with that to the pirates. They are not friends and cannot be trusted, but they will respect it."

Treasure

Ghostblood Scout will not attempt to start a fight with the party, but he will fight to the death if attacked. After killing him, a character can find 1d6 Foreign Coins and a Strange Cube.

6.4.3 Port

Here, the characters can ask about ships sailing south. The port administrator will answer all their questions. He can provide the schedule, but for the details, the PCs must ask ships' captains.

Overall, the party can choose between:

Honorspren

Honorspren sea patrol stopped here for a resupply. Captain Gale expects they will sail back to Unyielding Fidelity in 2 days.

They do not take passengers, but in a Conversation with Captain Gale the party might influence his assessment.

Captain Gale is a Spren Captain. He has a Cognitive defense of 17, a Spiritual defense of 15, and 5 Focus.

Just like all Honorspren, he is strict and obeys orders. All attempts to influence him gain disadvantage unless a character makes an argument that aligns with his duties.

He is a sworn enemy to Odium and he will not hide his disdain to spren Enlightened with Odium's influence, but the party might convince him to bring them as prisoners to Unyielding Fidelity for questioning.

If Captain Gale's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

Peakspre

Captain Ava who commands a Peakspre vessel will allow humans on her ship. She offers a cabin adapted for human needs for a price of 50 marks. They sail in 3 days.

Shadesmar Pirates

Spren in port don't know about this ship, the party can learn about it from 6.4.2. "Dark Alley".

The ship sails in 4 days. The PCs can board it for free and work for the time of travel as a price, though it would be advised to give them Foreign Coin if the party has one.

Other Ships

The port is full of other ships as well, but they are not sailing in the direction that would benefit the party. If the party wishes to talk with other captains, feel free to add more spren or human NPCs and their ships.

6.4.4 Marketplace

Here, the characters can buy food and other supplies. Assume anything the players wish to purchase can be found in various traders' stock.

Everything in Shadesmar marketplaces costs Investiture to buy. The party can sell their equipment to earn more of it.

Additional Work

If the PCs are lacking money, they can find a job in the port. Full day of work pays 5 marks of Stormlight per character. The salary is paid in Celebrant credits - it's worthless if transported to the Physical Realm.

Sailor's Gossip

If the party is listening carefully for any gossips on the marketplace, they may hear a Reacher complaining about their runaway Mandra. It is common for them to be pulled into the Physical Realm, but this one seems to have broken its harness and fly away.

If the characters wish to investigate this lead, it may help them start 6.4.9. "Mandra Whisperer" encounter.

6.4.5 Cultivationspren's Painting

Start this encounter by reading the following:

You see an art stand with many human portraits, most of them depicting Shin people in odd, outlandish clothing. However, one of the paintings catches your attention:

It is made in a very unique technique, painted with thick, vine-like brush strokes. It shows a spren with bronze skin, looking longingly into the black horizon.

"Hi there!", a cultivationspren greets you.
"Would you like to buy a painting?"

Dew (she/her) is a cultivationspren Expert Citizen (see Stormlight World Guide). She buys and sells off-world paintings, sometimes adding her own creation to the stock. She is excited to see the characters and is eager to show her stock and answer any questions:

Who is on this painting?

Oh, that is our local deadeye. Do you like the painting? I made it!

Where can we find it? The deadeye.

"Her", not "it". Why would you need to know that? She suffered enough, let her rest.

How much for the painting?

Off-world art prices vary from 100 to 500 brooms, that would be 400-2000 marks. The one I made I can sell for 100 marks.

Have you ever painted a human?

That would be exciting! But no, there are few of them on this side, and those who are here have no time for those things...

Would you like me to be your model?

Really? Oh yes, that would be amazing! You would need to sit really still for an entire day, but I can pay you 20 marks for your trouble!

Deadeye's Location

Dew does not wish to tell where the party can find the deadeye. If a PC decides to buy the painting, she will tell them more about it.

The party can also attempt to convince her to share this information during a Conversation.

Dew has a Cognitive defense of 15, a Spiritual defense of 14, and 4 Focus.

She loves art and lives to create and sell it. Any attempts to influence her gain disadvantage unless the PC shows shared passion for it - by either buying her paintings or helping her paint one.

If Dew's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

Spoiler Info

Kaladin browsing paintings in a similar shop in Celebrant is described in "Oathbringer", Chapter 102. Celebrant.

6.4.6 Exploring the Island

If the party wishes, they can leave the city and explore the outskirts. If they are scouting without any specific direction or knowledge about the island, ask them for a DC 20 Survival check.

If they succeed, they will find something interesting. Roll d12 to determine what is it:

- 1-4: A lone spren standing on a cliff
(see 6.4.7. "Stranded Deadeye")
- 5-8: A strange glimmer on the sky
(see 6.4.8. "Hunting for Starspren")
- 9-12: A mandra entangled in glassy bush
(see 6.4.9. "Mandra Whisperer")

Searching the island takes a whole day. The test can be repeated after a Long Rest.

If you have specified ideas on progression rewards for your players, don't roll the dice. Pick one of the results instead.

6.4.7 Stranded Deadeye

The party might have learned about a deadeye located on the island. If they wish to rescue her, that will take several steps:

Searching for the Spren

The party might have randomly find the spren while their island exploration (see 6.4.6. "Exploring the Island").

However if they are aware of the deadeye existence and her general location, if the party searches for her, don't roll for a random encounter during the exploration and allow them to find what they are looking for (assuming they succeeded on a Survival test).

If the painter shared exact location of the spren, the party can skip this step and assume the party already knows the way.

Reaching the Spren

The deadeye is stranded on top of a cliff. It will take an Endeavor to get there. The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 6 successes before 4 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

Potential approaches may include:

Searching for the best path

A PC can attempt DC 18 Survival check to scout for a better path.

Improvise a climbing equipment

A PC can attempt DC 17 Crafting check to create an improvised climbing equipment from things they have.

Use an actual climbing equipment

If the party previously obtained a climbing equipment, they can make DC 12 Athletics or Agility check to use it.

Help with your expertise

Does a character know how to best climb those? They can attempt a DC 16 Lore check to see.

Climbing obsidian cliff

The surface is glassy and hard to climb. If a PC fails a DC 21 Athletics or Agility check they will fall and hurt themselves for an amount of Health equal to the difference between their test's result and the required threshold.

Extracting the Spren

Once the party reaches the top of the cliffs, they will see that the path between them and the deadeye is guarded by four Feral Angersprens, who still remain in the area after the burning of the Rift.

During the fight, each time a character is wounded by the Feral Angerspren for the first time, they attract a Feral Painspren who will join the fight next round, attacking that PC.

The spren will not pursue fleeing characters, but they will fight to the end. It is impossible to leave this area with the deadeye without defeating them.

Claiming the Spren

Once all the hostile spren on the cliff are defeated, the party can safely approach the deadeye. It's a female Reacher standing on the edge and looking at the endless bead ocean. After the party interacts with her, she will start following them.

Other spren in are not fond of people using corpses as weapons, so having a deadeye in the party might harm some of the relations and interactions with other NPCs in Shadesmar.

If the party manages to exit the Cognitive Realm with her on their side, she will manifest as a Shardblade in the Physical Realm.

In most adventures rewarding the party with a Shardblade seems to be more natural in the Physical Realm. I like how Shadesmar offers different approach to that reward and it would seem to be a wasted opportunity if I did it the same way as always.

Try to make sure your party is aware of a deadeye located somewhere on the island before they leave it.

6.4.8 Hunting for Starspren

The party might have found the trail to the starspren during 6.4.6. "Exploring the Island". When they do, read the following:

For a quick moment, you see a glimmering distortion in the air. It shimmers for a second before disappearing.

Perhaps from a better spot you will be able to find what's the source of it...?

The party may attempt to find the mysterious source of the glimmering. It would take them a whole day. You can run this search as an Endeavor.

Use your own judgment for difficulty checks in the Endeavor tests. Try to keep them in the range of 14-20 (when in doubt, you can use $12 + 2d4$ formula).

The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 8 successes before 4 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective. When the party succeeds and finds the starspren, read the following:

From this angle you can see it clearly: a huge spren, like a greatshell with a long neck and multiple sets of wings. Bright points shine from within an ashen carapace, like a stars in a constellation.

The starspren notices you watching it. It twists and whirls, only to take a dramatic pose for you to admire.

All characters who were able to catch the starspren receive Focused condition until they leave Celebrant.

Spoiler Info

Adolin showing Shallan a starspren is described in "Rhythm of War", Chapter 34. A Flame Never Extinguished

6.4.9 Mandra Whisperer

When you start this scene, read the following:

In a thick, glassy, bush in front of you, there is a mandra entangled in a thorny vines. You see deep cuts on the poor beast's skin, with tendrils of smoky light evaporating from them.

The beast struggles and writhes, visibly terrified of the angerspren circling around it.

Three Feral Angersprens are hunting for a Restrained Feral Mandra. If they are attacked, they will fight to the end.

Freeing the Mandra

If the party defeat the angerspren, they will be able to free the Mandra from the vines. They will need to attempt DC 30 Thievery check to untangle glassy branches safely.

If a character fails the check, they manage to free the spren, but they take piercing damage equal to the difference between their result and the check threshold.

How to Train Your Mandra

After freeing the spren, the party might wish to tend to its wounds and take care of it. They might even wish to tame and train it. You can run this process as an Endeavor happening in parallel to the main plot.

During each rest, the PC may spend some time with the spren. Each time, based on actions, allow player to take a single check with related skill. On average, those tests should have a DC around 20, but use your own judgment each time. Those checks gain advantage if the PC "feeds" the spren with Stormlight during them.

The Endeavor succeeds if the PC accumulates 6 successes in total. There is no threshold for the amount of failures, but the party is constrained with their available time and resources. Upon success, proceed to 6.4.9. "Reward".

Reward

The mandra is healed, and during the time the party cared for it, it started considering them its pack. It connects to one of the PCs who treated it.

Outside of the Physical Realm (in this chapter and in Chapter 10 - Whispers from Beyond Realms) the player will be able to mount it and ride into battle. It uses Feral Mandra stat block.

In the Physical Realm, it has no substance to carry the rider, but it will appear as a luckspren flying around the PC, granting them disadvantage on any fall damage they would suffer.

Treat the mandra as a Ryshadium-like reward. Their stat blocks are very similar for this reason.

If you suspect the player who is to receive the reward is more equestrian guy than flying beast guy, you can replace the mandra in this encounter with a musicspren. Assume their stat block is the same, except they don't fly. In the Physical Realm, allow it to grant advantage on music tests instead.

6.4.10 Icy Cultivationspren

Start this encounter by reading the following:

A strange figure captures your eyes: he looks like a cultivationspren, though his skin's fern-like vines have much more pale blue hue. From among them, where usually one could expect crystals, there grow sharp icicles.

Next to him walks a spren looking like a shelled animal bristled with icy spikes on its shell and paws.

Hoarfrost is a True Spren Cultivationspren from Frostland regions. He is accompanied by his pet Feral Coldspren.

If the characters start a conversation he will answer their questions:

Who are you?

Hoarfrost, a trader from the icy south. Nice to meet you!

Why are you different?

Why, that's a rude thing to say... Especially coming from someone, whose kind is rather rare in those lands...

Are you a cultivationspren?

Well, yes, of course I am. Oh, you must have never seen a cultivationspren from the south, am I right?

I thought you are always green?

Well, you people can have different skin colors, why can't we? Frosty ferns are not uncommon for cultivationspren in my homeland.

How can we get south? Can you take us?

Oh, I'm sorry, but my trail continues north. You should search for a ship in the port.

Before Leaving

If the party shared their plans to go south, before they leave read the following:

You are about to leave, when Hoarfrost calls: "Hey, could you wait one minute?" He starts writing something on a parchment before sealing it and giving it to you.

"If you are in Unyielding Fidelity, can you please give this letter to my sister?", he asks. "She is a gardener there, you will not mistake her for anyone else."

If the characters agree, they will get an envelope addressed to Floe. The letter is sealed with icy, crystalline seal. If the characters decide to break the seal, they will have trouble to fix it later, but they can read the letter:

Dear sister!

You were right, as always. It has started. We shouldn't have stopped you. Those are nice humans, go with them, perhaps it is not too late...

Though it is stated that there are different cultures among the spren of one kind, "Stormlight Archive" never shows one with different features, e.g. the color of spren's skin. I added it here to ensure Shadesmar is always a mystery, with unknown elements to explore, that can surprise even those, who read all the books.

Icy cultivationspren are not cannon. Feel free to skip this encounter if your group highly values lore accuracy in your games. It is not essential for the plot.

Feral Coldspren are never shown in the Cognitive Realm in the books. It is never confirmed how do they look in here. My interpretation of their anatomy is not cannon, feel free not to include it in this encounter or change it's appearance.

6.4.11 Sailing Away

Once the characters board a ship sailing south, they will leave Celebrant never to return. Advance them to level 7 before proceeding to the next part of their journey.

6.5 Sailing to Unyielding Fidelity

The party boarded a ship on their journey to Unyielding Fidelity. However, there is still a long road ahead...

Depending on the party's choice of the ship, proceed to:

- 6.5.1. "Sailing with Peakspren"
- 6.5.2. "Sailing with Ashspren Pirates"
- 6.5.3. "Sailing with Honorspren"

6.5.1 Sailing with Peakspren

The party can board peakspren ship for 50 marks of Stormlight. They will be provided food and water for the time of the trip.

Peakspren Crew

Captain Ava (she/her) and her crew consisting of five True Sprens (all peakspren) man this ship. They are reliable and experienced sailors who are sailing from Cultivation's Perpendicularity with goods to trade at Unyielding Fidelity.

"Ava" is actually not her full name. It's a shorten version of "Avalanche" she uses in formal occasions (e.g. when talking to honorspren sea patrol).

Pirate Attack!

At the 2nd day of the journey, the peakspren ship is attacked by the pirates. For details of this encounter, see 6.6.1. "Pirate Attack".

The characters can join either side of the combat.

If the party stays on the side of peakspren and they win, they can continue the journey on their ship. If they lose, however, they will be captured by the pirates. Proceed to 6.5.2. "Imprisoned by Ashspren".

If they switch sides and join the pirates, proceed to 6.5.2. "Sailing with Ashspren Pirates" after the battle, regardless of the result.

Honorspren Inspection

At the 3rd day of the journey, honorspren sea patrol demands to inspect the ship. For details of this encounter, see 6.6.2. "Honorspren Inspection".

If the players rise suspicions during the inspection, they will be asked to be taken by honorspren for questioning in Unyielding Fidelity. If the party agrees, proceed to 6.5.3. "Sailing with Honorspren".

Failure to comply will make honorspren hostile, starting a fight. If the party wins, they can remain on the peakspren ship. If they are defeated, proceed to 6.5.3. "Imprisoned by Honorspren".

6.5.2 Sailing with Ashspren Pirates

Boarding the ship is free, but the characters must pay in other ways for the voyage. On top of that, the pirates do not offer food and water - the PCs must have their own, or they will suffer Exhausted [1] for each day without them.

The party can show Foreign Coin, earning the crew's respect and an expectation to participate in the fights. The PCs can also work mundane tasks on the ship with DC 15 Thievery (or other applicable skill) check.

If the characters fail any of the above, Captain Chart will deem them worthless. Their water will be drugged and they will be imprisoned in their sleep - proceed to 6.5.2. "Imprisoned by Ashspren".

Pirate Crew

Captain Chart is a rebel cryptic who commands seven Spren Pirates: three mistspren and four ashspren. They are nasty thugs, who attack smaller ships to steal and plunder.

Their ship is fast and nimble, pulled by more mandras than one would expect for a vessel this big. During the fight, some of them are used as mounts as a few pirates ride them into battle as Mandra Riders.

Imprisoned by Ashspren

Start this scene by reading the following:

You wake up in the morning, your head hurting like it was full of broken glass. You are striped of all your possessions, locked behind iron bars.

"Nothing personal, humans", you hear Captain Chart speaking from the dark corner of the room. "You are useless as part of the crew, but we can sell you for at least some profit. Don't worry, we will take you to Unyielding Fidelity, as promised..."

The party is imprisoned and the pirates are planning to sell them as slaves. They do not care to feed them - each PC gets Exhausted [1] for each day they go without the food. A PC can attempt Persuasion against mistspren's Defenses to beg them for food.

The prisoners are guarded for most of the time, though they can speak freely and plan their escape. To open the lock they would need succeed on DC 20 Thievery check (assuming they can get proper tools for the job). There will be an opportunity for escape when the pirates are in a middle of a fight, either with peakspren or honorspren.

Easy Money

At the 2nd day of journey, the pirates catch Peakspren ship, starting the attack against the crew (for details, see 6.5.1. "Peakspren Crew"). The characters can join either side of the combat.

If the party joins the side of peakspren and they win, they can continue the journey on their ship. If they lose, however, they will be captured by the pirates. Proceed to 6.5.2. "Imprisoned by Ashspren".

If the party chooses to fight for the pirates, they can continue the journey on their ship. What's more, if they win, the captain will share the spoils with them - d20 + 10 marks of Stormlight for each character.

Honorspren Inspection

At the 3rd day of the journey, honorspren sea patrol demands to inspect the ship. For details of this encounter, see 6.6.2. "Honorspren Inspection".

Honorspren quickly realize they are dealing with pirates, which starts the fight. The characters can join either side of the combat.

If the party joins honorspren, after the fight proceed to 6.5.3. "Sailing with Honorspren" regardless of the result.

If the party chooses to fight with the pirates, they can remain on the ship.

Rewarded Loyalty

If the party stays on the side of the pirates during all encounters, the captain will recognize their loyalty. If at least one of them is not bonded to a spren, he will send one of the ashspren with them, securing a connection to powerful friends.

6.5.3 Sailing with Honorspren

The party cannot board this ship, unless Captain Gale decides there is a reason for it. When that happens, the party will be provided with food and water.

Depending on the reason why the party is on the ship, the captain may decide it will be better if one of the PCs, their spren, or the entire party are held in custody. If that happens, proceed to 6.5.3. "Imprisoned by Honorspren".

Honorspren Crew

Captain Gale commands sea patrol consisting of six other honorspren True Sprens. The ship also employs mistspren crew, but in the case of fight they are ordered not to get involved. Captain Gale believes it wouldn't be honorable to expect them to join the battle.

Their whole ship is massive, in a military design. It reassembles a small swimming fortress pulled by mandras.

Imprisoned by Honorspren

Start this scene by reading the following:

Honorspren soldiers drag you to the brig and lock the door behind you. Your cell is clean and relatively comfortable, but still - it's a cell.

"You cannot be trusted", Captain Gale says, "and it will be better for everybody if you are contained here. Your companions are free to walk on deck, but they will join you at the first sign of trouble."

Honorspren treat their prisoners well, providing them with regular food and water. However, there is always one of them keeping watch - unless there is fight on the deck.

When the guard is not there, the party might attempt to lockpick the doors with DC 20 Thievery check. They may also try other methods of freeing their companions.

Hunting Pirates

The captain is aware of the pirates on those waters and is actively searching for them. At 2nd day of the journey, they will catch them, starting a fight (see 6.6.1. "Pirate Attack"). The characters can join either side of the combat.

If the party chooses to fight on the side of honorspren, if they win, they will continue the journey on their ship. If they lose, they will be captured by the pirates - proceed to 6.5.2. "Imprisoned by Ashspren".

If the party switches sides and joins the pirates, if they win, they will continue the journey on their ship - proceed to 6.5.2. "Sailing with Ashspren Pirates". If they lose, however, they will be imprisoned by honorspren who will demand their trial in Unyielding Fidelity.

Peakspreen Inspection

On the 3rd day, honorspren ship encounters the peakspreen vessel. Honorspren demand to inspect the ship and peakspreen comply.

It is an opportunity for PCs who don't wish to continue this travel on their ship. Each PC and accompanying NPC can attempt a Stealth check against honorspren captain's defenses.

If they succeed, they can continue the travel on peakspreen ship (though it may lead to some more interactions with upset peakspreen). On a failure, honorspren turn hostile against the sneaking PCs, starting a fight.

6.5.4 Reaching the Destination

After the party experienced an encounter with peakspreen, honorspren and the pirates, you might consider introducing them to other events from 6.6. "Shadesmar Sea Encounters".

When those are over, proceed to 6.7. "Unyielding Fidelity".

6.6 Shadesmar Sea Encounters

While the party is traveling on sea, you might consider enriching their story with following encounters.

Some of them are mandatory when they are traveling on a specific ship and will be listed in 6.5. "Sailing to Unyielding Fidelity" section, but you can add more of them from here if you want to.

Make sure every encounter from this list is used only once. If the party traveled with peakspreen, were attacked by pirates and later detained by honorspren, do not run the pirate encounter again.

When there is no more encounters you want to introduce, proceed to 6.7. "Unyielding Fidelity".

6.6.1 Pirate Attack

Start this scene by reading the following:

Suddenly, you hear more rapid bead clicking in a distance. You turn in that direction to see three figures mounted on mandra steeds rushing towards you.

Behind them, a ship is quickly approaching you. A cryptic standing on its bow holds his sword high, aiming at you. It seems this battle is unavoidable...

The ship is attacked by pirates. Three mistspren Mandra Riders and four ashspren Spren Pirates are lead by cryptic Spren Captain. They will fight with the ship's crew until one of the sides is fully defeated.

The party can join the fight on either side or they can use the chaos as a cover for their other schemes.

Mandra Riders were never described in any book, but it feels like a tactic that might happen in the Shadesmar and since the adversary roster could use some variety, I decided to introduce them.

6.6.2 Honorspren Inspection

Start this scene by reading the following:

Your ship is being approached by a small floating fortress pulled by mandras. An honorspren captain declares:

"By the authority of Unyielding Fidelity, I, Captain Gale, demand that you granted me permission to enter your ship for a routine inspection."

An honorspren Spren Captain and his six honorspren True Spren enter your ship. If they find anything illegal they will demand an explanation, which might turn into a fight. When this happen, the party may join either side (unless they were the reason the combat started), or use it as a cover for their own schemes.

If the inspection finds suspicious individuals in the party (another honorspren or an enlightened spren), they will consider detaining them and transporting to Unyielding Fidelity for a trial. The party will have a chance to enter a Conversation with Captain Gale to ease his mind.

Spren Captain has a Cognitive defense of 17, a Spiritual defense of 15, and 5 Focus. He is bound by duty and honor and he will aim to enact them in his decisions.

If the captain's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

Additional Complications

If a character rolls  during the encounter with honorspren, the GM may spend it for them to find Black Scallop, consider it suspicious and confiscate it. The party will need to retrieve it from Captain Gale before they can escape from Shadesmar.

6.6.3 Trading Ship

When you start this scene, read the following:

A rich vessel approaches your ship. Its fat captain in fancy robes smiles at you.

"Hellooooo!", he yells loud enough to be heard a few miles away. "Would you like to trade? We have best prices on this sea, and the best quality! I'm sure something will catch your eye!"

The party is approached by a trader's ship. They trade with items, though the prices are less than ideal: buying costs twice as much, while selling can be done for half the price. The party can enter Conversation with ship's captain to get better prices.

Depending on what your story needs, the traders can be either spren or humans, from either Roshar or off-world.

6.6.4 Fused Scouts

Start this encounter by reading the following:

You see small red points, flying far from your ship. Soon, as they come closer, you see red ribbons trailing behind them.

You realize when it is too late - those are not spren, those are fused. And if you can see them, they can see you!

Soon after, the ship is attacked by three Newborn Heavenly Ones. They fight with hatred and focus their attacks on the PCs, ignoring other crew members who join to defend their ship.

The singers will fight to the end. They will attempt to throw the PCs off the ship for an easy kill, but they will not refuse to use their weapons either.

If a character is thrown into the sea, they will start drowning in a round unless they grab a rope. There are plenty of those on the ship, but they require an  to throw them. If no PC does that, one of the crew spren will do that instead in their turn.

6.6.5 Feral Mandras

When you start this encounter, read the following:

On a horizon, you see a flock of beasts flying above the surface of the bead ocean. When they fly closer, you recognize they are mandras, domesticated luckspren who usually pull other ships.

You never consider them to be aggressive, but this pack certainly looks hostile. What riled them up? Were they corrupted by Sja-anat?

The party is attacked by 1d4 + 2 Feral Mandras. They will fight until the end.

If the party missed 6.4.9. "Mandra Whisperer" encounter, after the fight one of the mandras may remain behind, allowing the PCs to start 6.4.9. "How to Train Your Mandra" arc.

6.7 Unyielding Fidelity

When the party reaches Unyielding Fidelity, read the following:

You arrive at Unyielding Fidelity, an impressive honorspren fortress. Hundreds feet tall, with rectangular walls made of blue stone that defy the laws of gravity: each wall is a separate surface, with roads, parks and fountains ignoring the true meaning of "down".

The party reached their destination! However, to use Black Scallop and travel back to the Physical Realm they must gather together - which may be difficult if honorspren detained one of them.

Additional complication may happen if the sea patrol confiscated the artifact. If that's the case, the PCs must work to recover it.

Allow the party to spend some time around and interact with the NPCs. Once the party is ready to proceed or they lack ideas what to do next, start the events of 6.7.4. "Fight on the Walls".

6.7.1 Ice Gardener

When the party approaches the fortress, they will notice a cultivationspren with a pale-blue, fern-like body. If the party accepted quest from 6.4.10. "Icy Cultivationspren", they will recognize the recipient of the letter they are carrying.

Reward

If the players deliver the letter to Floe, if the letter doesn't show any signs of being opened, the spren will ask the party to join them.

A PC can bond her and become a Radiant. If they do, they will receive free talent from Abrasion talent tree. However, their first Progression talent costs twice as much. Subsequent talents in those trees have standard cost.

If no player wishes to bond her, she will accompany them until she finds someone suitable. Until then, she will be supportive NPC always ready to provide a helpful comment.

If she sees the party read the letter, she won't trust them enough - she will find a Radiant to bond on her own, possibly meeting the PCs in the future chapters.

Floe the Cultivationspren

Floe is a cultivationspren from Frostland regions. Her kin have pale-blue look of their vines, and instead of crystals, their vines entangle over icicles and ice shards.

In the Physical Realm, they manifest as frost-like patterns. Most commonly they mark flat surfaces remaining flat themselves, but occasionally they can rise as three-dimensional beings.

Floe loves cold weathers, with sliding on ice being her favorite fun activity. She is not an expert on medicine - her remedy on any ailment is to "put an ice on it". Surprisingly, sometimes it helps!

6.7.2 Tukari Prisoners

When the PCs approach the cages, read the following:

You see a group of people locked in a cage next to the wall. Judging by their clothes, they are from the western part of Roshar, Tukar perhaps?

"Hey, you, human!", one of them calls you in a broken alethi. "Set us free! We pay!"

If the characters want to speak with the prisoners, they will tell the following:

Who are you? Where are you from?

"Tukari. From Tukar. On the other side. Peace be to you!"

How much will you pay for freeing you?

"20 marks. Full with Stormlight. Rare on this side, yes?"

Why are you locked in here?

"Honorspren. Who knows their reasons? They not think like us." With a successful DC 18 Insight check a PC can determine they know exactly why they are imprisoned.

Don't lie to me, why are you here?

If the PC succeeds on DC 15 Intimidation check, the prisoners will answer:

"All right, all right! We were attacked by an ash-spren on our way here. We defended ourselves. Honorspren say it's a crime in here. They lock us here."

How can we enter the fortress?

"Not try. You enter, you leave never. Run from here if can!"

Who's got a key to those cages?

"Honorspren. The girl. One with combat skirt."

Releasing the Prisoners

To open the cages, a PC must pass a DC 25 Thievery check or use a key held by one of the honorspren.

To pickpocket the key carried by female honorspren, a PC must succeed on DC 20 Thievery check. This check gains an advantage during 6.7.4. "Fight on the Walls". Pickpocket failure will make honorspren hostile.

If the tukari are released during 6.7.4. "Fight on the Walls", they will focus on running away, attacking only those who try to stop them.

6.7.3 Honorspren Trial

If the party arrived to Unyielding Fidelity with honorspren, any character held by them in the custody will be transported to the cages already occupied by tukari people.

Honorspren are claiming the characters must stay here and await the trial. For that, they need the High Judge, who is currently away. Nobody will provide a timeline when will he arrive here.

This book does not provide any details for the trial. It is suggested the party attempted to leave this place before it happens. If they insist on staying despite all warnings it's not a good idea - improvise!

6.7.4 Fight on the Walls

When you start this scene, read the following:

Suddenly, you see movement from the west - a group is approaching Unyielding Fidelity. When they come closer, you see marble-white skin, with red patterns. Singers!

Their small force is lead by two Heavenly Ones, Fused unhinged enough to attempt this kind of attack.

Unyielding Fidelity is being attacked by Singer forces: 2 Newborn Heavenly Ones, 4 Newborn Direform Regals and 4 Newborn Stormform Regals. During the combat they will focus on fighting honorspren forces. They will fight to the end.

The fortress is defended by honorspren guards: 8 True Sprens and single Spren Captain.

PCs' Goals

At the end of this fight, the party must complete the following objectives:

- Reclaim Black Scallop from Captain Gale if it was confiscated
- You must gather your party before venturing forth

If the party is ready with those objectives, they can use Black Scallop without waiting for the end of the fight.

If the PCs aim to reclaim the stolen artifact, they can use the fight as a distraction to pickpocket it from Captain Gale. They can also backstab him to loot the artifact when he is weaken.

To gather the party, if one of them is locked, they can obtain the key from the guard in a similar way. They can also attempt to lockpick the cages.

An alternative would be to join the fight on the side of honorspren. If they manage to defend the Singer force together, Captain Gale will recognize honor of their actions, allowing them to go free.

Walkable Walls

It is possible to walk on the external walls of Unyielding Fidelity as though they were a floor. If a character other than honorspren or Windrunner rolls  while standing on a wall, the GM can spend it to give them Disoriented condition until their next round.

In the books we are only shown that the internal walls of honorspren cities are walkable and it would make quite a poor defense if the external walls allowed for the same, but it makes an interesting battlefield, so let's allow it, shall we?

Limited Visibility

The edge of the wall's corner obscures vision of the 2nd part of the wall. Characters will not be able to see enemies behind the corner. Use your own judgment for any specific cases.

Angerspren Pens

There are 2 Feral Angersprens locked in nearby pens. The PCs can open them with DC 15 Thievery check to let them loose. Angerspren will attack the nearest character, without regards of the side their prey is fighting on.

Pirates Join the Fight

If during the previous encounters honorspren won in a fight against ashspren pirates, they might have taken some of them into the custody. If that's the case, the remaining pirates may plan a rescue mission.

If that's the case, on the 2nd round of the combat they will drop their hooded cloaks and join the fight. They will focus on freeing their mates from the cages, but they won't hesitate to attack any honorspren or Singer standing in the way.

Depending on your party's preferred playstyle, you might end this chapter with either huge and epic fight, or ignore the fighters and focus on stealth, pickpocket and backstabbing. Don't make your players do things they will not enjoy.

6.8 To the Physical Realm

Once the party decides to use Black Scallop, read the following:

When you crack the shell of the ancient artifact, suddenly a pillar of light shoots into the sky. From within it, black tendrils of misty smoke slowly evaporate into the air. Next moment, the pillar starts to visibly shrink.

The party has 1 round to enter the temporal Perpendicularity. They and their entire equipment is transported nearby Kharbranth. If they rescued deadeye spren in Celebrant, she will appear as a Shardblade on the other side.

Any characters, equipment or unfinished quests are left behind and there is no way to bring them back. For this reason, make sure the players understand the consequences of using the item when they are not grouped together.

Path to Enlightenment

Using Black Scallop, an ancient artifact of Dai-Gonarthis, the Black Fisher will expedite an Enlightened Elsecaller (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

This is a last time the story references Dai-Gonarthis. Make sure after this scene an Enlightened Elsecaller was expedited 3 times in total.

6.8.1 Visions of Disdain

When the PCs enter the summoned pillar of light, read the following:

When light fades away, you find yourself standing on a stony shore. The day is warm and the cremlings skitter on a lush vegetation around you.

You are in a city full of Singers and golden-haired people. They talk, laugh, and trade. There is no sign of war anywhere.

Give the PCs a short moment to walk around. A character with a proper expertise might recognize the people as Iriali and the city as Kasitor. Even if none of the PCs usually speak their language, they will be able to communicate without issues.

A moment later, read the following:

There is one figure, that catches your attention. A feamalen Singer wearing a proud and regal form. She stands above the crowd, her arms spread in a welcoming gesture.

"This land is for you to thrive, my children", she says. "Live peacefully, my dearest, and forget the horrors of war, as those will never reach you again".

When Ba-Ado-Mishram notices the party, read the following:

Suddenly, her face changes. Serenity gone, now replaced with a visage tormented with hate and disdain. She jerks her head to look directly at you and changes her speech:

"You will scream, begging for your death, when I will rip your throat! You will choke on your own blood! I will make you suffer, every day for the rest of your miserable lives! I will..."

With that, the vision end, but the echo of hateful screams still follows you...

After the vision ends, proceed to the next chapter.

Path to Enlightenment

Meeting Ba-Ado-Mishram in a vision will expedite an Enlightened Stoneward (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

6.9 Journeying Onward

After the party uses Black Scallop to exit from Shadesmar and enter Kharbranth, advance them to level 8 and move to the next chapter.

Chapter 7 - Whispers of the Slain

7.0 Running This Chapter

The characters reached Kharbranth. They will need to solve a mystery lurking in the city hospitals. When they reach King Taravangian, they will need to convince him to let them travel together to Urithiru.

Run the entire chapter as a big, ongoing Discovery Endeavor. The party will need to investigate a web of clues to reach their final goal. Since the web is not linear, there will be several paths leading there.

7.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters start this chapter at level 8. Advance them twice in this chapter: once after they enter the Palanaeum and once at the end of the chapter.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Remembering fallen citizens of Kharbranth
- Unveiling lies and secrets of the Diagram hospitals
- Death Rattles and the presence of Moelach may expedite an Enlightened Truthwatcher.

Killing a Soulcaster in 7.6. "Kharbranth Monastery" will allow a PC to use his fabrial.

In 7.9. "Conclave Hospitals", the PCs can obtain Forbidden Knowledge [1].

7.0.2 Forging Alliances

During the events of this chapter, the party will have an opportunity to increase relations with more powerful allies. However, gaining one ally will mean gaining one enemy as well...

- Saving Ghostblood agent will help to secure alliance with this organization
- Assisting Diagram operatives may grant access to their knowledge

7.0.3 Storm Patterns

The party starts this chapter without any Investiture available. However, in one of first scenes a Highstorm will renew their reserves.

This book will not offer more Highstorm scenes. You can assume they appear regularly now, blowing from east every $1d6 + 6$ days (roll new value after each passing storm). You can also skip tracking them and just assume the Stormlight will be available in abundance.

Similarly, this book will not provide information about the Everstorms. Assume they appear every 9 days and that the next one is expected in 1d8 days.

In "Oathbringer", Highstorms return right before King Taravangian arrives to Urithiru, which aligns with the story of Chapter 8 - The Dark Tower. However, it feels wrong to limit Radiant potential two chapters in a row and therefore, for the gameplay reasons, I decided to include them in this chapter. If you want to stick to the lore, feel free to skip them in here.

7.0.4 Language Barrier

In Kharbranth not everyone speaks alethi. The elites (nobles, surgeons, scholars) recognize Alethkar as a major power and decided to learn their language, but common folk speak only Kharbranthian.

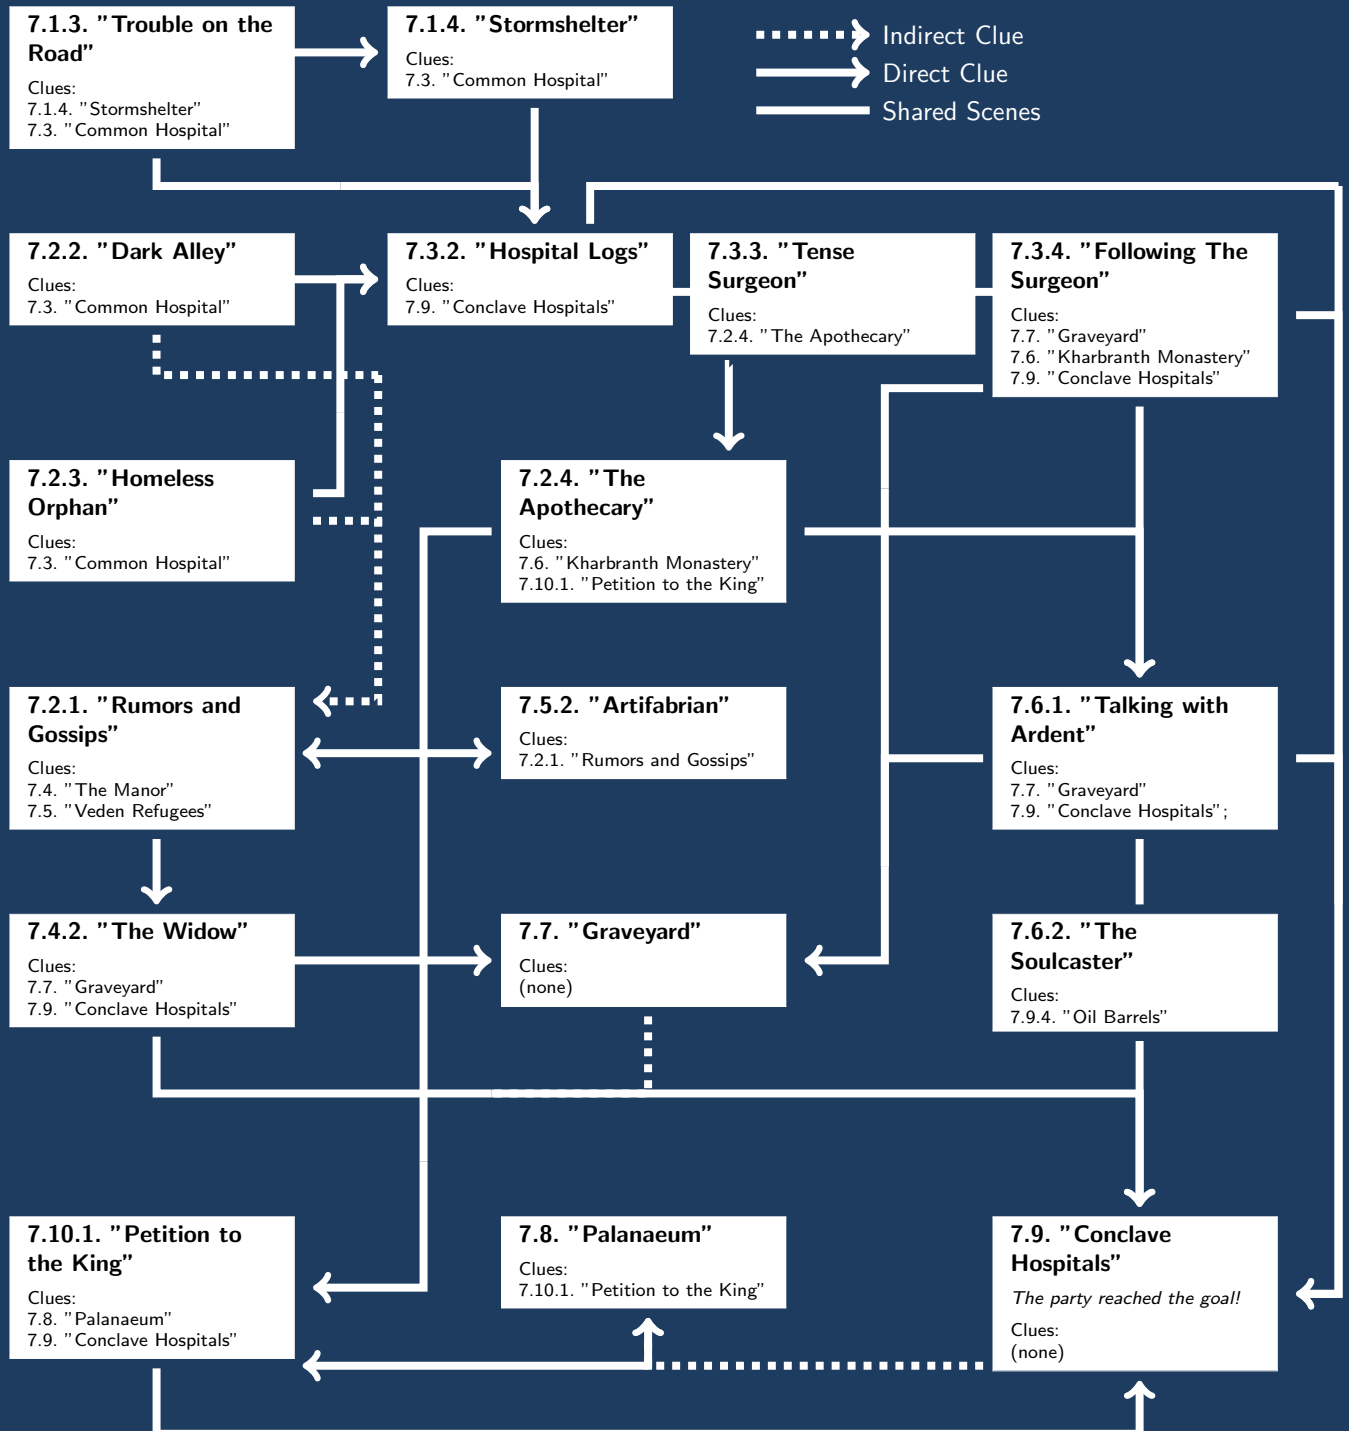

If no PC in the party has an expertise in this culture, they might have trouble communicating without a hired translator.

7.0.5 Policing Forces

Kharbranth is patrolled by small groups consisting of four Diagram Muscles each. When the party attack a citizen for any reason, they will appear on the scene during the next round of fight, defending the civilian and allowing them to flee.

Chapter 7 - Whispers of the Slain

Discovery Web Map

7.1 Path to Kharbranth

The party successfully escaped the perils of the Shademar. Now they find themselves in a relatively safe area nearby the City of Bells, Kharbranth.

7.1.1 Out from the Darkness

Start the chapter by reading the following:

You step out from the light into a light breeze. The grass retracts under your step and you finally see the shimmering light of the sun. Normal, golden sun! After so many days, you finally feel... home.

You are standing on a mountain path, leading to the nearby city - Kharbranth.

Using Black Scallop consumed all of the party's Investiture - both from the PCs and their spheres. They will need to resupply before they can use their Radaint abilities.

Once the party is ready to move on the path, proceed to 7.1.3. "Trouble on the Road".

Depleting the Stormlight is to made the next scene a bit more balanced for PCs on this level. Also - it is to prevent any Progression users to heal the NPCs too quickly - we need them to set the party on the path to the hospital.

7.1.2 What's the Next Step?

If the PCs are wondering about their next goal, either now or in some future scenes in this chapter, read the following to them:

Your Enlightened Spren becomes visible to your friends and explains:

"Our Mother did not specify the next phase of her plan. However, she was very interested in the human ruling over this city, King Taravangian. We should probably scout the city, see how he runs it, perhaps even meet the man himself?"

In this chapter, the party will not have a clear, specified end goal. Instead, they should follow the clues of Discovery Endeavor to see where will they lead them.

7.1.3 Trouble on the Road

While the PCs are walking on the road to Kharbranth, read the following:

As you are walking, suddenly you hear screams of pain and terror. As you rush towards it, you see a whitespine massacring a merchant caravan: barrels of wine lie shattered everywhere, their sweet content mixing with a blood of a dying merchant. The beast looks at the second person, ready to charge.

The party enters in a middle of a fight. Wild Whitespine is attacking helpless caravan. One of the merchants is as good as dead, the other will die unless the PCs intervene. Wild Whitespine will fight until slain.

Treasure

There is nothing left from the caravan. The chull was slain, all the goods are destroyed.

Death Rattle

After the fight, or at the moment when one of the PCs attempts to help the dying merchant, read the following:

You approach the merchant lying in his own blood. His wounds are too severe... He is struggling for each breath, his face painting suffering.

Suddenly his eyes go wide, and he whispers: "They love me and in my hand I'm holding their fate: who will live, who is destined for more?"

After those words, the merchant dies.

Path to Enlightenment

Hearing a Death Rattle, a vision sent by Moelach, can expedite an Enlightened Truthwatcher (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

The Survivor

If the party managed to save the second merchant, they will be able to talk with him.

Who are you?

I'm Tareh, a merchant traveling from the Shattered Plains. When we survived the strange storm we thought the worst is behind us. Little did we know...

Where were you heading?

We hoped to reach Kharbranth before the Storm... It should hit tonight... But there should be a stormshelter on the road as well... We better hurry towards it!

What about your wounds?

I'm lucky the whitespine only scratched me. I will live, thanks to you. And the surgeons in Kharbranth will take care of the rest.

Surgeons?

Don't you know? Everybody everywhere knows! King Taravangian runs free hospitals in the city. His surgeons help everyone in need.

Can we heal you?

How? Old magic? Voidbringers? No, thank you, I will trust the professionals with it, no offense! Just take me to the hospital.

Clues

The Highstorm is coming, but there is a stormshelter nearby - see 7.1.4. "Stormshelter".

In the city, there are hospitals tending to sick and wounded - see 7.3. "Common Hospital".

7.1.4 Stormshelter

As the party reaches this point, read the following:

As you reach the stormshelter, you see dark clouds gathering in the east. You made it safely in time. You enter through the door to a dark, stony room.

There are a few people inside. One of them, a man in a white apron, approaches you and says in a broken alethi: "Hello! The king predicted you will be here. I'm glad you made it in time."

The person greeting the party is a Kharbranth Surgeon. He can tend to the wounded. He will not charge for his help. After the Storm is over, he will take Tareh to the city hospital. Two Diagram Muscles will help him carry the man in the stretcher.

After the Storm passes, the party can easily reach the city with their Investiture reserves renewed. Proceed to 7.2. "Kharbranth, the City of Bells".

"Stormlight Archive" never shows the Diagram having access to information with such precision and timeframe details. If you believe King Taravangian predicting PCs arrival bends the lore too much, you can skip the greeting. I added it to evoke a feeling of eerie mystery.

Healing the Party

Kharbranth Surgeon can use his abilities to heal the PCs and remove their negative conditions from injuries. When they do that for the first time, read the following:

As your pain fades away, you feel a surge of gratitude and kinship towards the surgeon. At the same time, you know - if you ever find yourself in an opposite camp, it would be hard for you to argue against your savior...

In this chapter, the party will have multiple opportunities to resolve conflicts in a Conversations with the surgeons. You can introduce them to their unique abilities by running one of those at the end of the scene. E.g., allow the PCs to argue against taking Tareh to the hospital if they are not sure about the idea.

7.2 Kharbranth, the City of Bells

The party can freely walk on the city streets, visit shops and other NPCs. This book does not list every possible location the PCs can see, but everything expected to be located in a big city can be found in here.

You can assume the prices here are normal. All traders accept spheres from Alethkar, even if they are dun. There is one exception - by the king's order, all oil is free and provided by the state. King Taravangian hopes this will help people who suffer after the Everstorm.

The source of the free oil will be revealed later in 7.9.4. "Oil Barrels".

7.2.1 Rumors and Gossips

The PCs can ask around about King Taravangian, the hospitals and overall mood of the citizens of Kharbranth. They can also search for more clues and rumors. When they do, they will learn:

People love the king.

Between free healthcare, free oil and the alliance with Vedenar, people love the king and his policies.

Hospitals helped many people.

Everyone either was healed by the surgeons or knows someone who was. People are very satisfied with the care they get in the hospitals.

Only a few deaths.

The surgeons do what they can, but sometimes death is inevitable. The most recent one was lord Sartvian living in the manor outside the city. However, the surgeons saved multiple hopeless cases, so nobody blames them.

Veden refugees.

There is a veden camp in the city outskirts. They sailed to Kharbranth after their civil war-wounded and their families. They say a very skilled artifician lives there.

Oil Source

If, after the request from 7.5.2. "Artifician", the party asks about the source of the free oil, no merchant will know what it is made from. However, they will point it comes from the Conclave.

Clues

The party can investigate the case of lord Sartvian's death - see 7.4. "The Manor".

The PCs can also visit the veden refugee camp to learn more from them - see 7.5. "Veden Refugees".

Free oil comes from the Conclave, but nobody knows what variance it is.

7.2.2 Dark Alley

As the party explores the city, at some time, read the following:

You walk on the city streets, when suddenly you hear a whisper:

"Psst, you! With the strange spren! Over here! The boss told we should expect you in here, and now you can prove your worth! We've got a job for you."

The PCs are stopped by a Ghostblood Scout who says he has a quest for them. If the party shows interest, he will clarify the details:

You know about us? How?

Our agent has seen you in the darkness, a few days ago. Quite a journey you had, hadn't you?

What happened?

We were working in a team, Ferrum and I. One day, they took him from the street. Told people about some plague symptoms. You must find him!

Who took him? Where?

The surgeons! Took him to the hospital. He was perfectly healthy!

How can we recognize him?

He had the tattoo. We all have. (pulls up his sleeves to show a triangle tattoo made out of three diamond shapes)

What exactly do you want us to do?

Find him, and bring him back. If you can't, make sure he will never talk, understood? But even then, after all of that, you must bring his body. As a proof and a precaution. They can't learn his secrets!

What we will have out of it?

Friends. Powerful friends, with wide connections. You would be surprised what secrets can we share with our allies...

Clue

Ghostblood agent Ferrum was kidnapped from the streets and taken to 7.3. "Common Hospital".

7.2.3 Homeless Orphan

When the party is about to enter the hospital, read the following:

A small, dirty boy wearing old clothes approaches you.

"Um.... Excuse me", he says. "Have you seen my sister...?"

The characters can talk with the boy to ask him for more details:

What is your name?

Um... Dor, sir... And my sister, she's Kina. Have you seen her?

What happened to your sister?

She got very sick. She got hot, and weak, and got ugly rash on her face, and her head got big and bloated. I think a cremling bit her... The doctors took her.

When did Kina got sick?

Um... that was a couple of weeks I think... Before that scary red storm...

Have you asked in the hospital?

They won't let me in... they say it's not a place for small kids... I'm not small!

Where are your parents?

You see a flash of sadness on the boy's face. You don't think he's got any family other than the sister...

Clues

The party should ask about the boy's sister in 7.3. "Common Hospital".

They can also investigate symptoms of her sickness in 7.8. "Palanaeum" - see 7.8.4. "Orphan's Sickness".

7.2.4 The Apothecary

In here, the party can acquire salves, medicine and over-all medical supplies. Also, if the PCs ask the right questions, they can learn:

How many hospitals are there in Kharbranth?

There are two: one open to the people and one in the Conclave, for the king and the nobles.

Do you supply both of the hospitals?

Not really... The common hospital orders most of the supplies, but the one in the Conclave is having fewer requests and only for some basic items.

Is the quality of your goods too low for the king?

I doubt it. We have the best medical supplies in the city! We import some of the stock from Shinovar and Azir, the rest is freshly made by myself! You cannot ask for anything more!

Who is then supplying the Conclave Hospital?

I don't know... Ardents, perhaps?

How can we enter the Conclave Hospital?

Oh, you cannot... The Conclave is closed for the foreigners... But you can petition to the king to get access to Palanaeum... It's the library in the Conclave, perhaps that will help you...

Clues

The apothecary does not supply the Conclave Hospital. Perhaps the 7.6. "Kharbranth Monastery" does?

The Conclave Hospital is closed for the commoners. But the party can petition to the king for an access to the Palanaeum - see 7.10.1. "Petition to the King".

7.3 Common Hospital

When the PCs enter the hospital, read the following:

A man in a surgeon apron approaches you.
"Hello, I am dr Telvash. How can I help you?"

In here the surgeons of Kharbranth triage and treat their patients. If a PC is wounded or injured, the healers will invite them to stay for a treatment - see 7.3.1. "Hospital Treatment".

Telvash will appear in the chapter finale. To make the final scene more impactful, the NPC can appear in other scenes during party's investigation. In general, if a scene contains a Kharbranth Surgeon, assume it is Telvash, unless there is a good reason for him not to be there.

7.3.1 Hospital Treatment

While in the hospital, all injuries heal twice as fast. If a character needs prolonged medical care, consider suggesting them playing as a temporary mercenary character.

If a PC enters the hospital alone, they will be triaged as eligible for transfer to 7.9. "Conclave Hospitals". It is up to you how to handle this thread as this book assumes the party travels together and the surgeons will not risk transferring someone with many connections.

7.3.2 Hospital Logs

Logs of the hospital patients are held by a Diagram Scribe. They are accessible only to the hospital personnel and the PCs will be denied access to them.

However, if the party enacts some scheme, heist or con they may gain access to the following logs:

You see a list of patients accepted to the hospital:

Arivish (Port District) - rash - healed
Kina (?) - transferred
Korvetal (Bell District) - fever - healed
Lervitar (Guild District) - bad tooth - healed
Ovelgish (Port District) - cold - healed
Lord Sartvian - transferred
Navian (Dawn District) - broken arm - healed
Harnial (Star District) - burn - healed
Ferrum (?) - transferred
Trilam - (Dawn District) - fever - healed
Baranal (Dusk District) - stab wounds -
Tareh (Trader) - whitespine wounds -

Clues

Kina, Ferrum and lord Sartvian were transferred to another hospital - see 7.9. "Conclave Hospitals".

7.3.3 Tense Surgeon

As the party is visiting the hospital, allow them for single DC 15 Insight check. On a failure ignore this section. On a success, read the following:

When you talk with the hospital surgeons, you notice one of them is more tense than the others. It's more than just a concern for their patient's health - your questions are making him nervous.

The surgeon knows some secrets he wants to share, but he is terrified of the Diagram's punishment. If prompted by the players, he will say only:

I'm sorry, I cannot talk, my patients need me. Please ask in the apothecary about the next shipment. Now, excuse me, I must go back to work.

If the PCs will press the issue, the surgeon will tell no more. Soon after, Diagram Muscles will intervene and ask politely but firmly not to overstay the hospital's welcome and allow the surgeons to do their work.

Clue

There is something the surgeons are not telling... Perhaps the PCs can find more information in 7.2.4. "The Apothecary".

7.3.4 Following The Surgeon

If the PCs wish to learn more about Telvash, they might attempt to follow him after his work in the hospital. If they do, they can reach his home in the Bell District.

Sneak In

If a PC decides to sneak inside the house, they must make a DC 15 Stealth check, rolling against the Kharbranth Surgeon's Spiritual Defense. On a failure, Telvash will rise an alarm - proceed to 7.3.4. "Assault".

When successfully inside, the PC will see that Telvash is napping on a bed, while holding a stack of papers he was reading before sleep. The PC can attempt to steal them with DC 15 Thievery check, rolling against the Kharbranth Surgeon's Spiritual Defense. Again, failure will trigger an alarm.

If the PC passes both tests, they will collect surgeon's notes. Proceed to 7.3.4. "Conclave Logs".

Assault

The party may decide to attempt intimidation or brute force as a means to extract additional information from Telvash. Either that or a failed stealthy approach will make him shout in alarm.

When he does, four Diagram Muscles will arrive to the rescue. The surgeon will flee, leaving his notes behind in a rush. After the party wins the fight, they can collect them - proceed to 7.3.4. "Conclave Logs".

If the party ignores the guards and attempts to slain the surgeon, Malata the Dustbringer will join the fight protecting the man. Allow the surgeon to run with his life.

Telvash has a role in the finale of this chapter. While he can be replaced with any other surgeon, it would be nice to have one NPC reappearing in the entire arc of the story, so try to keep him alive.

Conclave Logs

When the party successfully obtains the notes of Telvash, they will be able to read the following:

Conclave Logs

Patient: Kina

Extraction ~~scheduled~~ completed.

Deceased. Handed over to ardens.

Patient: Lord Sartvian

Extraction ~~scheduled~~ completed.

Deceased. ~~Handed over to ardens.~~

Coffin handed over to Lady Sartvian for burial.

Patient: Ferrum

Extraction scheduled

Experiment Logs

Sample Quality:

Experiment #1 - failure.

Experiment #2 - failure.

Experiment #3 - failure.

Radiance:

Experiment #1 - failure.

Experiment #2 - failure.

Experiment #3 - failure.

Clues

Kina died in the Conclave Hospital. Her body was given to the ardents from 7.6. "Kharbranth Monastery".

Sartvian died in the Conclave Hospital - his body was buried on the 7.7. "Graveyard".

Ferrum is alive and can be found in 7.9. "Conclave Hospitals".

The Conclave Hospitals run experiments on Radiance and Sample Quality - see 7.9.7. "Sample Quality Experiments" and 7.9.8. "Radiance Experiments".

7.3.5 Conclave Transfer

If the party fails to obtain the Palanaeum access during 7.10.1. "Petition to the King", they will need to find another way to enter the 7.9. "Conclave Hospitals". One of the ideas may be to wait for another transfer of patients to the Conclave and either track it or sneak inside.

The Diagram uses medical carts to transfer the patients during the nighttime. Each of such carts is filled with sick people (homeless, orphans, drunks and other people nobody would miss) and is guarded by 4 Diagram Muscles. Also, one Kharbranth Surgeon accompanies them each time.

If the party manages to defeat and impostor the guards, or if they successfully sneak behind their watch inside the wagon, the driver will approach the cart soon after. He will drive them up to 7.9.2. "Backdoor Entrance".

7.4 The Manor

Lady Sartvian, a widow after Lord Sartvian's death, lives in a manor beyond the city. The party will need to take a hike if they wish to talk to her. It is not hard to find the estate, everyone in Kharbranth can point a way to it.

7.4.1 Ambush at the Road

As the party travels this road for the first time, read the following:

You travel to the Sartvian's Manor as you realize how quiet is it in here. The city is left far behind you and you are surrounded by silent rocks and sparse verdant leits.

It is the last moment as you realize - it is too quiet, and the place is perfect for an ambush...

The party is attacked by Newborn Heavenly One, four Newborn Direform Regals and four Newborn

Stormform Regals. They are led in here by their leader's hate for the party and they will fight to the end.

The type of the enemies is not important for the plot and can be changed for anything that would fit your PCs' story more. The number of enemies should be high enough to make it a dangerous fight for the party.

Diagram's Reinforcements

Once a PC gets injured due to low Health, the total Health of the party members drops to roughly 25%, or the party finds themselves in other dire conditions, read the following:

Suddenly you hear a sound of hoofs galloping on the stone. A small force from Kharbranth is riding your way.

"The King has predicted this. We are here to help you. Do you need a medical attention?"

Two Kharbranth Surgeons and several Diagram Muscles join the fight. Most of them will focus on the Regals, fighting them off-screen. The party continues their fight against Newborn Heavenly One and they are joined by Diagram Muscle.

If the PCs need healing, the surgeons will also join the fight to help them, but they will retreat once there is nobody else they could tend to.

If the party is still having trouble to defeat their enemy, allow more Diagram Muscles to join them in the following rounds as they defeat their enemies off-screen.

Events of this entire chapter may paint the Diagram in a bad light. This scene proves that their methods might be necessary to prevent bigger disasters and possibly gives the party an argument to join them if the players would like to do so.

"The King has predicted this" is used for the same reason as in 7.1.4. "Stormshelter". You can skip this line if you don't like the lore implications that it carries.

7.4.2 The Widow

When the party reaches the Sartvian's Manor, read the following:

You arrive at the Sartvian's Manor. It's western wing shows marks of the Everstorm hitting it recently and the surrounding gardens are destroyed.

After you knock the door, an old lady opens you. "Oh, hello dear! What brings you here?"

Lady Sartvian is a nice old woman. After the PCs introduce themselves she will invite them inside the empty manor. She will gladly talk with the party:

It's empty in here... Where are your servants?

The parshmen changed and left after the Red Storm. And I had to let the rest go after my husband died...

Why didn't the surgeons help him?

They did the best they could, but nobody can heal an old age...

How old was he?

Oh, he would be 100 next year. He really looked forward to this... Such a holy number, he was always saying...

Why didn't he want to be soulcast?

Oh, he wanted that really much. He was such a religious man... But the surgeons, they said no.

Why did they forbid the soulcasting?

My husband was very weak in the end... It was plague that killed him... The surgeons said his coffin must remain closed not to risk a spread of the disease. I buried him in the ground.

In which hospital was he treated?

They moved him to the Conclave, of course! We are lighteyes after all. He was treated by this lovely young surgeon, Telvash was his name I believe.

Where is his grave?

Oh, that would be the graveyard nearby the city, my dear. If you ever visit him, can you burn him this prayer from me? I would appreciate it a lot.

Clues

Lord Sartvian is buried in Kharbranth graveyard - see 7.7. "Graveyard".

He was treated in the Conclave Hospital by Telvash - see 7.9. "Conclave Hospitals".

He wanted to be soulcast, but the surgeons told his wife not to open the coffin - it could spread the plague, they said.

7.4.3 Bad News

Lady Sartvian is fully convinced that King Taravangian and his surgeons are working for the good of the city and all it's people. She believes they are impeccable saviors and will not accept any accusation against them.

If the party discovers her husband missing body in 7.7.2. "Dig the Grave" and bring her the news about it, she will not believe it. Instead, she will name the PCs "filthy storming liars" and throw them out of her estate.

7.5 Veden Refugees

As the party approaches Veden Camp, read the following:

Refugee camp is located on the outskirts of the city. It's hard to tell if the entire district was heavily damaged by the Everstorm or the architecture here is just... well... messy.

It is said a brilliant Artifabrian works in here. Also, the party can talk with local people to learn a bit more about the situation in the city.

7.5.1 Rumors and Gossips

If the party decides to talk with the people from Vedenar, they will respond to the questions:

What are you doing in Kharbranth?

Our new king rules this city as well... Some of us is here for the treatment in the hospitals. Some came with the families in hopes for a better life...

What do you think of the surgeons?

I think they want good, but the people of Kharbranth overstate their skills a lot... They are not half as good as they say... Well, at least they are free...

How many of you have been healed?

Hard to say... maybe half? Yeah, the mortality is much higher than they say... But at least it's better than in our homeland...

Why don't you return home?

It's not safe to travel, right now. And in here, in the city of our new king, we can hope for some opportunity for a better life...

7.5.2 Artifabrian

When PCs enter artifabrian workshop, read the following:

Compared to the rest of the district, the shop looks tidy and well managed. Cogs, springs, bolts and other mechanical parts lie on the shelves. In the middle of all of those, a veden woman sits next to her workshop table, tinkering with some contraption.

Dorlivana (she/her) is the only NPC in this place. In her workshop, the party can trade or discuss about their fabrials.

Dorlivana arrived to Kharbranth with her family who got treated in the hospital, but now they believe it is unsafe to return back home. She is not interested in local news and has little information for the PCs.

Artifabrian's Request

If the party is about to leave the workshop, read the following:

As you are leaving, Dorlivana calls you to stop.

"Hey, can you do me a favor?", she asks. "When you are in the city, can you ask what oil is freely distributed? Is it from Red Lavis or Western Lavis? Both are good for as a lamp fuel or for culinary purposes, but Red Lavis Oil would tint the metals if I were to impregnate with it..."

Dorlivana requests the party to learn what kind of grain is used to produce free oil. She offers 50 marks for this information on top of some discount in her shop.

Clue

The party must learn more about the origin of the oil. They should probably ask local merchants for more information - see 7.2.1. "Rumors and Gossips".

7.6 Kharbranth Monastery

When the party arrives at the monastery, read the following:

You enter a stone building with ten stained glass windows. The western wall got damaged during the Everstorm, but the inside remained mostly intact. Now illuminated with oil lamps, the monastery is a bastion of peace during the times of chaos.

There is one major Vorin Monastery in Kharbranth, located in the Dawn District. In here, the party can find a bit of respite, serenity, piety, and perhaps - some answers to their questions.

7.6.1 Talking with Ardent

When the PCs talk to the ardents in the monastery, they will learn the following:

Are you supplying the Conclave Hospital?

"No, we do not deal with medical supplies, that is the calling of the apothecaries". DC 15 Insight check will reveal the ardent knows more than they are saying.

Have you visited the Conclave Hospital?

Of course! We visit all sick who desire to pray with us to the Almighty.

Did you help with any funerals?

Lord Sartvian did not wish for our Soulcast Service, but we did pray for him. He rests now at the city graveyard.

What about small girl, Kina?

No, there was no funeral of her.

What about Ferrum?

Don't know anyone by this name... It's a strange name, isn't it? Where is he from...?

Clues

Lord Sartvian is buried, he did not wish for a soulcaster - see 7.7. "Graveyard".

The ardents know something about the Conclave Hospital they do not share...

Neither Kina, nor Ferrum are known by the ardents.

7.6.2 The Soulcaster

The monastery houses a soulcaster, but they are never shown to a public. If the party manages to sneak inside their chambers or break there with force and violence, read the following:

The chamber is illuminated with the light of infused topaz spheres, casting yellow light on the gray, stony walls. In the middle there is an ardent with long, greasy hair.

"Who are you?", he demands. "You are not supposed to walk in here!"

The ardent in this chamber is a Soulcaster. He does not share the essence he is working with, but you can assume he transforms into oil. He is employed to produce oil in 7.9.4. "Oil Barrels".

If a PC succeeds on DC 20 Deduction check they will be able to determine he is an Oil Soulcaster. That test gains an advantage if the PC has an expertise in Vorin Religion or has Transformation surge skill.

Talking with the Soulcaster

The Soulcaster does not wish to talk with the party. He will talk with them only if they manage to fool him into believing they are sent by the surgeon, the Diagram or the King himself. If that happens, he will expect to be called again to the Conclave for the soulcasting.

If the party demands answers from him without posing as someone he would obey, they will be asked to leave. If they don't comply, he will call for help, triggering a fight with Diagram Muscles at his side.

Fighting the Soulcaster

If attacked, he will defend and fight to the end. You can use Verdant Soulcaster Savant stat block for this fight, but replace the visuals of his actions with a liquid theme. After the first round of the combat, five Diagram Muscles will join to protect him.

After the fight, the party can collect his Soulcaster as a reward. A PC in possession of the Soulcaster gains access to Transformation skill and can develop talents from Transformation talent tree, but they cannot use them if they are separated from the Soulcaster.

Clues

The monastery houses an Oil Soulcaster. He is employed at the Conclave to transform oil - see 7.9.4. "Oil Barrels".

7.7 Graveyard

In here, the party can ask about the missing people and investigate the most recent deaths. The gravedigger will require some encouragement, though...

7.7.1 The Gravedigger

The gravedigger is not a chatty man. When asked detailed questions, he will claim that he "cannot recall that, huh!". Some solid bribe might improve his memory though - at that moment, he will be able to answer:

Do you have much work?

Nah, less than I'd have in other cities. Healers do their job too well...

Did you bury a girl named Kina?

Nah, there was nobody like that recently...

Any information about a person named Ferrum?

Nah, there was nobody like that either...

What about Lord Sartvian?

Oh yeah, I remember him! Heavy coffin, terrible weather. We got him over there! Nice fellow, I like his grave.

Don't you soulcast your nobles?

Yeah, sometimes. He wasn't best friends with the ardens though, he wanted go this way. What a nice guy!

Clues

Lord Sartvian is buried in here.

Kina is not buried on the graveyard. Neither is Ferrum. What happened to them...?

7.7.2 Dig the Grave

The gravedigger does not allow messing with his work. He won't allow to dig the coffin of Lord Sartvian... Not without a proper bribe, at least.

If the party ignores him he will scream for alert. The same will happen if the PCs try and fail to dig the coffin silently. When alerted, four Diagram Muscles will rush to help the citizen.

If the party manages to dig up Lord Sartvian's coffin, they will see it is filled with rocks. There is no sign of Sartvian's body...

Clue

The body of Lord Sartvian is not here...

7.8 Palanaeum

Palanaeum is the greatest library on Roshar. If a book exists, it can be found in here. If the party needs to learn some lore or information, it is the best place to search in.

The library is located inside the Conclave. If the party is looking to enter 7.9. "Conclave Hospitals", it would be a good place to start.

7.8.1 Restricted Access

Unfortunately, the access to the library is currently restricted. If the party manages to enter, they will be denied as only selected few are allowed inside.

Luckily for the party, in those days King Taravangian is allowing for petitions to hear for his subjects' needs. The party can try their luck with him - perhaps he will grant them access.

If the party decides to try this path, proceed to 7.10.1. "Petition to the King".

Once the party obtained proper documentation from the king, they will be welcomed to learn from the knowledge gathered here.

7.8.2 The Great Library

The Palanaeum is the greatest library in the known world - the PCs can find knowledge on most of the topics, including: medicine, economics, geography, cuisine and even ancient lore (though in limited amount). Same of them are listed in the sections below:

- 7.8.4. "Orphan's Sickness"
- 7.8.5. "Import and Export"
- 7.8.6. "Death Rattles"

There are some topics the party will not be able to find the answers to: the Everstorm, Odium, Enlightened Radiant Spren, Cosmere beyond Roshar, Ghostbloods, Scadrial, etc. Use your own judgment for topics that are not listed in here.

7.8.3 Palanaeum Rumors

When the party is investigating one of the topics in an alcove of the Palanaeum, at some point they will hear a nearby conversation:

"Man! That storming surgeon! I have never seen anyone so sloppy... That history with Lord Sartvian? That was close! Telvash is on thin ice, I'm telling you!"

"Sloppy? That is nothing, have you seen his experiments...? With no finesse or elegance to it... I cannot understand why the king sees any value in them, either! He provided no meaningful results in weeks! Storming waste of resources! We should have never allowed him in the Conclave!"

Clues

There is more to investigate in the Conclave Hospital. Lord's Sartvian case is more complex than it seems, and the surgeon is said to make sloppy work in that topic - whatever that means....

7.8.4 Orphan's Sickness

The party can search for more information about the sickness of Kina, the sick orphan. When they do, sooner or later they will find the following information:

Weeping Fever

Contagion:

Carried by Lutumia Fletus cremlings emerging during the Weeping.

Symptoms:

Fever, rash, swollen lymph nodes, fatigue, red eyes.

Treatment:

Plenty of rest and hydration. Keep the patient comfortable. The sickness will fade after several days. The sickness is not lethal.

Weeping Fever is not a real sickness, but you can think of it as something similar to rubella.

Clue

Kina should not succumb to the sickness, especially if taken care by doctors. She might be still alive...

7.8.5 Import and Export

If the party searches information on trade history in the city in order to determine the source of free oil, they will not find any tracks of recently imported oil shipments.

They might however find increased slave purchase by the state in the recent years. If the party digs deeper, they will find most of those slaves were assigned to hospital works. There were none in 7.3. "Common Hospital", so they probably work in the Conclave Hospital.

Clue

Free oil is not imported via trade.

7.8.6 Death Rattles

If the party searches information about the Death Rattles, they will finally find a book by Hessi titled "Mythica", describing all nine Unmade, including Moelach.

The book will provide information about the Unmade granting visions of the future at the time of soul's transition between realms. Many of them are prophetic in their nature, allowing nearby people to glimpse into the future.

Spoiler Info

Hessi's "Mythica" entries treating about Moelach can be found in "Oathbringer", Chapters 101. Deadeye and 102. Celebrant.

7.8.7 Path to the Conclave Hospital

If the party sneaks out from the Palanaeum to search for an entrance to the Conclave Hospital, they will find a corridor leading to 7.9.1. "Guarded Entrance".

7.9 Conclave Hospitals

The party enters the grounds of the Conclave Hospital. You can run this part of the adventure as a dungeon crawl, though the party might decide not to attack every NPC found in here.

There are two entrances to this area: a heavily guarded 7.9.1. "Guarded Entrance" that can be found nearby the Palanaeum, and a hidden 7.9.2. "Backdoor Entrance" that require some more investigation from the PCs to find.

The goal for the party is to find 7.9.10. "Marked for Death" encounter, which triggers the end of the crawl and completes the story of this chapter.

NOTE: Some of the scenes in this area contain graphic descriptions of violence performed by Kharbranth surgeons. You can skip them if you find them too gruesome for your players. Please follow the guidelines from 0.6.3. "Players' Expectations" to ensure a comfortable experience for all around the table.*

Spoiler Info

King Taravangian shows the hospital to Szeth in "Way of Kings", Chapter 71. Recorded In Blood.

7.9.1 Guarded Entrance

As the PCs approach the hospital gate, read the following:

You walk through the dark corridors of the Conclave until you reach a guarded door. The orange glyph indicates it must be the entrance to the hospital.

"You cannot enter here", the guard says.
"Go away!"

There are four Diagram Muscles guarding the gate. To enter the Conclave Hospital this way, the party must either defeat the guards or talk their way in.

This entrance leads to 7.9.5. "Hospital Corridor".

7.9.2 Backdoor Entrance

This entrance is well hidden and the party would need some creative ideas on how to find it. Following the surgeon, a cart transferring patients or the soulcaster might work.

The entrance is guarded by four Diagram Muscles, but the guards in here don't expect any troubles and they will assume you are working for the Diagram if you know about this entrance.

Through this door, the party can enter 7.9.3. "Barrel Corridor".

7.9.3 Barrel Corridor

As the party enters this location, read the following:

You enter a long corridor illuminated with a light from sparse spheres. There are barrels of oil standing everywhere, ready for future shipments.

There is little to do in here. The corridor connects with 7.9.5. "Hospital Corridor". In the middle, there is 7.9.4. "Oil Barrels" room.

7.9.4 Oil Barrels

As the party enters this area, read the following:

You walk through the corridor full of oil barrels until you reach a big room with a huge, barrel-like vessel in the middle, entirely made of stone and surrounded with open, empty oil barrels. Ladders and scaffolding are built around it.

There are people working here to carry corpses on top of the ladders and toss them into the stone barrel. "We must send for the Soulcaster soon", one of them says. "We will reach the top by tomorrow."

The party should soon realize that the oil in the city is made by Soulcasters who transform corpses of the dead patients.

There are three Diagram Muscles in this room. They are focused on their work. If they notice the PCs, they will assume they are here to help them.

7.9.5 Hospital Corridor

As the PCs enter this area, read the following:

Long, winding corridor twists and turns under the mountain the Conclave was built in. A few ruby spheres illuminate it with a red light. There are smears of blood on the floor.

The corridor is connecting all of the most important rooms in this location:

- 7.9.1. "Guarded Entrance"
- 7.9.6. "Sample Archive"
- 7.9.9. "The Bleeding Room"
- 7.9.7. "Sample Quality Experiments"
(locked)
- 7.9.8. "Radiance Experiments"
(locked)
- 7.9.3. "Barrel Corridor"

There are people walking in here - Diagram Muscles, Kharbranth Surgeons and Diagram Scribes, but nobody pays attention to the players unless they act weird.

7.9.6 Sample Archive

When the party enters this room, read the following:

It is a small room, full of files and notebooks cataloged on countless shelves. As you enter, you hear a clerk behind the desk reporting to a man standing before her:

"... and here are the samples from this week. I marked the most promising ones. Those two reinforce the Diagram's predictions.

"I added a note for the king next to this one, I believe it suggests by allying with the Kholins, King Taravangian will be able to slain Odium. I'm not sure, can a god be slain...?"

Sitting behind a desk, there is Arvia, a Diagram Scribe who manages and archives the collected Death Rattles. A Diagram Muscle is about to carry them to the king.

The PCs can talk with the clerk to find more about the NPCs they are looking for. They can also get access to some of the most promising Death Rattles archived in here.

In both cases, Arvia will help them only for as long she believes they work for the king and the Diagram.

She will call guards at the first sign if the PCs doing something suspicious.

The Diagram is doing terrible things in the hospitals. But they believe their actions are necessary for the greater good of Roshar. Use this room to show the PCs a Death Rattle proving the Diagram may gain an upper hand in the conflict with Odium so they could consider helping them. Without it, their organization is presented as irredeemably evil, giving the players no real choice while dealing with them.

Asking about Kina

When the party asks about Kina, Arvia will say:

"One second..., she was from dr Telvash? We sent her sample a week ago, is there any problem with it?"

Asking about Lord Sartvian

When the PCs ask about Lord Sartvian, read the following:

"Yes, I remember this mess... dr Telvash marked him incorrectly as a commoner. As a result of this confusion we could not provide his wife with a body. I'm sorry, there is nothing we can do at this point, just make sure she doesn't open the coffin... Do you need his sample?"

Asking about Ferrum

When asked about Ferrum, Arvia will say:

"Let me check... yes, his extraction is scheduled for today, by dr Telvash. We should have his sample in a few hours. Can you wait for it?"

Busy as Ever

Every now and then, a Diagram Scribe will enter with new set of notes. When she does, read the following:

Suddenly, a young woman enters the room, interrupting your Conversation. She carries several sheets of paper.

"Next set of samples?", the woman sitting in the room asks. "Thank you dear, put it in the box with a name of the leading surgeon. Now, where were we...?"

Forbidden Knowledge

Every PC who gets access to the gathered Death Rattles receive Forbidden Knowledge [1]:

Forbidden Knowledge [1]. Roll 1d20 and note the results. As a , the character can spend one of those results to replace any d20 roll with it. Roll new set of d20s each time the character gains access to the source of the knowledge.

7.9.7 Sample Quality Experiments

The room is locked. A PC must pass DC 20 Thievery or Athletics check to open the door. When they do, read the following:

A single, bloodied bed is standing in the middle of the room. Next to it, there is a desk with a quill, some notes and multiple jars. When you come closer you see that all of the jars are filled with eyeballs.

There is nobody in the room. The PCs can read the surgeon's notes from the desk to get a bit more insight of what was being done in here.

Experiment Notes

When the PCs investigate the notes, read the following:

As we continue to gather the samples, one must ask a question: is the result dependent on the person's eyesight? Can their vision influence or obscure the samples? Must design an experiment to prove this hypothesis.

Experiment 1:

I created a beam of light from 250 diamond marks enhanced by a system of mirrors and prisms.

Test group size: 100.

Results:

No improvement of the gathered sample set observed. Must design another experiment.

Experiment 2:

I surgically removed the ocular organs of the patients in the test group.

Test group size: 100.

Results:

No improvement of the gathered sample set observed. Must design another experiment.

Experiment 3:

I transplanted the ocular organs from the patients yielding promising samples to the testing group.

Test group size: 100.

Results:

No improvement of the gathered sample set observed. Must design another experiment.

In the "Stormlight Archive" series, the scene revealing the true purpose of the hospital is shocking and terrifying. My goal is to recreate those emotions in here, even for the players who are familiar with the books and already know that the patients are being killed in here to gather the Death Rattles.

This scene is designed for shock factor, but contributes little to overall story. You can cut it if you believe it is too strong for your table, who might not be comfortable with it.

7.9.8 Radiance Experiments

The room is locked. A PC must pass DC 20 Thievery or Athletics check to open the door. When they do, read the following:

You see a small room with a single desk inside. On the desk, there lies a log book and a chalice full of glowing ruby marks. On the opposite wall, there is another door leading to the next room.

There is nobody in this room. The party can read the log notes or proceed to the next room.

Experiment Notes

When the PCs investigate the book on the desk, they read the following:

The king believes some people may hold an unimaginable power. "Radiants", he calls them. They are told to command the forces of nature and to be healed by the Stormlight. Any of such individuals may change the tides of the upcoming conflict. We must design an experiment to find or create more of them.

Experiment ideas:

Assuming the Radiants can use Stormlight to heal their injuries, we must provide enough light for them to use. We must also create prolonged conditions of external stimulus that would encourage them to use or develop their powers. Include psychological stimulus by preventing the removal of failed experiments from the chamber.

Experiment 1: Flames

Test group size: 100.

Results:

No Stormlight absorbed. It is possible that the patients expire too fast. Sample collection disturbed. Must design another experiment.

Experiment 2: Nails

Test group size: 100

Results:

No Stormlight absorbed. It is possible that the patients expire too fast. Sample collection disturbed. Must design another experiment.

Experiment 3: Spikes

Test group size: 100

Results:

No Stormlight absorbed. It is possible that the patients expire too fast. Sample collection disturbed. Must design another experiment.

Experiment Room

If the party enters through the door on the opposite wall, read the following:

The room is full of corpses nailed to the walls or impaled on spikes. Many of them are children. Some of them are burned. The bright red light of many ruby spheres illuminates the whole scene.

As you enter, one young man impaled on a stake whispers to you: "Please... Kill me..."

In the "Stormlight Archive" series, the scene revealing the true purpose of the hospital is shocking and terrifying. My goal is to recreate those emotions in here, even for the players who are familiar with the books and already know that the patients are being killed in here to gather the Death Rattles.

This scene is designed for shock factor, but contributes little to overall story. You can cut it if you believe it is too strong for your table, who might not be comfortable with it.

7.9.9 The Bleeding Room

When the party enters this room, read the following:

You enter the main room of the hospital: a huge cavity with a balcony above it and many alcoves on both sides. In some of the them, you see a patients being watched closely by the nearby pairs of a surgeon and a scribe. From time to time, the echo in this room carries muffled whispers of the dying.

In here the sick are being bled to death in order to obtain their Death Rattles, called "samples" by the personnel of the hospital. Sometimes a Diagram Scribe rushes to the archive with the newest sample or a pair of Diagram Muscles bring another patient on a stretcher.

When the PCs approach any of the alcoves, proceed to 7.9.10. "Marked for Death".

7.9.10 Marked for Death

When the PCs reach this area, read the following:

You see an unconscious man lying on a stone bed. His right sleeve is cut off, showing a triangular tattoo, like a three overlapping diamonds. Next to him on the table stands a clean knife and an empty bowl.

"The king predicted we would meet in here. I have waited for you", says Telvash standing with a female scribe next to the patient.

The party can see Ferrum, a man they were asked to find in 7.2.2. "Dark Alley". He is about to have his veins cut in order to gather a Death Rattle upon his death.

In the room there are also two people: Telvash, a Kharbranth Surgeon and a Diagram Scribe. When the PCs approach them, Telvash will say:

"Their sacrifice is great, but we must do this for the people of Roshar. By the order of the king. And he knew you would find out about this place. You are capable. Do the honor, make the cut, know the future and join the Diagram in our quest of protecting the humanity."

Telvash offers the party to kill Ferrum and join the Diagram, the organization running the hospitals. This is the final confrontation in this dungeon.

The party may accept the offer and kill the helpless man. It is also possible they will kill the surgeon on sight, instead. In any of those case, after an NPC dies, proceed to 7.9.10. "Death Rattle".

They can also attempt talking to the surgeon in a Conversation, trying to show him the error of his methods. When they do, proceed to 7.9.10. "Conversation with Telvash".

If the PCs refuse to participate in the deed without stopping the healer from it, Telvash will cut the arm of the man himself. Proceed to 7.9.10. "Death Rattle".

Conversation with Telvash

The party may attempt to convince Telvash that the Diagram is evil and killing the people like this is evil. Run this scene as a Conversation.

Kharbranth Surgeon has a Cognitive defense of 18, a Spiritual defense of 15, and 5 Focus..

He believes that the True Desolation is coming and their actions are the key to finding a way to save the humanity, however evil they were.

If Telvash's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

If the party fails to convince him, he will again insist that the PCs should join the Diagram and kill Ferrum. If they refuse, he will kill him himself.

If the party convinces him, read the following:

Telvash looks at you, terrified. "You... you are right...", he says. "Almighty have mercy on us, we killed so many... I killed so many..."

With a smooth motion he grabs the surgical knife and plunges it into his own heart. A moment after, he dies.

Once the conversation is over, proceed to 7.9.10. "Death Rattle".

There is no saving both of them. Someone must die in this scene.

Death Rattle

Either way, the scene ends when an NPC is killed. In that case, read the following:

You see the last remains of life fleeing from the dying man. Soon, his eyes go wide, and you hear his voice:

"I stay on top of the tower, above the Storms. From here, I will unite them! From here, I will rule!"

Every PC who could hear the Death Rattle gains Forbidden Knowledge [1]:

Forbidden Knowledge [1]. Roll 1d20 and note the results. As a , the character can spend one of those results to replace any d20 roll with it. Roll new set of d20s each time the character gains access to the source of the knowledge.

Path to Enlightenment

Hearing the Death Rattle, a prophetic vision granted by Moelach, can expedite an Enlightened Truthwatcher (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

7.9.11 Aftermath

After the PCs hear the Death Rattle of the dying man, read the following:

When everything goes quiet again, you hear a voice from the balcony overseeing the hospital room:

"Terrible. Terrible fate, indeed. But as you hear - a necessary evil, an act we must commit to ensure the humanity weathers the storm that is coming..."

From the balcony, King Taravangian was watching over the encounter with Telvash. In order to complete the story of this chapter, proceed to 7.10.2. "Leader of the Diagram".

7.10 King Taravangian

In this chapter, the party will meet King Taravangian twice - once when they petition for an access to the Palanaeum and the second one at the end of their descent into the Conclave Hospital.

When the party enters the Conversation with King Taravangian for the second time, make sure his dominant attribute is different than before so the players could experience both sides of the character. In any subsequent Conversations you can allow any configuration of his attributes.

Due to the cannon lore, please try to make sure the king survives this chapter. In case of any danger, allow Malata the Dustbringer to join the fight and defend him as he flees the scene.

7.10.1 Petition to the King

When the party attempts to receive access to enter the Palanaeum, read the following:

You enter the only palace wing opened to the public. Today, King Taravangian listens to the pleas of his subjects from a high stone balcony.

When it is your turn to present your case, the king welcomes you: "Ah, our honored guests from Alethkar. What boon do you require?"

To obtain access to the Palanaeum, the party will need to enter the Conversation with King Taravangian. Roll for his The Boon and the Curse ability to determine his attributes, Cognitive and Spiritual Defenses and total ranks of his skills.

The king aims for the greater good of all humanity and he sees the PCs as useful tools he could recruit later. However, during a public event as this, he will refrain from any open moves and he will allow the party a bit more ignorance.

It is not predetermined what arguments will resonate with him the most. Due to his The Boon and the Curse ability, his personality changes and so does his behavior in the Conversation.

If King Taravangian's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

King's Guards

King Taravangian is surrounded by four Diagram Muscles. Behind him, hidden in shadows, Malata the Dustbringer watches his back. They do not participate in the Conversation in any way, but they will defend the king in case of any violence from the party.

Level Up!

Regardless of the result of the Conversation with the king, advance the party to level 9 once they complete this scene.

Clues

If the party convinces King Taravangian to give them access to the library, they will be able to enter inside 7.8. "Palanaeum" and from there, with some scouting - even to 7.9. "Conclave Hospitals".

If the party fails, they will need to find some other way of entering 7.9. "Conclave Hospitals". Potential options may include 7.3.5. "Conclave Transfer", or following the surgeon or the soulcaster to find their way in, but you can allow for any other reasonable and creative solutions.

7.10.2 Leader of the Diagram

When you start this scene, read the following:

King Taravangian is standing on the balcony overseeing the Conclave Hospital. There are guards all around him.

"And the vision? It must have been about Urithiru. We can ship to Vedenar to get there.", he says.

The party is about to enter a Conversation with King Taravangian. This, however, may look differently based on the party's choice in 7.9.10. "Marked for Death" scene.

Unfortunate Accident

If the party talked Telvash into killing himself, the king will assume their hostility at first. If they wish to join the Diagram, they would need to convince him about their true intentions and honest regret about the surgeon.

Opposing the Diagram

If the party killed Telvash, King Taravangian will see them as a potential threat to everything he is working on. The party must convince him not to send his forces against them and let them leave with Ferrum.

Joining the Diagram

If the party killed Ferrum, King Taravangian will gladly welcome them to his organization and allow to travel with him to Urithiru. However, there might still be some terms and conditions of this arrangement that the party might wish to negotiate.

The Conversation

Before the Conversation, determine attributes of the king that are affected by his The Boon and the Curse. The king's goals and motivation may differ depending on the PCs' choices and on his current level of intelligence.

If King Taravangian's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

The whole point of having two Conversation scenes with King Taravangian is to show his dual aspect and have two different experiences with the same NPC. Make sure the second scene with him is using different dominant attribute than the first one, switch the attributes if required.

Aftermath

If the party succeeded on the Conversation, their request will be accepted and honored by King Taravangian.

If they fail, their request will be denied. If that request was to allow them leave, the king will send six Diagram Muscles and Malata the Dustbringer to slay the party. Also, the Diagram Scribe from the previous scene will join to support her allies.

If the guards are sent to kill the party, allow Malata the Dustbringer to show off her skills at the moments before the battle (instantly summoning the Shardblade, using Division on the nearby stones for dramatic effect, etc). That will allow the players to recognize the threat and flee if they believe it too risky. In that case, don't pursue them.

7.11 Journeying Onward

After the events of 7.9. "Conclave Hospitals", reward the party:

If they joined the Diagram, each of them will be granted Forbidden Knowledge [2] by King Taravangian. He will invite them to join him in his journey to Urithiru.

If they saved Ferrum instead, he will give each of them a Foreign Coin and say that his boss will respect those as a currency. They can meet him in Urithiru - luckily, it seems that King Taravangian is traveling there any time soon and the Ghostbloods can help the party to sneak in.

In any case, advance the PCs to level 10 and proceed to the next chapter.

Chapter 8 - The Dark Tower

8.0 Running This Chapter

The characters travel to Vedenar, to use Oathgate there and get to Urithiru. They arrive there in a middle of a serial murder crisis. They need to support investigation efforts of Shallan and gain trust of the Urithiru Radiants.

Run this chapter as a two parallel plot threads and allow the party to switch between them as they wish. The first one is for the safe parts of Urithiru, with neutral NPCs and potential allies. The second thread represents dungeon delving into the lair of Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother.

8.0.1 Character Advancement

Advance the characters twice in this chapter. Award the party 1 level after dealing with Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother. Award the party 1 level once they secure their first patronage of a new NPC met in the tower or otherwise complete the story of the chapter.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Learning secrets of the Tower.
- Protecting allies during the fight with Midnight Essence.
- Meeting Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother and her children may expedite an Enlightened Edgedancer.

The PCs may also earn unique rewards from their patrons located in the tower.

8.0.2 Forging Alliances

While in Urithiru, the party will have opportunity to secure patronage from various powers. Those may include, but are not limited to:

- Members of the Kholin family
- Kaladin Stormblessed
- Sons of Honor
- Vorin Church

The book will not provide example scenes for all possible patrons. Use your own judgment to provide players with quests to secure patronage they aim for.

8.0.3 Handling Canon

Starting from this chapter, the party will interact with characters and events described in "Stormlight Archive". It is possible that their actions will cause consequences contradicting the official story.

Please make sure that everyone at the table is aware of your group's Canon policy. You can all agree to ensure everything happens exactly like in the books, you can also allow for some alternative histories. Please remember it is a game and its primary goal should be a fun experience for all participants.

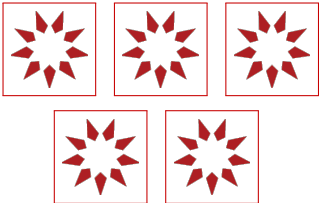

For more guidelines, see 0.3.2. "Handling Canon" and "Canon and Continuity" section of Stormlight Handbook.

8.0.4 Event: Dark Wrongness

In the deep tunnels of the Tower, an ancient evil lurks and learns.

EVENT

Triggers when the final Complication slot is filled.

Dark Wrongness

Progressing the Event

Each time a complication is rolled by a PC while outside of the inhabited part of Urithiru, you can spend it to progress the event by 1, trading an immediate Complication for the Re-Shephir's awareness. If you do, the PC must pass DC 14 Discipline check or they lose 1d4 Focus.

You can progress the event only once per Long Rest.

Triggering the Event

Once the final complication slot is filled, Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother becomes bold enough to attack people in the tower. The PCs can be randomly assaulted by a Midnight Assassin using its Mimic Violence and Uncanny Nature actions before slipping into the cracks of the walls.

Ending the Event

The event finishes after the party deals with the Unmade during 8.10. "Lair of Re-Shephir".

8.1 Urithiru

At the end of the last chapter, the PCs learn that the next stop on their adventure is Urithiru. Now it is time for this next step in their journey.

8.1.1 Way of Kings

In order to get to Urithiru, King Taravangian organized a ship from Kharbranth to Vedenar. The PCs travel with the Diagram - either as full-fledged members, or as stowaways smuggled by the Ghostbloods, impersonating darkeye servants.

In Vedenar Malata uses her Shardblade to transport everyone to Urithiru.

The voyage takes several days with little encounters. The PCs can use this time to work on their personal goals, or the players can agree to fast-forward this part.

Once the journey is completed, proceed to 8.1.2. "Arrival".

8.1.2 Arrival

When the PCs arrive to Urithiru, read the following:

You see King Taravangian's bodyguard summon her Shardblade and push it into the wall of the small building in the middle of a lush garden. In an instant, you are transported elsewhere.

You brace yourself to see hateful visions and the realm of darkness. Instead, you feel a chilly breeze and see several coldspren grow around your feet.

The PCs successfully traveled to Urithiru. Proceed to 8.1.3. "The Tower of Radiants".

8.1.3 The Tower of Radiants

The party reached Urithiru, the ancient seat of all Radiant Orders.

You can treat this location as a functional city, with markets, artisans and artificers. This book does not provide every NPC a service that can be found in here, you can use your own judgment to determine what is available for the PCs.

Run this part of the story as a town full of NPCs and their quests. Allow the party to pick and choose what do they wish to do and in what order.

Old Friends

Ghostbloods and the Diagram are present in the Tower. If the party is in friendly relations with one of those groups, the PCs can count on more support in this chapter. For more details, see 8.2. "Ghostbloods' Hideout" and 8.3. "Diagram Chambers".

New Alliances

There are plenty NPCs in the Tower to interact with. Some of them are powerful enough to support the party with a patronage. See 8.4. "Tradition and Heresy" and 8.6. "Other Allies" for the goals of the potential patrons.

In about a week or two, after the next Highstorm, Kaladin and Jasnah will arrive to the city. For more patron opportunities, see 8.5. "Past and Future".

Murder Investigation

As the PCs arrive to Urithiru, there is an investigation ongoing. Someone assassinated two lighteye nobles on the grounds of the Tower. The victims are: Highprince Torol Sadeas and Vedekar Perel.

See 8.8. "Mysterious Violence" if the PCs decide to investigate the murders.

Tower Exploration

Not every part of the Tower is inhabited. Many of tunnels reach deep and hide unknown perils. If the PCs wish to explore those regions see 8.9. "Dark Tunnels" for details.

8.2 Ghostbloods' Hideout

The Ghostbloods established their hideout inside the Tower. Unsuspecting PCs will not be able to find it.

However, if the party saved Ferrum in the previous chapter, the PCs will be included in their schemes.

8.2.1 The Invitation

When the party travels through the Tower, if they sided with the Ghostbloods during Chapter 7 - Whispers of the Slain, read the following:

As you stroll the corridors, you suddenly see a sheet of paper tugged into the rocky wall. On it, you see your names and the symbol you saw before - a three diamonds forming a triangle.

"Let us meet", the letter says. "Fifth level, western corridor, merchant storehouse, ask for atium."

If the PCs follow the letter instructions, proceed to 8.2.2. "Proof of Skill".

This scene assumes at least one PC can read. In other case, the Ghostbloods would choose a different method to invite the party. A whisper from a dark alley, perhaps?

8.2.2 Proof of Skill

If the party follows the instructions from the letter found in 8.2.1. "The Invitation", read the following:

You enter a large room, filled with boxes, barrels and crates. Some of them are marked with the glyph marking them as owned by Sadeas principedom.

"Hello, there!", the merchant says. "What can I get you?"

If the party asks for atium, they will be taken to a backdoor room. Read the following:

The next room is dark and full of shadows. One guard sits here in the corner. He wears has a green uniform and terribly scarred face. His pet chicken sits on his shoulder.

"The travelers from the dark", he says. "I heard a lot about you. Time to put your skills to the real test!"

The Mission

Ghostbloods tell the PCs to find and eradicate the source of the evil wrongness lingering in the Tower. To succeed, the party must complete 8.10.4. "Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother".

Support

If the party manages to find the entrance to 8.10. "Lair of Re-Shephir" and reports it to the Ghostbloods, a Ghostblood Agent will be sent with them to aid them as a part of 8.10.4. "Allied Help".

Reward

After the party removes the threat of Re-Shephir from the Tower, the Ghostbloods will formally invite them to the organization.

Any character who tattoos their symbol on their forearm will receive one Foreign Coin to be spent for items in 8.2.4. "Black Market".

8.2.3 More Quests

After a PC joins Ghostbloods, you can use this organization to give them more quests and tasks, rewarding them with Foreign Coins for the most impactful ones.

This book does not provide examples of such tasks. However, you can align them with the main story of the campaign.

8.2.4 Black Market

If a PC is allied with Ghostbloods, they gain access to their stock of unique items. Each of them costs a single Foreign Coin to buy. Forged coins will be recognized and refused.

In here, the PCs can buy:

- Spiky Earrings (various metals)
- Training Seals (various kinds)
- Strange Cube
- Vial of Sand
- and other...

In here, you can use Ghostbloods' connections to introduce off-world magic systems into the setting of "Stormlight Archive". If at any point Brandon Sanderson introduces a new magic system, if you believe the Ghostbloods would have access to it, feel free to expand the offer of their shop.

8.3 Diagram Chambers

King Taravangian and his court from Kharbranth are invited to occupy some of the Urithiru chambers. The entrance is guarded by two Diagram Muscles and it would not be in a good taste to violate their space.

However, if the PCs were invited by the King to join him on his travel to the Tower, they will be allowed to enter those rooms and work with the Diagram to reach their goals.

8.3.1 King's Court

If the party ended Chapter 7 - Whispers of the Slain on a friendly terms with King Taravangian and were invited to travel to Urithiru with him, they will be allowed to live in a chambers designated for his court.

In that case, at some point read the following:

As you walk through the halls of Urithiru, Malata from the Diagram approaches you.

"King Taravangian is hosting a gathering tonight", she says. "You are expected to be there."

The party got invited for a meeting with the king. When they go there, proceed to 8.3.2. "Vital Task".

8.3.2 Vital Task

When the PCs join the meeting with the king, read the following:

As you enter, you see the meeting already started.

"... and thus, our next step is clear. I must prove to the people that I am better king than Dalinar Kholin. So, how do we do that? Council me."

One of the solutions to this problem is to show everyone that an expedition mounted by King Taravangian resolved the dark wrongness lurking in the tower. If no PC suggests this, allow some NPC to give that idea.

When the idea is suggested, read the following:

"Yes, that would certainly help", says the king. "You showed you are capable and resourceful. This will be your task for the upcoming days - eradicate this evil and earn the glory. For yourself and for Kharbranth."

Support

If the party manages to find the entrance to 8.10. "Lair of Re-Shephir" and reports it to King Taravangian, a Kharbranth Surgeon will be sent with them to aid them as a part of 8.10.4. "Allied Help".

Reward

After the party removes the threat of Re-Shephir from the Tower, double the number of Forbidden Knowledge [N] received from the Diagram by the PCs.

At this point, King Taravangian will also recognize them as official members of The Diagram.

8.3.3 More Quests

After a PC joins The Diagram, you can use this organization to give them more quests and tasks, rewarding them with additional access to Forbidden Knowledge [2] for the most impactful ones.

This book does not provide examples of such tasks. However, you can align them with the main story of the campaign.

8.3.4 Diagram Entries

While working for King Taravangian, the party might get access to the notes recorded in "The Diagram". If they do, once per day, each PC gets Forbidden Knowledge [1]:

Forbidden Knowledge [N]. Roll Nd20 and note the results. As a , the character can spend one of those results to replace any d20 roll with it. Roll new set of d20s each time the character gains access to the source of the knowledge.

The party might also enter a Conversation with King Taravangian to convince him they need more information on that day. On a success, they receive Forbidden Knowledge [2] instead.

In the books, "The Diagram" records are shown to be sometimes written in a cipher to better convey the meaning. You can use this opportunity to give your players a puzzle. When solved, it will grant the PCs their Forbidden Knowledge [N].

This book will not provide any examples as the difficulty of each puzzle should be determined by the GM who knows the group.

8.4 Tradition and Heresy

As the PCs arrive to the Tower, recent actions of Dalinar alienated Vorin Ardentia in Urithiru, who cannot continue to support him.

The PCs can show their support for one of the sides of that conflict. In doing so, they may secure a powerful ally. Regardless of the side they choose, they shouldn't be able to obtain the patronage before 8.8.5. "Bar Fight" scene.

8.4.1 Dalinar Kholin

Dalinar Kholin, the Bondsmith, bonded the Stormfather, an ancient remnant of Honor. Through that bond, he received visions from Honor himself and now is spreading his learnings. Those, however, often contradict the teachings of the Ardents.

Patron's Goal

Dalinar might offer goals like the following:

Embrace Change

Accept and spread the uncomfortable truth - Honor is dead, and he never was a god.

Patron Benefit

As a patron, Dalinar can use his influence to greatly support Knights Radiant with any amount of Stormlight they may spend for training and battle.

When facing Re-Shephir during 8.10. "Lair of Re-Shephir", Dalinar will support the party with one of his trusted officers.

8.4.2 Vorin Ardentia

Ardents in the Tower refuse to accept Dalinar's heresy. They are the defenders of the holy faith of the Almighty and they will not follow anyone who threatens their dogma. Vorinism was always the source of stability and comfort, and this is what is especially needed in those times.

Patron's Goal

Ardents might offer goals like the following:

Preserve Tradition

Defend the religion. Renounce heretic claims and actions of Dalinar Kholin.

Patron Benefit

Ardents will not support a PC working in a party with someone supported by Dalinar and they will revoke their support once Dalinar assumes patronage of the party.

Ardentia patronage can provide the party with stability and endorsement of the most influential religion on Roshar. Through their prayers, they increase maximal Focus of the PCs by 1.

When facing Re-Shephir during 8.10. "Lair of Re-Shephir", an Ardent will join the party to help them.

8.5 Past and Future

During a Highstorm several days after the events of 8.8.5. "Bar Fight", Jasnah Kholin appears in Urithiru. That rekindles her old quarrels with Meridas Amaram.

8.5.1 Jasnah Kholin

A scholar and a Veristitalian, Jasnah was one of the first people to bond with a Radiant spren and joining the Order of Elsecallers.

She was also considered dead, murdered by Ghostbloods, so her return to the Tower is unexpected and welcomed with glee.

Patron's Goal

Jasnah might offer goals like the following:

Reshape Alethkar

Abolish alethi institutions and traditions that are based on injustice and inequality.

Patron Benefit

With Jasnah's connections, the party gains access to a wide spanreed network. The PCs can use it to gain Erudition (Scholar Key) talent for as long they have access to the network.

As an ally, Jasnah will also join the fight during 8.10.4. "Fighting Midnight Mother".

Jasnah will not support a party with a patronage from Meridas Amaram and she will revoke any benefits when he allies the PCs.

8.5.2 Meridas Amaram

Recently elevated to a station of the Highprince Sadeas by the wife of the previous Highprince, Meridas Amaram is a skilled warrior and a cunning schemer.

He also leads The Sons of Honor - a cult of religious fanatics that wanted to restart Desolations in order to see the Heralds returning and the Vorin church regaining much of the lost power.

Patron's Goal

Meridas Amaram might offer goals like the following:

Refound Hierocracy

Increase the influence of Vorin church, giving it more power, autonomy and political strength.

Patron Benefit

Meridas Amaram is widely connected and as a patron of the party can grant them access to those connections. Also, once per day he can make each PC Determined.

He will also send one of his trusted generals to mentor and support the party during the final confrontation in 8.10.4. "Fighting Midnight Mother".

8.6 Other Allies

Apart from potential patrons described in 8.4. "Tradition and Heresy" and 8.5. "Past and Future", there are more NPCs in the Tower who can support the party.

Below you can find some more examples you can include in your story. In each of the cases, make sure only the one listed in 8.10.2. "No Backing Down" are present in that scene. The PCs should make more time to secure additional patrons and allies.

8.8.5. "Bar Fight" and following it 8.10.2. "No Backing Down" offer the PCs to face Re-Shephir even if they didn't complete the Endeavor to find her. You should not reward incomplete quests with possibility of additional allies. If the party wishes to have more troops during that fight, they will need to do more than just following Shallan.

8.6.1 Kaladin

During a Highstorm several days after 8.8.5. "Bar Fight", Kaladin Stormblessed returns to Urithiru from his trip to Alethkar. This makes him available for the PCs as a potential ally.

Patron's Goal

Kaladin might offer goals like the following:

I Will Protect

Protect those, who cannot protect themselves. Defend innocents from Midnight creatures or other dangers.

Patron Benefit

As an ally, Kaladin can fly the party to any reasonable location on Roshar. He can also accept a PC as a squire.

If allied to the PC, Kaladin will join them during 8.10.4. "Fighting Midnight Mother".

8.6.2 Renarin Kholin

Quiet, shy and awkward, Renarin is the youngest son of Dalinar Kholin. He is also a Knight Radiant, bonded to a spren Enlightened by Sja-anat.

Patron's Goal

Renarin might offer goals like the following:

Touched by the Unmade

Learn and teach what does it mean for you to be bonded with one of Sja-anat's children.

Patron Benefit

As an ally, Renarin can show you a vision of your future, granting a PC Forbidden Knowledge [1]:

Forbidden Knowledge [1]. Roll 1d20 and note the results. As a , the character can spend one of those results to replace any d20 roll with it. Roll new set of d20s each time the character gains access to the source of the knowledge.

He will also join the party to support his allies during 8.10.4. "Fighting Midnight Mother".

8.6.3 Navani Kholin

Mother of Jasnah and King Elhokar, Navani was a wife to King Gavilar, but she recently remarried Dalinar. As a scholar, she is fascinated by fabrials and she uses her influence to support artibrabrians in Urithiru.

Patron's Goal

Navani might offer goals like the following:

Ancient Engineering

Search for ancient fabrials lost in Urithiru and learn how do they work.

Patron Benefit

As a patron, Navani can provide support and resources for aspiring artibrabrians.

She will also equip the party with a fabrial of their choosing for the fight in 8.10.4. "Fighting Midnight Mother".

8.6.4 Adolin Kholin

Adolin Kholin, son of Dalinar is considered one of the most skilled Shardblade duelists in Alethkar, if not the entire world, making him a great potential ally for the party

Patron's Goal

Adolin might offer goals like the following:

Teacher and Student

Train sword dueling, both as a student and a teacher, to increase your skill with the weapon.

Patron Benefit

As an ally, Adolin can train the PCs in a Shardblade fight. He can also always provide helpful suggestion about trends and fashion.

When allied to the party, he will rally to the battle with Re-Shephir during 8.10.4. "Fighting Midnight Mother".

8.6.5 Other

If other allies or patrons would make sense in your story, feel free to allow the party to compete for their support. Design fitting goals for them and unique support ability to unlock during 8.10.4. "Allied Help".

Whoever you add, make sure the party won't be able to fulfill their goals before 8.8.5. "Bar Fight" scene.

8.6.6 Level-up!

After the PCs secure at least one NPC as their patron, advance them to the next level. Subsequent allies and patrons do not grant additional levels.

8.7 Stopping the Wrongness

While spending time in Urithiru, the PCs might notice that something is wrong with the Tower. They might hear rumors of strange murders, feel a creeping unease while walking through its tunnels and hear the people talking about it.

At some point, the PCs may decide to find the source of it and deal with it. It may be their own idea or come as a quest from their superiors.

You can run the search for the source of the wrongness as a modified Endeavor. In total, the party must accumulate 5 successes to succeed on the Endeavor. There is no failing threshold, sooner or later they will succeed, but the longer it takes, the more dangerous the situation becomes.

You should run this Endeavor in the background of the chapter events. The PCs will need to succeed in multiple scenes to find what they are looking for.

8.7.1 Gathering Successes

For this Endeavor, the PCs can gather successes in two different ways:

They can investigate the rumors of strange crime scenes (see 8.8. "Mysterious Violence"), with each successful investigation awarding them a single progress point for the main Endeavor.

They can also descend into the dark tunnels below the Tower (see 8.9. "Dark Tunnels"). In here they can accumulate more progress for the main Endeavor, but the crawl can be more dangerous.

8.7.2 Completing the Endeavor

After the party gathers 5 successes in their Endeavor to find the source of the wrongness in the Tower, they will find the entrance to the lair of Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother (see 8.10. "Lair of Re-Shephir").

At that point, the PCs can enter inside to fight the Unmade or return later with more allies. If they decide for more careful approach, they will need to find the entrance again, though this time they will be able to do it with an advantage.

8.7.3 Midnight Essence

If you need to introduce enemies for a fight, either during a crime investigation (see 8.8. "Mysterious Violence"), or the exploration of the unknown parts of Urithiru (see 8.9. "Dark Tunnels"), you can use Midnight Essence creatures.

Midnight Beasts are smaller creatures, often working in small groups, mimicking wild animals. Use them for easier fights. For more standard encounters, use Midnight Assassins. For boss fights you can use a Midnight Twin.

Path to Enlightenment

Fighting a Midnight creature can expedite an Enlightened Edgedancer (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

8.8 Mysterious Violence

While talking with inhabitants of Urithiru, the PCs might hear some rumors about mysterious deaths happening in the Tower.

At first, everyone is talking about assassination of Highprince Torol Sadeas and Vedekar Perel, who were killed in a very similar way. If the PCs know where to ask, they will hear darkeyes whispering about Ned, who strangled two women recently.

If the party investigates the topic more, listening to the rumors on the street, they might learn about a few more incidents that might spark their attention.

Allow the PCs to hear at most one new rumor per Long Rest. When the it appears, the party has one day to follow its lead. At the following day it is too late - Midnight creatures already managed to replicate the crime and flee into the darkness.

If the party manages to investigate a rumor, award them with one success towards the Endeavor to find the source of the crimes - see 8.7. "Stopping the Wrongness".

8.8.1 Mauled by Axehounds

Rumor

A man was found mauled by a pack of Hungry Axehounds outdoor on the bottom level of the Tower. The pack was found and put down by the policing force.

Investigation

Run investigation of this rumor as an Endeavor. The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 6 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

Set the average DC of skill tests of the Endeavor to 19 (or 16 + 1d6).

Endeavor Succeeded

If the party completes the Endeavor, read the following:

You find another pack of animals. They look like axehounds, except they are jet black, with skin glistening like oil and their body proportions feel... wrong...

The pack looks at you and pounces, ready for a fight.

The PCs are attacked by 4 Midnight Beasts mimicking Hungry Axehounds. They will fight to the end.

After the fight, award the party with a progress towards the Endeavor to find the source of Urithiru wrongness - see 8.7. "Stopping the Wrongness".

Endeavor Failed

If the party fails the Endeavor or ignores the rumor, on the following day they will hear a news about yet another man found mauled by a pack of axehounds... which is weird, because the last pack was put down previously...

8.8.2 Prey of the Skyeels

Rumor

A scout was found dead in the snowy mountain range. She was sent to map the area around Urithiru, but, judging by her wounds, she was attacked by a flock of skyeels defending their territory.

Investigation

Run investigation of this rumor as an Endeavor. The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 7 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

Set the average DC of skill tests of the Endeavor to 20 (or 17 + 1d6).

Endeavor Succeeded

If the party completes the Endeavor, read the following:

High in the mountains, you find a nest of the skyeels. You've never seen skyeels as black. And should their bodies twist like this...?

The party is attacked by 5 Midnight Beasts mimicking a flock of Mountain Skyells. They will fight until slain.

After the fight, award the party with a progress towards the Endeavor to find the source of Urithiru wrongness - see 8.7. "Stopping the Wrongness".

Endeavor Failed

If the party fails the Endeavor or ignores the rumor, on the following day they will hear a news about a scribe found dead in the mountains. The wounds again suggest the flock of skyeels. But what was a scribe doing there...?

8.8.3 Unfortunate Horneater

Rumor

Last night some Ghostblood agent interrogated people in the local bar about Ned who recently killed two women. She knifed herself only to cut him. Storming maniac!

Spoiler Info

The rumor references the events described in "Oathbringer", Chapter 18. "Double Vision".

Investigation

Run investigation of this rumor as an Endeavor. The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 7 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

Set the average DC of skill tests of the Endeavor to 21 (or $17 + 1d8$). Endeavor tests may include search for a similar Horneater or chasing the impersonator through the halls of Urithiru.

Endeavor Succeeded

When the party succeeds on the Endeavor, read the following:

You are facing the maniac. She looks like a woman in a long black cloak and a hat. But her face... Distorted and black, like it was made of tar. She looks at you with hatred and disdain.

The party is facing against Midnight Assassin impersonating Veil. Once the PCs catches up to it, it will fight until the end.

After the fight, award the party with a progress towards the Endeavor to find the source of Urithiru wrongness - see 8.7. "Stopping the Wrongness".

Endeavor Failed

If the party fails the Endeavor or ignores the rumor, on the following day they will hear a news about a bridge-man chef, who got assaulted in a broad daylight. Why would anyone attack him...?

Spoiler Info

The same incident is referenced in "Oathbringer", Chapter 25. "The Girl Who Looked Up".

8.8.4 The Impersonator

If a PC acted in a noticeably violent manner toward an NPC in the Tower, allow Midnight Assassins to replicate their crime and enact it in a very similar way on the following day.

The party might see the crime with their own eyes or hear about it. If they manage to catch the creature behind it, award them with a progress towards the main Endeavor.

8.8.5 Bar Fight

Rumor

A man started a bar fight last night, during which he killed his opponent with a shattered bottle. He was hung for the murder.

Investigation / Ignored

If the PCs decide to investigate this lead, they will eventually encounter a Midnight Assassin attempting to replicate the hanging. At that point, Shallan will also carry on with her investigation. From this point, proceed to 8.10.2. "No Backing Down".

If the party decides to ignore the lead, they will hear Adolin quickly gathering bridgemen bodyguards to get help for Shallan. Either way, proceed to 8.10.2. "No Backing Down".

If you wish, you could run the investigation as yet another Endeavor. However, is there a point? Regardless of the result, the story must lead to 8.10.2. "No Backing Down" anyway, so the Endeavor can be skipped in this scene.

Spoiler Info

The same crime is referenced in "Oathbringer", Chapter 29. "No Backing Down".

8.8.6 More Crimes

If the party did not defeat Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother as a result of 8.8.5. "Bar Fight", you may consider introducing more crimes to investigate, leading to more encounters with Midnight Assassins.

However, don't think that is required to move the story forward. The party can always find more clues in the endless dark tunnels below the Tower - see 8.9. "Dark Tunnels".

8.9 Dark Tunnels

Dark tunnels represent the dangerous and unknown part of Urithiru. The party will need to descend into them to find the entrance to 8.10. "Lair of Re-Shephir" and proceed with the plot of the chapter.

You can also use this location as a destination on various quests from potential patrons and allies.

8.9.1 Traveling Through the Darkness

You can run this part as an infinite dungeon crawl. At each point, the party has two choices: go deeper or turn back. Each time they make a move in any direction, they risk an encounter with Re-Shephir's children.

Goal - Source of the Wrongness

You can run a search for 8.10. "Lair of Re-Shephir" as a modified Endeavor. To finish it, the party must accumulate 5 successes. There is no failing threshold and the party may attempt it as much as they want, each time risking an encounter with enemies.

Entrance Point

The party can start their search from any place in Urithiru that is away from uninhabited parts of the Tower. Here, the tunnels are dark, but in a wrong way...

The starting Distance of the descend is 0. Each time the party moves deeper into the Tower, increase the Distance by 1, each time they successfully go back - decrease it by 1. The party can leave the tunnels when they reach the Distance of 0 again.

Action - Descend into Darkness

The party can descend deeper into the tunnels. Each time they do, increase their Distance by 1 and ask one of the PCs how do they search for the source of evil and wrongness.

Choose a skill that best matches the PC's attempt. That PC makes a skill test with a DC equal to 30 minus current Distance value. On a success, mark one success on their current Endeavor. On a failure nothing happens.

After the skill test, roll for a random encounter - see 8.9.1. "Random Encounters".

If you want tests' DCs more varied, use starting DC value of 27 + 1d6 instead of constant 30. Each time decrease the value by current Distance.

Action - Return

The PCs can decide to abandon their current attempt to investigate the tunnels as it is time to go back to safety and lick their wounds. To do that, a PC must make a DC 15 Deduction (or other skill) check.

On a success, decrease their Distance by 1. If they reached the Distance of 0, they can exit the tunnels. Do not erase their Endeavor successes - allow them to continue another day.

After the skill test, roll for a random encounter - see 8.9.1. "Random Encounters".

Random Encounters

To determine a random encounter, roll d20 and reduce the result by current Distance Value and the number of complications accumulated on 8.0.4. "Event: Dark Wrongness". Compare the result with the table below:

d20	Encounter
1+	(none)
0	Each PC loses 1 Focus.
-1	1x Midnight Beast
-2	1d4 Midnight Beasts
-3	1d6 Midnight Beasts
-4	1x Midnight Assassin
-5	2x Midnight Assassin
-6	1x Midnight Assassin + 1d4 Midnight Beasts
-7	1d4 Midnight Assassins + 1d4 Midnight Beasts
-8	1d6 Midnight Assassins + 1d4 Midnight Beasts
-9	1d6 Midnight Assassins + 1d6 Midnight Beasts
-10	1d6 Midnight Assassins + 1d8 Midnight Beasts
-11	Midnight Twin
-12	Midnight Twin + 1d4 Midnight Beasts
-13	Midnight Twin + 1d6 Midnight Beasts
-14	Midnight Twin + 1d8 Midnight Beasts
...	Midnight Twin + 1d4 Midnight Assassins

Opportunities and Complications

During this crawl, you can spend Opportunities and Complications on following effects:

Modify Distance

The PCs can spend  to modify Distance value by 1. The GM can spend  to increase it by 1.

Affect Encounter Chance

The PCs can spend  to ensure the next roll to determine random encounter gains an advantage. The GM can spend  to give it a disadvantage.

Advance Event

Once per Long Rest, the GM can spend  to progress 8.0.4. "Event: Dark Wrongness".

8.10 Lair of Re-Shephir

The source of all wrongness affecting the Tower, murderers responsible for half of the deaths, lurk in here. After the long search, the PCs can finally free Urithiru from its influence.

8.10.1 Finding the Entrance

To find the entrance to the Lair, the PCs will need to investigate murders committed by the Midnight Essence (see 8.8. "Mysterious Violence") and/or search for it in the labyrinth of Urithiru tunnels (see 8.9. "Dark Tunnels".)

When the party finds the entrance, they may immediately go inside, or they might go back for reinforcements. If they enter, proceed to 8.10.3. "Descending into the Lair".

If they decide to gather more allies, they will need to find the entrance again while descending into 8.9. "Dark Tunnels". However, this time their skill checks to find it gain an advantage.

8.10.2 No Backing Down

At some point, after 8.8.5. "Bar Fight", Shallan will be able to find this location on her own. When she does, she will send for Adolin who will arrive with Renarin and several bridgemen.

At this point, the party can join them. If they do, read the following:

"I brought the best men I could find", you hear Brightlord Adolin saying. "But I feel I should bring an entire army instead. You sure you want to do this now?"

At first, Shallan will be hesitant whether she should enter inside. If a PC would attempt to persuade her to wait (perhaps to gather more allies), she will agree without any rolls required.

If that happens, count the scene as an additional success towards their Endeavor to find Re-Shephir. That means they might need to do more searching in the future.

If the PCs agree to follow Shallan and Adolin on the spot, proceed to 8.10.3. "Descending into the Lair".

It is also possible for the PCs to bail Shallan and let her enter without their help. When this happens, allow their spren to warn them of missing the glory, spoils and recognition. If the PCs persist, proceed to 8.10.6. "Ignored..".

Spoiler Info

The same scene is referenced in "Oathbringer", Chapter 29. "No Backing Down".

8.10.3 Descending into the Lair

When the party descends into the darkness, read the following:

You walk a seemingly endless stairs deep into the darkness of the Tower. Finally, you reach the bottom. Someone takes out a sphere to illuminate the room. In its light, you see ancient mosaics depicting all ten of the Radiant Orders.

But you cannot admire the masterpiece right now... Not with the overwhelming feeling of wrongness emanating from the hall before you.

No matter how the entrance was found, even if the party decides to descend without any allies, somehow Veil will find out about that and join them. She will switch to Shallan once the party reaches the bottom of the stairs.

Allow the party to explore the surroundings and prepare for the fight they can sense awaiting for them.

Make sure Shallan is present during the fight with the Unmade. You can use her to confront Re-Shephir as a fail-safe if no PC steps up to do it. In other case, the fight would never end...

8.10.4 Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother

When the PCs reach this location, read the following:

At last, the light of your spheres illuminates something before you. A large mass, reflecting light like a glistening tar.

"We shouldn't have come here", you hear someone saying. "We can't fight this. Stormfather..."

The party is facing Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother. They must defeat her to restore order to the Tower.

Path to Enlightenment

Seeing Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother can expedite an Enlightened Edgedancer (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

This is the last time this adventure will feature this Unmade. Make sure you expedited Enlightened Edgedancers in the party three times in total at this point.

Endless Onslaught

When the party faces Re-Shephir, read the following:

Everywhere around, you see a tar-like darkness seeping through the walls and dripping from the ceiling. When the substance hits the ground, it forms a human-shaped monstrosity. Each of them looks like one of you, just... wrong.

For each character in the scene, spawn Midnight Assassin fighting that character. At beginning of each round of the combat, spawn additional Midnight Assassin attacking the PCs.

The creatures will fight until the confrontation with Re-Shephir is completed - see 8.10.4. "Fighting Midnight Mother".

If your players enjoy the combat and want a higher challenge, you can replace two of the Midnight Assassins facing them with a Midnight Twin.

Fighting Midnight Mother

To stop the endless swarm of the Midnight creatures, one of the characters will need to face Re-Shephir in a confrontation. If none of the PCs approaches her, Shalan will do it at the end of the 2nd round of combat.

If a PC chooses to face her, you can run the confrontation as a modified Endeavor. To succeed, the PC must accumulate 4 successes. There is no failing threshold, but each failure means 1 more round of combat the rest of the party must face the enemy.

During each round of combat, the PC confronting the Unmade must make a DC 25 Intimidation check or a DC 15 Illumination check. If the test is passed, increase the total number of successes accumulated for the Endeavor by 1. When the 4th success is gathered, the Unmade is defeated and flees from Urithiru.

If the PC feels they should be allies with the Unmade instead of fighting it, allow the PC to make a DC 25 Persuasion check instead. During this attempt, the PC tries to convince Re-Shephir she is in a losing position and must flee to save herself from those Radiants who are now living in the Tower.

The PC who is confronting Re-Shephir is excluded from the ongoing combat - they can't attack or be attacked by the creatures. However, other PCs can use their actions to support them, e.g. by using Aid action.

If no PC steps up to fight the Unmade, assume Shalan will need 6 rounds to defeat her.

Goal

The PC who confronts the Unmade must succeed on 4 skill tests using Illumination, Intimidation or Persuasion.

The other PCs must survive until the confrontation with Re-Shephir is finished, at which point all of her creatures will flee from the fight.

Off-screen Fight

All allies that are present in the scene are fighting off-screen. Don't bother with rolling for each attack they trade with a Midnight Assassin they are fighting with.

At the end of the fight, assume all of them survived. Some of them could have earned an injury, but they are never in a lethal danger.

Opportunities and Complications

During this fight, you can spend Opportunities and Complications in a following way:

Result	Example
	You call one of your allies to help you - see 8.10.4. "Allied Help". If you do, that ally can't be called again in this or following round.
	You help one of your allies - ignore the effect that prevents them from answering a call for help (another must be spent to call them).
	One of the allies is having troubles and can't be called for help during this or the next round of combat.
	Spawn Midnight Beast attacking the PCs.

Allied Help

When a PC spends  to call an ally for help, they can choose one of the effects below. Please note, specified ally must be present in the scene to use their ability:

Shalan - Lightweaving

Triggers Fear of Lightweaving of all Midnight creatures. They gain disadvantage on their attack rolls until the end of their turn.

Adolin - Strike: Shardblade

Attack +10, any one target. Graze: 9 (2d8) spirit damage. Hit: 19 (2d8 + 10) spirit damage.
(assume Adolin always has enough Focus to graze)

Renarin - Alter Fortune

The PC rolls a d20 and stores the result. As a  they can replace with that value one d20 roll made by a character they can see.

Bridgeman - Defensive Position

The PC can Brace without a shield or a cover.

Jasnah - Living Transformation

Jasnah makes a Transformation attack against a Spiritual Defense of an enemy:

Attack +10, any one target. Graze: 19 (3d12) spirit damage. Hit: 29 (3d12 + 10) spirit damage.
(assume Jasnah always has enough Focus to graze)

Kaladin - Gravitational Slam

Kaladin makes a Gravitation (+8) test against a Physical Defense of an enemy. On a success, it moves towards another enemy. Each of them takes 5 (1d10) impact damage for each 10 ft. the first enemy moved as a result of this ability (with a minimum of 1d10).

Navani's Fabrial - Overcharge

You can use a fabrial from Navani as .

Dalinar's Officer - Confident Command

The PC's movement increases by 10 ft. and they ignore Exhausted, Slowed, and Surprised. The PC also gains a d6 die they can use in their next test.

Ghostblood - Strike: Dueling Cane

Attack +6, any one target. Graze: 3 (1d6) impact damage. Hit: 11 (1d6 + 8) impact damage, and the target is knocked Prone. When the target is knocked Prone, strike them again.
(assume he always has enough Focus to graze)

Kharbranth Surgeon - First Aid

The PC recovers 10 (1d10 + 5) Health.

Ardent - Galvanize

The PC rolls their recovery die and recovers that much Focus.

Son of Honor - Instill Confidence

The PC becomes Focused.

8.10.5 Rewards

After defeating Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother award each PC with 1 level.

Depending on the previous interactions, various NPCs may reward the PCs with their patronage or different rewards.

From this point, 8.0.4. "Event: Dark Wrongness" is ended and no longer affects the party. On top of that, all rolls for random encounters in 8.9. "Dark Tunnels" gain advantage and the GM cannot spend  to remove the advantage.

If the PC persuaded Re-Shephir that they are her friends, award them with a pet - a friendly Midnight Beast will follow them everywhere. If it is slain, it will regenerate after the next Long Rest.

8.10.6 Ignored...

It is possible for the players to completely ignore the issue of Re-Shephir. They can allow Shallan to find the Unmade on her own and allow her to face the threat without the support from the PCs.

If that happens, allow Shallan to defeat the Unmade and end 8.0.4. "Event: Dark Wrongness", but do not reward the PCs with other rewards. That means they will have 1 fewer levels after finishing this chapter.

Since this is quite a drastic consequence, make sure to warn the PCs not to leave Shallan alone.

8.11 Journeying Onward

After the characters defeat Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother or help her escape, allow them to complete their other goals in the Tower before proceeding to the next chapter.

The party should have level 12 at that point of the story (unless they ignored the arc of Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother).

Chapter 9 - Darkness Slain

9.0 Running This Chapter

After they proved themselves to Dalinar, the characters can join a mission he and other Radiants are planning. They want to fly to Kholinar to scout the city and rescue King Elhokar's family. However, Sja-anat has another mission for the party - Queen Aesudan must be slain.

9.0.1 Character Advancement

The party starts this chapter at level 12. Advance them twice in this chapter: once after they find their way to the Royal Palace and once after they kill Queen Aesudan.

In this chapter, the PCs may win a Shardplate from a fight with a royal guard.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Rescuing Gavinor may be recognized by a Lightspren or Cultivationspren
- Meeting Sja-anat may expedite an Enlightened Lightweaver
- Entering the Royal Palace and facing the queen may expedite an Enlightened Skybreaker

9.0.2 Forging Alliances

In this chapter, the PCs will have a final opportunity to forge and benefit from alliances with following fractions:

- The Wall Guard
- Kholinar Ghostbloods
- The Cult of Moments
- Besieging Singers

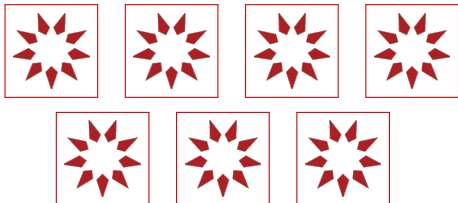

Choices made by the party in the Act I of the story should carry on to this chapter, affecting the initial attitude of the fractions towards the PCs. Some alliances may be easier to secure, some might be near-impossible...

9.0.3 Event: Singer Siege

In the second part of the chapter, the PCs will charge against the Royal Palace of the Kholin monarch. At the same time, the Singer forces are attacking the city. At some point they will reach the palace, meeting the PCs.

EVENT

Triggers when the final Complication slot is filled.

Singer Siege

Progressing the Event

Each time a complication is rolled by a PC while they are in the Kholinar Palace, you can spend it to progress the event by 1, trading an immediate Complication for an advancement of Singer forces through the city.

Other conditions described in the relative sections may also affect the event progression.

Alternatively, if the PCs are allied with the Singers, instead of spending their complications, they can spend any opportunity they roll to advance the progress on the event.

Triggering the Event

Once the final progression slot of the event is filled, the Singer forces reach the palace. All major NPCs supporting the party will flee towards the Oathgate, leaving the PCs alone in the palace.

On top of that, Singer adversaries can be met in all Palace areas. They will attack the party on sight. If the PCs allied them, they will support them in fight instead - you can allow the Singer NPCs to fight alongside them or reduce the number of royal guard forces, assuming a guard is fighting a Singer off-screen.

9.0.4 Alternative Story

From the structural point of view, this chapter serves two main purposes that must happen to keep the story cohesive:

- The PCs must battle Yelig-nar
- The PCs must enter the Perpendicularity

It is a nice addition to place the events of the chapter in Kholinar and resolve any plot threads started in Act I of the adventure.

However, the same structural goals could be achieved if the party joined the Battle of Thaylen Field - the PCs could face Meridas Amaram after he bonded Yelig-nar and later enter the Perpendicularity opened by Dalinar.

If you wish, you can GM the story in that direction. This book will not provide detailed sections on how to GM that alternative story, but you can include:

- Securing a support from azish and thaylen patrons
- Several Conversation scenes with the locals
- Several Endeavor scenes to rebuild the city
(allow the results to affect the battle)
- A Mass Warfare scene of the battle
- An attempt to resist Thrill
- An Endeavor to retrieve the King's Drop
- Fight with Yelig-nar
- Entering Dalinar's Perpendicularity

Make sure the PCs advance 2 times in the chapter and that they end the chapter inside the Spiritual Realm.

9.1 Return to Kholinar

In the days following their victory over Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother, the PCs will start hearing rumors about King Elhokar gathering a small force tasked with return to Kholinar to rescue Queen Aesudan and their son - Gavinor.

This is a great opportunity for the PCs to return to the city and contact Sja-anat about the next steps in her plan.

9.1.1 Additional Motivation

If the PCs are unsure if they should return, read the following:

"Our mother should've contact us by now", you hear your spren say. "She didn't. The enemy must watch her closely, he must suspect her..."

"Without more information, we cannot proceed with her plan. This mission in Kholinar may be our opportunity to get closer and contact her. We must go with them!"

Allow Enlightened Spren bonded to the PCs to encourage them to join this mission. If that won't help, one of their patrons can task them with this quest instead.

To progress the story, the PCs must defeat a Servant of Yelig-nar and enter a Perpendicularity. Either one of the NPCs convinces the party to take part in Kholinar mission, or you will need to improvise 9.0.4. "Alternative Story".

9.1.2 Joining the Mission

To join the mission to Kholinar, the PCs would need to be recommended by one of their patrons. Following NPCs have the say on the matter:

- Dalinar (not joining himself)
- King Elhokar
- Adolin
- Shallan
- Kaladin

If the party already secured patronage of one of those NPCs, they might ask to be assigned for the mission. If not, now it's their last chance to do it.

9.1.3 Flight to Kholinar

When the party is assigned to the mission, give them a couple of days to prepare. After that, during the next Highstorm, Kaladin will use his gravitation surges to transport the entire squad eastward to Kholinar.

Once the squad enters the city through a heavily guarded gate, King Elhokar will order a reconnaissance to scout the situation in Kholinar. He will also suggest to find anyone who will support their efforts to enter the Palace.

9.1.4 Without Patron's Aid

It is possible for a party to return to Kholinar on their own, without Kaladin's help. To do that, the party would probably need to consist of a skilled Gravitation or Transportation user, or have another means of fast travel.

However, the PCs should be aware that doing this without a patron's mandate means they'll receive less support, so it might be safer to go in a bigger group, alongside Adolin, Kaladin and Shallan.

9.2 Sja-anat's Plan

When the party is alone in Kholinar, read the following:

Suddenly, you see your shadow twist and distort. A moment after it points towards the light, taking a shape of a tall, slender woman with a flowing hair and eyes glowing white - Sja-anat.

"Well, well, well... you returned! And stronger than ever! Good... You will need strength in the days to come."

The PCs are approached by Sja-anat. Use this scene to define their goals for the rest of the adventure.

Path to Enlightenment

Speaking with Sja-anat, the Taker of Secrets may expedite an Enlightened Lightweaver (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

9.2.1 The Plan

Continue with the following:

"Now is the time to complete the plan and free all of us from Odium's hatred. You must enter Spiritual Realm and release Ba-Ado-Mishram from her prison. Only she can challenge him.

"There is only one way for you to get there. Queen Aesudan. You must kill her. She is now a puppet of Yelig-nar, and upon her death, he will claim her soul. I will use this to open the path for you."

The party must break into the Royal Palace and kill Queen Aesudan. After that they will need to enter the Spiritual Realm (with Sja-anat's help), find Ba-Ado-Mishram there and free her.

9.2.2 Find Allies

Make sure to suggest the following:

"You are strong, but you shall not underestimate Queen Aesudan. Her bond with Yelig-nar makes her a deadly foe, like nothing you have faced before. And her troops are loyal to her.

"Search the city. Find others, who hate her with passion. Use them. You will need as many allies and tools as you can get. Let them fight for you, so you could focus on what really matters."

Suggest to the party that they should find more allies. For details, see 9.3. "Gathering Allies" and other sections linked there.

9.2.3 Sworn to Secrecy

If the party arrived to Kholinar with other NPCs, add the following:

"The others. The king, the artist, the knight. They must not know your intentions. They believe the queen can be saved. She cannot be. But they will stand between you and her. Do not let that happen.

"Let them stumble in the dark. I will not harm them, you have my word. I will try to keep them alive. But you must allow them to take their own path. Do not warn them about the dangers ahead. They must face them as you did."

The PCs should not share their secrets with King Elhokar and his squad of Radiants. They must follow their own path and pursue their own goals not to interfere with the quest given by Sja-anat.

This is an attempt to stay as close as possible to the lore of "Oathbringer". The PCs' knowledge about the situation in Kholinar could lead Shallan and the others to take different decisions. Allow them to run through the broken Oathgate, and let the PCs focus on their own path.

9.2.4 Summary

After this scene, the party should know the following:

- Their goal in Kholinar is to kill Queen Aesudan
- After that, they should free Ba-Ado-Mishram from Spiritual Realm
- They should find allies to use them in their assault on Kholinar Palace
- They cannot expect the NPCs to help them with the queen
- They must allow the NPCs to follow their own path and not try to change their plans.

This is the last time Sja-anat makes a bigger appearance in the history. Make sure to fully expedite your Enlightened Lightweavers with three bonus talents.

9.3 Gathering Allies

Breaking into 9.8. "Royal Palace" will not be an easy task. It will be wise for the party to gather some allies first.

At this point of time, there are four major fractions that might be interested in moving against Queen Aesudan. You can find more about them in following sections:

- 9.4. "The Wall Guard"
- 9.5. "Cloak and Dagger"
- 9.6. "The Cult of Moments"
- 9.7. "Singer Siege"

9.3.1 Allying a Fraction

Overall the process of making an alliance with a fraction is the same for all four powers: it starts with an Endeavor to run a few simple tasks for them. If succeeded, the PCs will be assigned one final task to prove their allegiance.

When running an Endeavor to befriend a fraction, do not let it be resolved with just a few test checks. Instead, allow each attempt to be a separate scene with its own Endeavor, Conversation or Combat. Award a success or a failure to the main Endeavor based on the result of the scene.

Not every fraction can be fully allied. Since they are hostile towards one another, completing a Final Task from one of them will lock the PCs from allying another one. In total they can ally only two of them.

You will find more details relating to each fraction in their respective sections.

9.3.2 Starting Conditions

To create a continuity with the first part of the campaign, allow each Endeavor to start with additional successes or failures already earned based on PCs' choices at lower levels.

The details are described in respective sections.

9.3.3 Rewards

Completing the Endeavor of each fraction will grant the PCs some small benefits during their assault on the Royal Palace.

If the party succeeds on the Final Task, they will be additionally rewarded with more benefits.

The details are described in respective sections.

9.3.4 Default Alliance

If the PCs fail to ally anyone or if they ignore the topic and focus on realizing their own goals, allow Kaladin to fully ally the Wall Guard to align with the story of "Oathbringer".

9.3.5 Old Friends

Not only major powers wish for Queen Aesudan to go down. Depending on how the story of the PCs developed, they might count on the help from other NPCs they've met earlier in the story, eg:

- Chanri
- Gran-gran Veda
- Tir and Nal
- Ardent Liha
- Reveler Kishi

This book will not focus on those NPCs. If they are alive in your story and friendly towards the party, allow them to give some support, eg by providing an additional success to one of the Endeavors to ally a fraction or with another favor.

9.4 The Wall Guard

The people guarding the city wall are capable soldiers under a command of someone, who understands the stakes of the conflict on Roshar.

If recruited, they would be a valuable asset during the assault on the Kholinar Palace.

9.4.1 Fraction Leader

The Wall Guard is commanded by Highmarshal Azure, a Nathalian Awakener and a Worldhopper, who took the mantle of the leader when the Guard needed her the most.

She remembers the party from their previous encounters. However, she is not aware the PCs are back in Kholinar and she will not initiate the talks.

9.4.2 Endeavor Requirements

To secure an alliance with the Wall Guard the party will need to prove themselves by serving in their ranks for some time, defending the city from Singer attacks and performing other guard duties.

You can run it as an Endeavor. Instead of the PCs making skill tests, run several scenes, each with its own Endeavor, Conversation or Combat. Award a success or a failure to the main Endeavor based on whether the party succeeded on the scene.

The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 6 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

9.4.3 Starting Conditions

The Endeavor starts with an additional success if the PCs helped the Guard to defend the city gates during 3.4. "Battle at the Gates". The endeavor starts with a failure if the PCs attacked the gate instead.

The Endeavor starts with an additional success if the party supported Highmarshal Azure during her attack on the monastery in 3.5. "Ardent Monastery".

The Endeavor starts with an additional success if the party sided with the Wall Guard during Chapter 4 - Enemy Unmade to Dust, using the Dustcaster on the Thunderclast. The endeavor starts with a failure if the PCs attacked the Guards' Defenses instead.

9.4.4 Example Scene

The PCs are ordered to protect the transport of wagons with grain sacks. Due to hunger persisting in the besieged city, there is a risk of civilians attacking the convoy.

Run this scene as an Endeavor. Set the average difficulty of the tests to 21 (or $17 + d8$). The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 5 successes before 2 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

If the characters succeed on the scene, add one success to the Endeavor to ally the Wall Guard.

If the party fails, they will be attacked by 20 Rioters. Add one failure to the Endeavor to ally the Wall Guard.

9.4.5 The Wall Guard - Final Task

When the party successfully completes the Endeavor, immediately three Newborn Heavenly Ones will attack the wall. The PCs must defend the soldiers and kill the Singers.

Success!

If the PCs manage to kill all Newborn Heavenly Ones attacking the wall, they will earn the respect of the Wall Guards and their alliance.

That will however enrage the Singers, who will treat the party with hostility from now on. It will not be possible to ally the Singers in this adventure.

9.4.6 Rewards

If the PCs complete the Endeavor, they will gain respect of many guards. They will agree to stand by PCs' side when they decide to attack the Palace, dealing with some of the enemies the party will face.

When the last Newborn Heavenly One is slain during 9.4.5. "The Wall Guard - Final Task", Highmarshal Azure will agree to personally join the party during the assault on the Palace, enabling her unique ability (see 9.8.5. "Character Powers").

9.4.7 Default One

If the PCs ignore the quest of gathering allies in Kholinar, at the time they decide to attack the Palace, Kaladin will ally the Wall Guard, bringing them for help. This will not happen, if the PCs already allied with Singers.

9.5 Cloak and Dagger

One of the powers the party can ally with is the underworld of Kholinar - crews of thieves, petty scoundrels and dangerous criminals, all under the rule of Big Al.

There is no secret in the city that they wouldn't know and no dirty trick they shy away from. If allied, their experience could be put to a good use.

9.5.1 Fraction Leader

Kholinar underworld is ruled by Big Al (he/him). Big Al (short for Alloy) is a Ghostblood Boss, a Ghostbloods member who lost contact with other agents. He decided to fill the power vacuum after Queen Aesudan's behavior become more erratic.

Big Al already noticed the PCs in their previous struggles in the city. Now, when they returned, he will quickly attempt to recruit them and make use of their competence.

9.5.2 Endeavor Requirements

To secure an alliance with Kholinar Ghostbloods, the party will need to run a series of food heists, stealing from city nobles, allowing the criminals to sell it for ludicrous prices.

You can run it as an Endeavor. Instead of the PCs making skill tests, run several scenes, each with its own Endeavor, Conversation or Combat. Award a success or a failure to the main Endeavor based on whether the party succeeded on the scene.

The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 6 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

9.5.3 Starting Conditions

The Endeavor starts with an additional success if the PCs sided with the criminals during 5.1.2. "Criminal's Curiosity". It starts with additional failure if the party sided with the cult at that time.

The Endeavor starts with an additional success if the PCs joined the Ghostbloods and have their mark tattooed on their arms. Lightweaving of the tattoo might also work, but the success will change to failure as soon as it is revealed to be a fake.

The Endeavor starts with an additional success if the party owns Strange Cube (or other items bought by Foreign Coin) and gifts it to the Ghostbloods in Kholinar.

9.5.4 Example Scene

The party must steal the food from the Mausoleum, a mansion owned by the Tenets. It earned the name after the statues of house servants created with Soulcasting.

You can run this as an Endeavor focusing on Stealth and Thievery. Set the average DC of Endeavor tests to 22 (or 18 + d8).

The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 7 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

Spoiler Info

Shallan planning a food heist in the Mausoleum is shown in "Oathbringer", Chapter 77. Stormshelter.

9.5.5 Cloak and Dagger - Final Task

When the PCs successfully complete the Endeavor, they will be presented with the final task to secure the alliance - they must break into the Monastery Dais and steal the food from the cultists.

You can run this scene as an Endeavor focusing on Stealth and Deception. On a failure the party will be attacked by Sadistic Revelers and Cultist of various kinds.

Success!

If the PCs manage to sneak into the Revelry and steal the food, or if they kill the cultist guards attacking them, they will secure an alliance with Kholinar Ghostbloods.

That will grant them additional bonuses during their assault on the Royal Palace. However, their action will damage their relations with the Cult of Moments, preventing them from allying with the party.

9.5.6 Rewards

If the party succeeded on the Endeavor, they will learn about False Radiant patrol patterns as well as about Shardbearer Guard guarding 9.9.13. "Gavinor's Room Entrance".

If the PCs complete 9.5.5. "Cloak and Dagger - Final Task", they will learn about an alternative entrance to the Palace - the one described in 9.9.10. "Secret Entrance".

9.6 The Cult of Moments

With a close access to Queen Aesudan and the privileges granted by her, the Cult of Moments can be a handy tool to use against her. The PCs may attempt to gain their influence.

9.6.1 Fraction Leader

The cult does not bother with concerns like leadership or power structure. The cultists want only to revel and forget all their worries.

However, before joining the cult, former ardent named Kharat was doing most of the leadership work and some of the old habits are still active in his new life. The PCs can talk to him, as he is the only one lucid enough to give them vaguely coherent answers.

9.6.2 Endeavor Requirements

When working for the Cult of Moments, the PCs will need to recruit new valuable members from Kholinar nobility and the common people.

You can run it as an Endeavor. Instead of the PCs making skill tests, run several scenes, each with its own Endeavor, Conversation or Combat. Award a success or a failure to the main Endeavor based on whether the party succeeded on the scene.

The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 6 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

9.6.3 Starting Conditions

The Endeavor starts with an additional success if the PCs helped the cultists during 3.4. "Battle at the Gates". The Endeavor starts with an additional failure if the PCs helped Highmarshal Azure instead.

The Endeavor starts with an additional success if the party joined the Cult of Moments to enter the Revelry during 5.1.2. "Joining Cult of Moments". The Endeavor starts with an additional failure if the PCs bribed the criminals instead during that scene.

The Endeavor starts with an additional success if the PCs succumbed to the temptation of Ashertmarn, the Ashertmarn during 5. "Chapter 5 - Revel of Fools" - either willingly or as a result of failed Conversation during 5.3. "Heart of the Revel".

9.6.4 Example Scene

The PCs are tasked to recruit new cult members. Run this scene as a Conversation. The party will try to convince a noble who uses False Radiant Leader's stat block.

The Noble has 15 Cognitive Defense, 17 Spiritual Defense and 7 Focus. In the times of uncertainty, he yearns for security.

If the Noble's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

9.6.5 The Cult - Final Task

If the party successfully completes the Endeavor, they will receive one last task - to find and kill the leader of the criminals who interfere with the cult's business - the Big Al.

Search for Big Al

You can run this part as an Endeavor with an average difficulty of a skill set to 21 (18 + d6). The party will need to focus on Thievery, Intimidation and Deception during it.

The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 5 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective. The party can quickly skip the entire search if they already established contact with Big Al.

Fighting Big Al

Big Al is a Ghostblood Boss protected by four Ghostblood Thugs. They all will fight to the end.

Success!

When the PCs succeed on Big Al, Kharat will consider them trusted allies.

This, however, will prevent any future dealings with Kholinar Underworld - as their leader is dead, the others will start a struggle to fill the power vacuum and will not have any time to spare for the party.

9.6.6 Rewards

If the party successfully completes the Endeavor, many of the cult members will recognize them. They will no longer be hostile towards the PCs during their assault on the Royal Palace.

If on top of that they will manage to eliminate Big Al, Kharat will allow them to enter the Palace using 9.9.4. "Sunwalk Entrance".

9.7 Singer Siege

The Singers besieging the city represent a major force that must be respected. They could prove a formidable allies if the party convinces them to become friends.

9.7.1 Fraction Leader

The Singer camp answers to the Fused. However, the PCs are too insignificant to talk to them directly. Instead, the party should talk to Serin.

Serin (she/her) is a Newborn Envoyform Regal. Through her, the will of the Fused is made known to the entire camp, PCs included. Serin will not seek out the party to give them tasks, but if the PCs volunteer, she will be ready to accommodate their help.

9.7.2 Endeavor Requirements

To ally with Singer forces, the PCs will need to weaken Kholinar defenses by conducting precise strikes against the Wall Guard.

You can run it as an Endeavor. Instead of the PCs making skill tests, run several scenes, each with its own Endeavor, Conversation or Combat. Award a success or a failure to the main Endeavor based on whether the party succeeded on the scene.

The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 6 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

9.7.3 Starting Conditions

The Endeavor starts with an additional success if the party helped Rishai during the Kholinar riots (see 3.7. "Dying Singer").

The Endeavor starts with an additional success if the PCs were invited to stay in the Singer Camp.

The Endeavor starts with an additional success if the party sided with the Singers during Chapter 4 - Enemy Unmade to Dust, using the Dustcaster on Kholinar defenses. The endeavor starts with a failure if the PCs attacked the Thunderclast instead.

9.7.4 Example Scene

The party must weaken the resources of the Wall Guard by disrupting their food production. The PCs must find and kill the Soulcaster who generates the grain.

Search for the Soulcaster

Run the search for the Soulcaster as an Endeavor focusing on Deduction, Insight and Deception. The PCs must scout the grain movement and interrogate the guards.

The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 5 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective. Set the average difficulty of each test to 20 (or $17 + 1d6$).

Soulcaster Elimination

Once the PCs find the room in which the Soulcaster is producing food, they must strike at this location. At any time there is one Verdant Soulcaster Savant and eight Wall Guards protecting her. All of them will fight to the end.

9.7.5 Final Task

When the PCs successfully complete the Endeavor, they will be tasked with one final job - to eliminate Highmarshal Azure. The party will find her on the wall, accompanied by eight Wall Guards.

When Highmarshal Azure is defeated, the remaining guards will flee.

When Highmarshal Azure drops to 0 Health, allow her to flee. There is no need to break lore with her death.

When she runs, she should keep her sword with her - there will be other rewards for that task. If you want to reward the party with Azure's Blade, make the fight more challenging.

Success!

If the party deals with Highmarshal Azure, they will secure an alliance with Singer forces.

However, the wall guard will suffer heavy losses as a result. The PCs will not be able to ally Highmarshal Azure.

9.7.6 Rewards

If the PCs successfully complete the Endeavor, the Singer forces will consider them friendly and will not attack them during their assault on the Palace.

If on top of that, the party removes Highmarshal Azure from the picture during 9.7.5. "Final Task", after reaching the Palace the Singer forces will support the PCs in their fight.

9.8 Royal Palace

You can run this location as a dungeon filled with enemies. The exact list of rooms in this dungeon is listed in 9.9. "Palace Rooms".

Overall, in this dungeon, all rules listed below are taking place.

9.8.1 Entry Points

The PCs can enter the Palace using one of three ways:

- 9.9.1. "Main Gate"
- 9.9.4. "Sunwalk Entrance"
- 9.9.10. "Secret Entrance"

When the party approaches the Palace, advance the PCs to level 13 and proceed to 9.9. "Palace Rooms".

9.8.2 Objectives

The main objective for the PCs should be defeating Queen Aesudan in 9.9.16. "Throne Room".

If the party travels with more NPCs, they will have the objective of their own - freeing Gavinor from his room (see 9.9.14. "Gavinor's Room") and clearing the access to 9.9.4. "Sunwalk Entrance".

The PCs can treat NPCs' goals as their secondary objectives. As long as they follow with their realization, the NPCs will travel with them allowing to use 9.8.5. "Character Powers".

The NPCs will not attempt to fight Queen Aesudan before their goals are reached and they will flee once 9.0.3. "Event: Singer Siege" triggers.

9.8.3 Resting

Making a Short Rest immediately triggers 9.0.3. "Event: Singer Siege" once it ends. Warn the PCs about it before they begin it, so they could consider alternative solutions.

This does not include 9.9.6. "Guest Dining" - the rest in there is considered instantaneous and does not advance the progress of the event.

This area is not safe for Long Rests.

9.8.4 Alliance Effects

Before entering the Palace, the PCs will have some opportunities to gather allies willing to help them in this assault. Depending on who helps the party, they will grant them the following bonuses:

The Wall Guard

If Highmarshal Azure is convinced to lend the Wall Guard in the assault, they will assist the PCs with the fight in the halls of the Palace.

During each combat scene, if the party is allied with the Wall Guard, remove up to two tier 1 enemies or one tier 2 enemy from the fight. Alternatively, you can run each combat scene with two Wall Guards on the PCs side instead.

On top of that, if the PCs succeeded in 9.4.5. "The Wall Guard - Final Task", add Highmarshal Azure's ability to the pool of available opportunity effects.

The Cult of Moments

If the PCs helped in cult recruitment, the cultists will not attack or move against the PCs, but they will not help them with other fights the party might encounter in the Palace.

If the PCs are allied to Cult of Moments after successful 9.6.5. "The Cult - Final Task", they will allow the party to enter the Palace from 9.9.4. "Sunwalk Entrance".

Kholinar Criminals

If the PCs gained respect of the Kholinar underworld, they will learn the locations of 9.9.14. "Gavinor's Room" and 9.9.16. "Throne Room". On top of that, their scouts will share the intel about Shardbearer Guard guarding Gavinor.

If the party succeeded in 9.5.5. "Cloak and Dagger - Final Task", they will also learn about 9.9.10. "Secret Entrance".

The criminals will also supply the party with any items they might need for the job, but they will not send additional men to assist them with the fighting.

Singer Forces

If the Singers are allied with the PCs, they will not be able to support them from the very beginning as there is entire city between them they must conquer. However, after 9.0.3. "Event: Singer Siege" triggers, the Singers reach the Palace and can affect the events inside.

When it happens, if they are allied with the party, remove up to two tier 2 enemies from each combat scene. Alternatively, you may run those scenes with one Fused (e.g. Newborn Heavenly One) or two Regals (e.g. Newborn Stormform Regals) on the side of the PCs instead.

9.8.5 Character Powers

During the assault of Kholinar Palace, the PCs are aided by several notable NPCs. For most of the time, they will be busy fighting their own fights, but every now and then, they can support the party in combat.

To make a character help the party, a player must spend . When they do, they may choose one of the effects below. Each effect can be invoked only once per combat round.

King Elhokar - Shrewd Command

The PC gets a d6 command die. They can add it to one die roll on their next test.

Shallan - Lightweaving

Shallan weaves an illusion of the PC. Until an attack misses them, all attacks against them gain disadvantage and can't graze.

Adolin - Strike: Shardblade

Attack +10, any one target. Graze: 9 (2d8) spirit damage. Hit: 19 (2d8 + 10) spirit damage.
(assume Adolin always has enough Focus to graze)

Kaladin - Gravitational Slam

Kaladin makes a Gravitation (+8) test against a Physical Defense of an enemy. On a success, it moves towards another enemy. Each of them takes 5 (1d10) impact damage for each 10 ft. the first enemy moved as a result of this ability (with a minimum of 1d10).

Highmarshal Azure - Shield Up!

(The party must be allied with the Wall Guard)

The PC's Physical Defense increases by 2 until the end of the next round.

Arin - Spreading Decay

(must be rescued from 9.9.8. "Dark Cellar")

Attack +5, any one target. Graze: 7 (2d6) vital damage. Hit: 12 (2d6 + 5) vital damage and the target becomes Afflicted [1d6 vital] for two rounds.
(assume Arin always has enough Focus to graze)

9.8.6 Event - Singer Siege

As the PCs are assaulting the Palace, the Singer forces are besieging the city. Results of the Plot Die can be spent to advance 9.0.3. "Event: Singer Siege", indicating their progress to capture the city.

When 9.0.3. "Event: Singer Siege" finally triggers, the Singers reach the Palace. All notable NPCs who accompany the party decide to cut their losses and flee through the Sunwalk.

From this point onward, the PCs cannot spend  to activate the above powers. On top of that, each combat scene now includes additional Singer forces (you can use e.g. Newborn Direform Regals) that will fight for or against the PCs - depending on their relations with them.

9.8.7 Unmade Influence

Queen Aesudan and all of her force stationing in the Kholinar Palace are under the influence of Yelig-nar, the Blightwind. There is unnatural, wrong darkness all around and the people no longer act rationally. The guards cannot be influenced in a Conversation and they will turn hostile against any potential enemy.

On top of that, after the first enemy is killed on the Palace grounds, the PCs might feel a familiar, exciting thrill. It's Nergaoul pushing them to keep fighting. If a PC accepts its influence, the following rule applies to them until the end of the chapter:

Thrill of Murder

Raise Stakes each time a melee attack is made. On a , add +3 to that d20 roll and that attack grazes all characters adjacent to both the attacker and the defender (without spending Focus).

Path to Enlightenment

Entering the Palace under the influence of Yelig-nar, the Blightwind may expedite an Enlightened Skybreaker (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

Path to Enlightenment

Fighting in an area influenced by Nergaoul, the Thrill may expedite an Enlightened Windrunner (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

9.9 Palace Rooms

Kholinar Royal Palace is a vast location, full of rooms to explore and enemies to fight.

The PCs can enter through one of the three entrances: 9.9.1. "Main Gate", 9.9.4. "Sunwalk Entrance" and 9.9.10. "Secret Entrance".

9.9.1 Main Gate

When the PCs approach the Main Gate of the Palace, read the following:

As you approach the enormous gates of the Royal Palace, the guards reach for their arms, scarlet anticipationspren lashing around them like angry whips.

"Get lost!", their leader cries. "The palace is closed for the likes of you!"

Two False Radiants commanded by one False Radiant Leader guard the entrance. The party will need to attack and defeat them to enter the Palace.

At beginning of the 2nd round of combat, two more False Radiants join the fight, arriving from the nearby 9.9.2. "Grand Entry".

Connected Rooms

From here the PCs can proceed to 9.9.2. "Grand Entry".

9.9.2 Grand Entry

When the party reaches this location, read the following:

The long and quiet halls of the Palace stretch in every direction. Despite the spheres full of Stormlight hanged on the walls, it is unnaturally dark in here...

Normally, two False Radiants can be found in here. However, if the party entered from 9.9.1. "Main Gate", they already joined the fight in there, making this location empty.

The walls of this location are illuminated with numerous spheres. The PCs can use them to restore their Investiture.

Connected Rooms

This is a central location in the Palace, connecting the entrance at 9.9.1. "Main Gate" with corridors at locations of 9.9.5. "Eastern Gallery" and 9.9.12. "High Halls".

Also, from here the PCs can access 9.9.3. "Guard Garrison", 9.9.9. "Ardent Chambers" and 9.9.11. "Ballrooms".

9.9.3 Guard Garrison

When the PCs approach this room, read the following:

You approach a room filled with resting guards. Their helmets are off, their swords and belts are hanging from the pegs on the wall.

However, the people are acting wrong. There is no chatter, no jokes, no laughter you would expect in a garrison like this. The men are just sitting, their eyes hidden in shadows.

The party can sneak by this location with a successful DC 20 Thievery check test passed by each PC. On a failure, the guards will attack.

There are six False Radiant in here commanded by a False Radiant Leader. They are resting - a quick attack would make them Surprised. During a combat they will fight to the end.

Treasure

The room is filled with weapons. You can assume any standard weapon a PC might be looking for can be found in here. There are no special weapons in here (like Half-Shards, Warhammers, Grandbows, etc.).

Connected Rooms

This room connects only with 9.9.2. "Grand Entry".

9.9.4 Sunwalk Entrance

When the PCs approach this entrance, read the following:

You see a huge gate, ornamented with the Double Eye of the Almighty. Through the nearby window you see a narrow path towards the Monastery Dais - the Sunwalk.

This entrance is locked. To enter from here, the PCs would need to be allied with Cult of Moments.

Connected Rooms

This gate connects 9.9.5. "Eastern Gallery" with the Monastery Dais (see 5.2.3. "The Sunwalk").

9.9.5 Eastern Gallery

When the PCs enter this area, read the following:

The room is full of spheres scattered on the floor. In the midst of them, several men in ardent robes are standing surrounded by palace guards.

One of them is looking at you, his hand fidgeting with glowing rings. "Thank the spren! You are exactly what we need! Do you want to be rich?"

Three Wealthy Revelers and six False Radiants are located in this room. The revelers bribed the guards to protect them instead of following their duties.

When the PCs enter, the Revelers will offer them 20 marks each to hire them as their guards and protect them from Singers. If the PCs accept, allow them short respite and progress 9.0.3. "Event: Singer Siege" to the end.

If the party refuses, they will order False Radiant to attack them, starting a fight.

Treasure

Scattered on the floor, there is 100 + 2d20 marks. On top of that, each Wealthy Reveler carries their own wealth. After the PCs gather all of those, you can assume they will have unlimited access to Stormlight until the end of the chapter.

Connected Rooms

From this area, the PCs can go to 9.9.4. "Sunwalk Entrance", 9.9.6. "Guest Dining" or 9.9.7. "Kitchens". Main exit in this room leads to 9.9.2. "Grand Entry".

9.9.6 Guest Dining

When the party reaches this location, read the following:

You see a long table in the middle of a room, full with food, sweets and wine. A man in an ardent robes raises his chalice. "Cheers! For the end of the world!", he toasts.

Five Bibulous Revelers are feasting in here. They will attempt to tempt the party to join them, triggering a combat upon refusal. They will fight to the end.

Feast

Most of the food in here is spoiled, but the wine is fine. A PC may drink the wine in here to quickly gain benefits of a Short Rest. However, they lose 1 maximum Focus as a result of the influence of Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel.

Any PC may return to this location for sip of a wine any number of times, each time gaining the Short Rest benefits and maximum Focus penalty.

The maximum Focus restores to normal at the end of the next Long Rest.

Connected Rooms

From here the PCs can head towards 9.9.9. "Ardent Chambers" or 9.9.5. "Eastern Gallery".

9.9.7 Kitchens

When the PCs enter here, read the following:

You enter the palace kitchen. Once it must have been a busy place. Now the bodies slashed with kitchen knives are scattered all around: on the table, in the corner, on the cellar trap.

Dead bodies belong to the royal cook and kitchen staff. Most of the food found in here is already spoiled.

Connected Rooms

The PCs can continue to 9.9.8. "Dark Cellar" or return back to 9.9.5. "Eastern Gallery".

9.9.8 Dark Cellar

When the party descends in here, read the following:

The steps lead down into the darkness. You smell the horrid odor of death, rot and decay. When you rise a sphere, you see a piles of dead and rotten bodies, all in a noble clothing.

A moment later you see a movement. A small boy is still alive, just barely. "Have you killed them?", he asks.

The boy's name is Arin. He is an Enlightened Dustbringer. If the party offers him a little Stormlight, he will recover and join them with a goal to kill the queen.

Arin

Arin is too small to fight with the guards, cultists or Singers. However, as an Enlightened Dustbringer, he can use Spreading Decay.

To make him use his ability, a PC must spend ⬢ (see 9.8.5. "Character Powers").

Arin will accompany the PCs until Queen Aesudan is killed. He will not flee when the Singers reach the Palace as a part of 9.0.3. "Event: Singer Siege".

Connected Rooms

The path ends here. The party must return upstairs to 9.9.7. "Kitchens".

9.9.9 Ardent Chambers

When the PCs enter this area, read the following:

You walk through a long corridor with guest rooms on its both sides. In the middle you see some cultists in ardent robes.

Three Cultists can be met on the corridor. If attacked by the party, the noise will attract nine more Cultists and two Sadistic Revelers, who will join the fight at beginning of the second round of combat.

Each Cultist of Moments impersonates a random spren and will fight to the end.

Connected Rooms

The corridor in here joins 9.9.2. "Grand Entry" and 9.9.6. "Guest Dining".

9.9.10 Secret Entrance

When the PCs enter through this path, read the following:

A hole in a wall overgrown with rockbud vines, then a labyrinth of narrow corridors and forgotten rooms. No wonder nobody knows about this path...

This entrance is hidden and few people know about it. It will be hard for the party to learn about it unless they are allied to Kholinar criminals.

Connected Rooms

The corridor leads to 9.9.11. "Ballrooms".

9.9.11 Ballrooms

When the PCs enter this location, read the following:

You enter a wide room. Some of the walls were crudely torn down to make even more space. In the middle of all of this people in ardent robes are dancing, while others are playing some screeching instruments.

Two False Radiant guard the entry to the room in which six Musical Reveler are dancing. They will invite the PCs to the dance, attempting to force them if they refuse.

Treasure

After dealing with the cultists, the PCs can find rich clothes of Kholinar nobility lying on the floor and furniture. A character wearing those will be ignored by the guards in 9.9.3. "Guard Garrison" and 9.9.12. "High Halls".

Connected Rooms

The main entrance of this location leads to 9.9.2. "Grand Entry".

If the PCs know where to look, backdoor corridors lead to 9.9.10. "Secret Entrance".

9.9.12 High Halls

When the party enters this location, read the following:

You enter halls decorated with numerous sculptures and spheres. Somehow, the darkness in here feels stronger and more wrong...

Those halls are patrolled by four False Radiants. A PC can attempt DC 25 Stealth check to learn their patrol pattern and allow the party to avoid them. The test gains an advantage if the PCs learned before about the guards from allied Kholinar criminals.

Connected Rooms

The Halls are connected to 9.9.2. "Grand Entry". On the other end there is 9.9.15. "Throne Room Entrance", and if the party takes the stairs, they can find a corridor leading to 9.9.13. "Gavinor's Room Entrance".

9.9.13 Gavinor's Room Entrance

When the PCs approach this location, read the following:

You approach a small door that would seem insignificant in other circumstances. However, the guard in a Shardplate suddenly makes this room feel much more important.

"Stay where you are", he says, preparing his warhammer. "By the order of the queen, nobody is to disturb the prince. Especially not you!"

A Shardbearer Guard and six False Radiants are guarding the entrance. They will attack anyone who would attempt to enter the room behind them, but they will not pursue fleeing enemies.

Shardplate

If the PCs manage to kill the Shardbearer Guard, they will be able to collect his Shardplate. Make it clear for them there will be little time to recharge it, so any damage they do to the Plate will carry on after the Plate is in their possession.

Connected Rooms

The Shardbearer was guarding 9.9.14. "Gavinor's Room". The party can also go back to 9.9.12. "High Halls".

9.9.14 Gavinor's Room

When the PCs enter this room, read the following:

You enter a cold, stark room with a broken mirror on the wall. Only a few spheres illuminate the interior.

In the corner, on the stony floor, you can see a small baby surrounded by red spren. They pull on his hair and force him to watch horrifying shapes they turn into.

While in the books Gavinor and Queen Aesudan are met in the same place, I decided to split this scene into two locations for gaming purposes. This way the party may follow the secondary objective to rescue the baby and earn the Shardplate. Or they can ignore it and focus on main quest only.

Spoiler Info

Gavinor is met by the rescue party in "Oathbringer", Chapter 84. The One You Can Save.

Rescuing Gavinor

Gavinor is tormented by hatespren. They can be easily slain by a Radiant with a Living Shardblade. If none of the PCs does that, they will flee after a couple of moments. The heir is safe!

Have an NPC take care of the baby, there is no need for the PCs to take on this role. However, don't stop them if they want to go extra mile to protect the boy.

Connected Rooms

The path ends here. The PCs must go back through 9.9.13. "Gavinor's Room Entrance" to return on the corridors of 9.9.12. "High Halls".

9.9.15 Throne Room Entrance

When the PCs reach this location, read the following:

You approach a grand door, unmistakably leading to the throne room. Six guards are standing in front of it.

"Go back!", one of them orders. "The queen does not wish to see you. Leave or die!"

Two False Radiant Leaders and four False Radiants guard the entrance. They will attack anyone attempting to enter 9.9.16. "Throne Room", but they will not pursue fleeing enemies.

Connected Rooms

From here the PCs can enter 9.9.16. "Throne Room" or return back to 9.9.12. "High Halls".

9.9.16 Throne Room

When the party reaches this room, read the following:

You enter the throne room. Enormous statues representing nine heralds reach the ceiling, the floor is decorated with precise mosaics.

The queen stands next to a window, but the sun couldn't reach her skin. Instead, she is covered in darkness.

This is the room the PCs were searching for. The party should prepare for a fight! Proceed to 9.10. "Fighting the Queen".

NPCs' Retreat

If King Elhokar or his Radiants are still with the PCs, read the following:

"Oh, Elhokar...", the queen says. "You were ever so oblivious. Your father had great plans, but you... all you ever wanted to do was to sit in his shadow. It was for the best that you went off to play war.

"But I have solved the riddle! Yelig-nar serves me! I have outgrown you, Elhokar!"

King Elhokar will quickly realize Queen Aesudan is under the influence of the Unmade and there is no reasoning with her. They will retreat to focus on rescuing Gavinor. The PCs must face the Queen without their support.

Spoiler Info

King Elhokar meets Queen Aesudan in "Oath-bringer", Chapter 84. The One You Can Save.

9.10 Fighting the Queen

Start this scene by reading the following:

A black smoke started to twist around Queen Aesudan, her nails glowing with a purple when a crystalline structure started growing over them.

"You should have run with the others", she whispers. "Guards! Kill the traitors!"

9.10.1 Combat Forces

Queen Aesudan is accompanied by four False Radiants. All of them will fight to the end.

PCs' allies will focus on their other goals and will not interfere with the fight. The exception is Arin rescued from 9.9.8. "Dark Cellar", who is determined to face Queen Aesudan.

During the fight additional False Radiants or Newborn Direform Regals may join as a result of ✨ roll. Don't do it too often not to drag the fight too much.

9.10.2 Touched by Yelig-nar

Queen Aesudan accepted the bond with Yelig-nar, granting her additional powers in the fight. However, if the fight goes for too long, the power of the Unmade will consume her.

The queen starts with 1 Deflect value from Yelig-nar's crystals growing out of her body. During the scene, as the crystals grow, the Deflect value will increase. When it reaches the maximum, the queen dies and the fight ends - proceed to 9.11. "Into the Spiritual Realm".

Path to Enlightenment

Fighting the vessel of Yelig-nar, the Blightwind can expedite an Enlightened Skybreaker (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

9.10.3 Opportunities and Complications

You can use the following examples for an inspiration on how to spend ⬡ and ✨ during the fight:

Call for Reinforcements

Any side of a conflict may spend the result of a Plot Die to call for additional support. The queen is supported by False Radiant, the Singers may have Newborn Direform Regal appear, while the Wall Guard may send Wall Guard. Make sure the spawned character matches currently active alliances and events.

Arin - Spreading Decay

If the PCs rescued Arin from 9.9.8. "Dark Cellar", he can occasionally support them with his Spreading Decay ability (see 9.8.5. "Character Powers") for a cost of ⬡.

Yelig-nar's Surge

Queen Aesudan can immediately use one of her Unmade actions for ✨, without spending ► or Investiture.

Sja-anat's Scheme

A PC can spend ⬡ to use a talent from an Enlightened Radiant talent tree without spending ► or Investiture.

Modify Aesudan's Deflect

Either side of the conflict may spend their Plot Die results to increase or decrease Queen Aesudan's Deflect value by 1. Do it no more than once per turn.

There is no one correct choice in here and it depends on PCs's strategy weather they wish to increase or decrease her Deflect. Smaller Deflect means easier but longer fight. Increasing it means the foe becomes more difficult to face, but might be overwhelmed by the power faster.

9.10.4 Aftermath

Once Queen Aesudan is defeated, proceed to 9.11. "Into the Spiritual Realm".

This is the last reference of Yelig-nar in this book. Make sure to expedite your Enlightened Skybreakers three times in total at this point.

9.11 Into the Spiritual Realm

When you reach this part, read the following:

Queen Aesudan's body falls to the ground, black smoke rising from it.

"Yelig-nar will consume her soul now", Sja-anat says. "I can use it, as well as your Connection to Black Scallop. You will have just a moment."

"Go! Find and free Ba-Ado-Mishram!", she adds as the swirling smoke forms a column glowing with a black, wrong light.

As the PCs enter the black Perpendicularity, proceed to the next chapter.

9.12 Journeying Onward

After the party kills the queen allowing Sja-anat to open the Perpendicularity, the PCs can enter the Spiritual Realm. Advance them to level 14 and proceed to the next chapter.

Chapter 10 - Whispers from Beyond Realms

10.0 Running This Chapter

The characters entered the Spiritual Realm. In here, they must find Ba-Ado-Mishram and free her from her prison.

10.0.1 Character Advancement

The party starts this chapter at level 14. Advance them twice in this chapter: once after they find a lead to the Ba-Ado-Mishram's prison, and once after their final confrontation with the Unmade.

10.0.2 Encounters' Character

This chapter will provide little descriptions of precisely designed scenes. Instead it suggests some examples what the GM could prepare for the PCs, but since the content of the encounters is heavily tied to the PCs and their stories it will not present the exact scenes.

10.1 The Spiritual Realm

The Spiritual Realm is a vast and unstable place. If one can even call it a place... It's more like a raging storm of memories and places.

For the purposes of this chapter, you should remember the following rules:

10.1.1 Theater of the Past

The Spiritual Realm connects the past, present and the future. Encounters here replay the past events as though it was a theater play portraying those stories, replaying them as close to the real events as possible.

10.1.2 Impersonate Characters of Old

While experiencing the scenes in the Spiritual Realm, unless a PC was present during the original events, they will appear for the NPCs as someone from that time.

While a PC impersonates other characters, they keep all of their level, talents, equipment and abilities. NPCs form the scene will not notice it or will consider it normal.

10.1.3 Can't Change the Past

Most of the scenes played in the Spiritual Realm reenact some events of the past. However, those are just something akin to theatrical plays. Nothing happening during them can alter the reality.

If the PCs do something differently from the real events (e.g. prevent the assassination on King Gavilar), it does not affect the Physical Realm. They might feel better for one scene, but the consequences of that event are not modified.

10.1.4 Permanent Possessions

For the gameplay purposes, assume all items earned by the PCs in the Spiritual Realm persist even after their scenes end as long as a PC holds them in their possession.

All items traded from merchants and all unique rewards should remain with the PCs even after they leave the Realm.

10.1.5 Storm of Chaos

The Spiritual Realm does not have its own geography like the other Realms. Instead it swirls with constant storm of chaotic energy, feelings and memories. It is very hard to navigate, though Enlightened Spren can greatly help with that.

In brief moments between the encounters, the PCs will be exposed to those energies. However, soon after a new scene should start.

10.1.6 Non-linear Time

Time in the Spiritual Realm flows only forward, but in unspecified speed. It may happen the PCs will spend around a week in here, but upon exiting they will realize it was a whole year in the Physical Realm. Or a thousand years.

It is up to the GM to determine how much time will pass during their adventures in here. However, the party cannot exit from the Spiritual Realm into the past.

10.2 Personal Scenes

Start this chapter with utilizing the the Spiritual Realm to run several scenes tailored for each of the PCs. For each PC, there should be at least two scenes which put that character into a spotlight, allowing them to shine.

Limited Rest

After each scene, allow the PCs to take a Short Rest. To take a Long Rest, the party would need to enter a vision specifically designed for that purpose.

Unless there is a very good reason, Long Rest scenes should refrain from putting any PC into the spotlight. Save such opportunities for more meaningful scenes.

To make resource management valid in this part of the adventure, do not introduce Long Rest scenes too often - at most in between four other scenes.

Hateful Ending

At the end of each scene allow Ba-Ado-Mishram's visage to appear in the vision. It may form from the clouds, rocks, shadows, or similar, and it will curse and make threats to the PCs.

Unless the PCs flee the vision soon after, they must make DC 20 Discipline check. On a failure, they lose 1 Focus and 1 Maximum Focus until the next Long Rest.

10.2.1 Endeavor Variant

If your party likes to have a clear goal and tangible progress visualization, you may run this part as an Endeavor. To succeed on the Endeavor, the party must gather a number of successes equal to twice the number of PCs in the party.

Each Spiritual Realm encounter scene successfully resolved by the party awards them with one success towards the Endeavor progression.

There is no failing threshold for the Endeavor. If the PCs play enough encounters, they will eventually complete it. However, the longer they take, the more resources they will consume.

10.2.2 Lead the Path

Once a scene is over, an Enlightened Radiant may spend a Focus to make DC 25 Lore check. On a success, the Radiant chooses the next scene the party encounters. That might be a specific event they experienced or a quiet moment of respite and rest.

10.2.3 Example Scenes

You should design the scenes for this part of the chapter to best align with the party, their story, and preferences of the players. It is up to you what scenes will be played. You can find some suggestions and examples in following sections:

- 10.3. "Fix the Failure"
- 10.4. "Backstory Flashbacks"
- 10.5. "A Moment of Respite"
- 10.6. "Epic Fight"
- 10.7. "Unmade Influence"
- 10.8. "Familiar Past"
- 10.9. "Learn the Lore"
- 10.10. "Complete Their Story"

10.2.4 Aftermath

Once you decide there is no need for more of the scenes to put the PCs in the spotlight, advance the party to level 15. Then, proceed to 10.11. "Trail of the Ages".

10.3 Fix the Failure

If one of the PCs suffered a particularly devastating failure while attempting one of the previous challenges, you may allow them to relive that moment and attempt to succeed this time.

It may be a failed Endeavor, unsatisfying Conversation, or a Combat scene in which a beloved NPC died.

10.3.1 Example Scene

You can start such a scene with the following:

You find yourself in a cold underground room illuminated with a bloody light from ruby spheres. A person in white apron stands before you, right next to the patient lying in bed.

"You are capable", he says. "Do the honor, make the cut, know the future and join the Diagram in our quest of protecting the humanity."

A player may recognize the scene reenacting one of the past challenges - 7.9.10. "Marked for Death". The party has a chance to experience this moment again. And perhaps this time they will manage to save the NPC they wanted to protect...

10.4 Backstory Flashbacks

Does a PC have a great backstory that you couldn't fully use in the story? Or perhaps there is an event in there that feels really inspiring, but since it already happened you couldn't make an encounter out of it? Now is your last chance!

10.4.1 Example Scene

You can start such a scene with something similar to:

You are standing on a wall, wearing a uniform from a days long gone. In the field before you an army prepares for battle. "Blackthorn is here!", someone shouts.

You look around. This place, this moment, they feel familiar. Shortly after, you realize - this is a day when Rathalas fell. This is a day you lost your family in flames...

Let the PCs face a moment from their past. What will they do? Will they enjoy the brief moment with their family they are given? Or will they do something differently, knowing very well it can't change the past? Or will they freeze and despair?

10.5 A Moment of Respite

Every few scenes, present the party with something less challenging. Instead, have them visit a location in which they can take a Long Rest and perhaps do some shopping.

If the PCs own Foreign Coin (or other unique currency) allow them to play a scene in which they can spend it.

10.5.1 Example Scene

You can start such a scene with the following:

You find yourself in green, lush valley. The plants in here look like frozen in time, not moving or retreating when touched. Serene, but strange...

You wear a simple, brown clothing. All around, you can see strange, four-legged creatures. They look like a horned swines with a white, curly fur.

A PC with a proper expertise may recognize they are in Shinivar. There is little to do in here. The party can rest and enjoy the peaceful area.

10.6 Epic Fight

Not every player prefers focusing on their character's story during the RPGs. Some are here for a challenging, tactical combat. You can lean on this playstyle as well during this chapter.

Use this opportunity to introduce encounters with adversaries that are inspiring you, but did not appear in the campaign so far. You can also replay some of the Combat scenes from the adventure that the players enjoyed.

You can use enemies from this book, Stormlight World Guide, other sources or your own homebrew. Whatever feels inspiring!

Be cautious not to make too many difficult combat scenes in a row. Allow the PCs to have some time to rest, heal, and regain resources. Sprinkle some social encounters or Endeavors in between.

In other case, the stream of combat scenes may be unfairly lethal to the party.

10.6.1 Example Scene

You can start such a scene with something like:

You are traveling a dirt road in the wilderness, when you notice something lying in a pool of blood ahead of you.

When you come closer to investigate, you recognize a carcass of an axehound. Poor thing is dead for some time now, rotspren started crawling over it.

The party encounters a dead axehound on the road. A PC with a proper expertise may recognize a hunting pattern of a Whitespine.

A moment later, the PCs are ambushed by the biggest Whitespine they've ever seen. Each PC starts the fight Surprised, unless they were aware or warned about its hunt strategy.

You can use Wild Whitespine stat block with following changes: increase all of its attributes by 1 (as well as all of its skills and attack bonuses) and give it Boss feature. It has 200 Health and 5 Focus.

10.7 Unmade Influence

The entire adventure focused around the Unmade. Enlightened Radiants could have their talents expedited up to three times after meeting them (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

However, it might have happened that not every Radiant had an opportunity to be granted three free talents - perhaps the PCs missed some scenes or the Radiant joined the party in the middle of the adventure.

You can use the memories of the Spiritual Realm to create another encounter with the Unmade, allowing the Radiant to receive full range of available bonuses.

Or you can also introduce an Unmade just because the PCs enjoyed previous encounters with them and you believe it will make for a fun scene.

10.7.1 Example Scene

You can start such a scene with the following:

Out of the sudden, you are thrown in the midst of battle. Men screaming, horses whinnying, steel clanging. Nearby a dying man whispers his last rattles.

You recognize the enemy to wear veden colors. But there is no time to think. You must push forward! Don't stop! Keep the momentum!

The party fights in a border war against the veden forces. They must face six Veden Troops (use False Radiant stat block). They will fight to the end.

A PC might give themselves to the Thrill of the Battle, gaining an advantage on each attack and grazing all characters (including allies) around themselves with each melee attack.

Path to Enlightenment

Fighting in a battle influenced by Nergaoul, the Thrill may expedite an Enlightened Windrunner (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

Path to Enlightenment

Hearing Death Rattles, a vision sent by Moelach, may expedite an Enlightened Truthwatcher (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

10.8 Familiar Past

If your players have played Cosmere RPG previously, you may have the PCs meet their earlier characters or relive their older adventures.

You can consider that characters' players control their roleplay, while others people control the PCs from the current adventure. In that case don't focus too much on having the most recent and correct stat block for those characters.

Because of that, don't design this scene to center around rules-heavy encounters like e.g. combat. Instead allow the PCs to interact with their old heroes.

If you have access to an old character sheet you can definitely play some more complex scene. However, don't try to find them in the middle of your game. If you don't have it - don't worry, but make sure it is not needed for a smooth play.

10.8.1 Example Scene

You may start such a scene with something like:

You find yourself on a small boat sailing through a calm, but misty sea. In a moment you see another boat approaching you from the fog. It carries only one, but most peculiar individual.

The man looks like an alethi, but is wearing a reshi clothing and an armor made from a carapace. His long and braided hair flow around a characteristic scar marking his face. On a shoulder, you can see a strange red chicken perching.

"The gods and the kings welcome you", the man says. "My name is Mike-son-Island and I will be your guide."

Let the player who created Mike-son-Island for the previous campaign play as him during this scene. You can provided them with a goals and motivation the character aims to achieve during this scene. The party will have one fewer PCs for this scene.

Of course, do not read the above description. This is just an example how can you reintroduce an old character, but I doubt I guessed correctly their name or appearance.

10.9 Learn the Lore

Some players (or their PCs) may enjoy discovering the lore of the world more than fighting or roleplaying. You may have a scene dedicated for them as well.

Note: When you do, please be careful not to include any spoilers for people who do not wish to experience them!

10.9.1 Example Scene

You can have such a scene starting with something like:

You are standing on a battlefield, victorious. Your enemies are dead and gone. Despite heavy losses, the day is won.

You see a shaken man approaching you. "Jezerien", he says, "I can't return this time. I can't!"

The PCs experience the Final Desolation and the heralds abandoning their Oathpact. One of the PCs takes a role of Jezerien, while the others are common soldiers. The PCs can learn a bit more about that key moment in the history of Roshar.

10.10 Complete Their Story

This adventure is closing to an end. It is a good moment to ensure the personal stories of the PCs are finished as well. Use those scenes to complete their characters' arcs and provide a satisfying ending to their history.

There is no one way of doing it. You must use your own judgment and familiarity with your PCs' backstories to determine the proper ending. You can also discuss with the player how would they see the fitting scene (assuming they prefer such approach above a surprise served by the GM).

10.10.1 Example Scene

For this scene, you may do something like:

For a brief moment, you feel yourself standing before a mirror: the same face, the same hair, the same smile. But those eyes... Those are your mother's eyes.

Soon, you realize. This is your brother. This is the day he made that terrible choice. The last day you've seen him alive.

The PC has a chance to speak with their brother before his fatal departure. Though the actions of the PC cannot change the past, this might be the only chance for the PC to reconcile, change their mind, say proper good bye, or whatever is required for the character to complete their story.

10.11 Trail of the Ages

Finally, the party gathered enough clues to start searching for Ba-Ado-Mishram in the Spiritual Realm. In this section, they will follow her through her past, uncovering her story.

You can run this part similar to the previous scenes, except now you should focus on Ba-Ado-Mishram. The following scenes you can find in here can be treated as inspiration or examples, you can change them to better fit your story.

10.11.1 Sorrowful Healer

Start this scene with the following:

You find yourself in a body of a dying singer. The battlefield is scattered with wounded like yourself, various spren hovering above you all.

Suddenly, you see a black cloud of smoke approaching you. Black arms grow out of the cloud to help it move. You recognize the Unmade...

As the smoke flies next to you, it transform into a regal femalen, Ba-Ado-Mishram. "Live", she says with a soothing voice. "Heal", she adds as she gently cradles you in her arms.

The PCs take the roles of singer troops on a bloodied battlefield. However, the battle is over - Ba-Ado-Mishram is healing the wounded singers.

The PCs may help her. Run this scene as an Endeavor. Set the average test difficulty to 22 (or 19 + 1d6).

The endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 5 successes before 3 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

Success!

If the party completes the Endeavor with a success, make a note of that. During the fight in 10.12. "Avatar of Hatred", Avatar of Hatred will start with 1 fewer Investiture.

Failure...

If the party completes the Endeavor with a failure, make a note of that. During the fight in 10.12. "Avatar of Hatred", Avatar of Hatred will be accompanied with one additional Newborn Warform.

Ending the Scene

At the end of the Endeavor, read the following:

Suddenly, the face of Ba-Ado-Mishram changes drastically. Instead of sorrowful and caring healer, you see a visage twisted with hatred and disdain looking at you.

"I see you", she hisses. "You will die in agony, begging for death! I will break every bone in your body, I will..."

Unless the party flees the scene at this very moment, Avatar of Hatred will strike a random PC before the vision ends.

Path to Enlightenment

Meeting with early memory of Ba-Ado-Mishram may expedite an Enlightened Stoneward (see Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules).

Spoiler Info

Shallan meeting Ba-Ado-Mishram healing singers is presented in "Wind And Truth", Chapter 76. Concessions.

10.11.2 False Desolation

Start this scene with the following:

You wear a body of a Singer, standing in a ranks of a Singer army. The commander - a femalen with a proud and regal face streaming shadowy smoke behind her - approaches you and lays her carapaced hand on your shoulder.

"I am proud of you, my children, all of you!", she says. "But the fighting is not done, and will never be done while the children of Honor live", she adds, pointing upwards. Human figures are flying there, leaving streams of pale blue light behind them.

The party, taking a role of the Singers during the False Desolation, must face against Radiant forces. There are six Knights, treat each of them as Windrunner of the Third Ideal. They will fight to the end. In the background there are more Singers fighting with more Radiants.

Using Surges

If a PC attempts to use a Surge, read the following:

As you are about to use your powers, you hear the voice of your spren:

"Don't! Those Singers could not do that. If you use the Surges, the vision might unravel!"

If the PCs does not change their mind, Avatar of Hatred will take over Ba-Ado-Mishram for a moment to make a strike against them. That will repeat each time any PC would use their powers.

Granter of Forms

At beginning of the 2nd round of combat, read the following:

"Your gods may have abandoned you...", you hear Ba-Ado-Mishram. "But I will never! I am standing with you."

As you feel her touching your carapace, a surge of power fills your body and you hear rhythms you never knew before. You feel faster, stronger, more powerful!

Ba-Ado-Mishram gives the PCs the forms of power. Each of the PCs gains talents and abilities of one Regal form of your choice. You can use Newborn Direform Regal, Newborn Stormform Regal, or other form from Stormlight Handbook or other sources.

For easier game play, assume this only changes the talents and abilities the PCs can use, but not their Health or other characteristics that would be unhandy to track.

Success!

If the party defeats all the enemies, make a note of that. During the fight in 10.12. "Avatar of Hatred", Avatar of Hatred will start with 1 fewer Investiture.

Failure...

If the party fails to defeat the enemies, make a note of that. During the fight in 10.12. "Avatar of Hatred", Avatar of Hatred will be accompanied with one additional Newborn Warform.

If a PC would die in combat, instead pull them out from the vision.

Ending the Scene

Just like before, end this scene with the following:

As the last enemy falls, you feel the gaze of Ba-Ado-Mishram following you.

"I see you!", you hear her scream. "I see you and I know you! Traitors! Voidbringers! I will bring your death, I will make you suffer!"

Again, unless the party flees the scene at this very moment, Avatar of Hatred will strike a random PC before the vision ends.

This scene was foreshadowed during 5.4. "Hateful Vision", try to paint the same picture as then.

10.11.3 Price of Peace

Start this scene with the following:

Yet again, you enter a vision wearing a Singer's carapace. Before you stands your leader, gently holding a hand of a human.

"My people don't want war", you hear her pleading to other humans. "Peace is possible. We can find a way."

The PCs find themselves as Singers trying to end the False Desolation. They must convince a group of Windrunners they should have peace. Run this scene as a Conversation.

For the purpose of the scene, treat all Windrunners as a single character. Windrunner of the Third Ideal has a Cognitive defense of 17, a Spiritual defense of 16, and 5 Focus.

The Windrunners lost many friends in the war and they want to have their revenge. However, they respect Garith, their leader, who stands beside the Singers. They also feel responsible for the fate of humanity they swore to protect.

If Windrunner of the Third Ideal's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

Success!

If the party completes the Conversation with a success, make a note of that. During the fight in 10.12. "Avatar of Hatred", Avatar of Hatred will start with 1 fewer Investiture.

Failure...

If the party completes the Conversation with a failure, make a note of that. During the fight in 10.12. "Avatar of Hatred", Avatar of Hatred will be accompanied with one additional Newborn Warform.

Ba-Ado-Mishram and Melishi

Once the Conversation is ended, proceed by reading the following:

"Those need to know it's not just a few of us", your Singer leader says. "They need to know our new god is different".

As she said it, you see a darkness pooling between the stones. Soon after, from the shadows a regal female steps out. Ba-Ado-Mishram.

Ba-Ado-Mishram enters the scene. For a brief moment, allow her to speak fondly of peace. While talking, her voice overlaps with multiple rhythms at once.

Soon after, proceed with the following:

Suddenly, Ba-Ado-Mishram's head jolts and she turns towards the night. "Who is out there?", you hear the Unmade asking.

You see a lone man approaching Ba-Ado-Mishram. In his hands, he is holding a large gemstone with a soft, yellow glow. "I am the Bondsmith", says the man.

Ending the Scene

To end the scene, read the following:

"DO IT, MELISHI", you hear Honor's voice. In this instant, the gemstone starts glowing, as Ba-Ado-Mishram gets imprisoned inside. All of the singers around drop to the ground, screaming and writhing, and you feel something being ripped out from the Roshar itself.

Ba-Ado-Mishram is captured. If the PCs were not fast enough and they failed the Conversation, a random PC is being hit with a strike of Avatar of Hatred before she gets imprisoned.

You can now proceed to 10.12. "Avatar of Hatred".

Spoiler Info

Capturing Ba-Ado-Mishram by the Bondsmith is described in "Wind And Truth", Chapter 87. Love and Betrayal.

10.11.4 Deadly Rivals

Start this scene by reading the following:

You find yourself on an infinite stony expanse under a gray sky. There are two people standing in front of a dark corridor.

"Do we have to do this?", you hear Shallan asking.

"You just killed by babsk", he answers. It is clear to you, they are about to kill each other.

The party witnesses an upcoming fight between Shallan, the Lightweaver and Mraize, the Lightweaver. They can join either of sides to help them defeat the other. Both sides will fight to kill and won't yield.

In this scene, Shallan bears Anti-Stormlight Dagger with no charges left (they were used to kill Iyatil a moment ago) and will not summon her Shardblade.

Aftermath

After the PCs deal with an enemy of their choice, you can proceed to 10.13. "Ancient Prison".

Spoiler Info

Shallan's fight with the Ghostblood leaders is shown in "Wind And Truth", Chapter 134. The Third Way.

This scene features Mraize, the Lightweaver as he appeared more in the adventure. This book also provides a stat block for Iyatil, the Elsecaller - you can use it to prepare similar scene with Iyatil. However, since she did not appear so far, I don't feel introducing her now would be good for the pacing.

This scene is designed as a boss fight, but there are good arguments to turn the enemy into a Rival or kill them in a "cinematic" scene without real fight. Feel free to adjust based on the preferences of your players. You can also skip this scene if it doesn't fit your story, or play it after the fight with Avatar of Hatred.

Ado-Mishram's hatred growing through the millennia of imprisonment now manifests in the Spiritual Realm as Avatar of Hatred.

This is the final boss fight of the adventure. Make it epic!

10.12.1 Well-Deserved Rest

Allow your party for a Long Rest before proceeding to the final fight. The PCs should be able to approach the fight with all of their resources restored.

Consider a vision with a shop if one of the PCs relies on consumable items and must refresh their inventory.

10.12.2 Starting the Fight

Start the fight by reading the following:

Suddenly, the Spiritual Realm around you grows smoky and black. From the black cloud, a femalen steps out. Her face twisted with hatred, she walks towards you. Ba-Ado-Mishram.

"Traitors! You cannot run from me! You will answer for your betrayal, and your suffering will be a song for my ears!"

The PCs might have successfully fled from the Ba-Ado-Mishram's hatred before, but not this time. Now it's time to end it!

10.12.3 Enemy Forces

Avatar of Hatred is accompanied by 4 Newborn Warforms. For each failed challenge in 10.11. "Trail of the Ages", add an additional Newborn Warform. For each scene completed successfully, Avatar of Hatred loses 1 starting Investiture.

Avatar of Hatred will fight to the end, but when she dies, the fight ends and all other forces unravel into the Spiritual Realm.

10.12 Avatar of Hatred

The party is very close to reaching their goal. But there is still one enemy between them and their prize - Ba-

10.12.4 Shifting Battlefield

Due to instability of the Spiritual Realm, the following action is available for the PCs (the enemies do not have access to it):

Alter Battlefield. As ► you can attempt a DC 25 Lore check. On a success, you may modify the battlefield by changing a part of a scenery. The change cannot trap or damage the enemies, but you can create additional obstacles, difficult terrain, elevation, or items to interact with.

10.12.5 Opportunities and Complications

During the battle, the following options to spend Plot Dice results are available:

Prolonged Transformation

A PC may spend ◆ to delay the full effect of Avatar of Hatred's Granter of Form ability by one round.

An Old Friend

A PC may spend ◆ to manifest a spiritual vision of their ally. The ally helps them for one action before unraveling. The PC can choose from the actions available in 8.10.4. "Allied Help" or 9.8.5. "Character Powers".

Shifting Battlefield

◆ and ✨ can be spent to alter the battlefield in a way that helps or hinders the PCs.

Rally Legions

The GM can spend a ✨ from the player's roll to spawn an additional Newborn Warform into the fight.

10.12.6 Aftermath

After Avatar of Hatred dies, the PCs may proceed to 10.13. "Ancient Prison".

10.13 Ancient Prison

As the PCs enter the prison of Ba-Ado-Mishram, read the following:

From the long corridor, you enter into a children room. Their toys lie scattered around. In the middle, there is a corpse on the floor. You recognize Melishi, the Bondsmith who betrayed and imprisoned Ba-Ado-Mishram.

Next to him, on the floor, lies a perfectly rounded gemstone with a small Everstorm raging inside. Above it, two Radiants are wondering what to do with it. You recognize one of them as Renarin Kholin.

The PCs can choose the fate of Roshar. It will be easy for them to persuade Renarin to agree on whatever they decide to do with Ba-Ado-Mishram.

If you want to make this scene last longer, you can make this scene into a Conversation or a Combat scene, but for the pacing reasons I decided to avoid more challenges here. For stat blocks you can use Renarin, the Truthwatcher and Rlain, the Truthwatcher.

10.13.1 Release the Unmade

If the PCs choose to release Ba-Ado-Mishram, read the following:

The gem is shattered and the room is filled with a black smoke. You recognize the Unmade. She screams, her wailing echoing in your ears like a cacophony of pain, madness and despair. Soon after, you see an explosion of light and everything is gone.

You just released an unimaginable evil into the world. An ancient Unmade, driven by her hatred for humans, now gone mad. Yet somehow you know - this was the right thing to do.

Ba-Ado-Mishram is free. The quest given to the PCs is completed.

10.13.2 Keep Her Imprisoned

If the PCs leave Ba-Ado-Mishram imprisoned, read the following:

Your Journey was long, but now, as you reached the Destination, you know this for sure - nothing good will come from releasing this hateful spren into the world. Sja-anat's scheme might benefit her, but it is sure that people will suffer. And you cannot allow this.

You leave Ba-Ado-Mishram in her prison, loyal to the last order of Honor. You will never serve Odium or his spren. The path to your victory in this war may be difficult, but you know one thing - it is the right path.

Ba-Ado-Mishram remains imprisoned as the party leaves the gemstone to be forever lost in the Spiritual Realm.

10.13.3 Stay on Guard

If the PCs decide to stay here and guard the prison with their lives to prevent anyone from freeing the Unmade, read the following:

As you gather around the Ba-Ado-Mishram's prison, you realize how many people sacrificed their lives to keep her here. To give humanity a chance in this eternal conflict. But you also know - you are not the only ones sent by Sja-anat. There will be others.

And now it is your turn to sacrifice your lives. You will die here, protecting the prison and making sure no servant of the Unmade will ever reach it. You will die as the Watchers on the Rim, a true Knights Radiant. And thought your only companion will be the hateful wail of a mad spren, you know this is the right thing to do.

The PCs have chosen this place to die on duty. Their story ends here.

10.14 Journeying Onward

The story ends here. If they characters survive perils of the Spiritual Realm, advance them to level 16. They may start a new adventure.

If you wish to continue the story of the PCs, here are some ideas:

Stormlight Continued

Allow the party to influence the story of "Stormlight Archive" books 6-10. At the time of writing this those books are not yet released, but perhaps you will play your campaign a bit later, when those are already available.

Endless Realm

The PCs can have more encounters in the depths of the Spiritual Realm. Continue fights against terrible creatures the party did not encounter before.

Worldhoppers

The PCs may exit in the Cognitive Realm and use it to travel to another world to have another adventures there. They say Scadrial is beautiful this season...

Spirited City

At this point in the "Stormlight Archive" story, the city of Kharbranth got exiled into the Spiritual Realm. The PCs can find it in this Realm and have more adventures in it.

Appendix B: Adversaries

B.1 Rioter

Hunger and unrest in the city of Kholinar made plenty of people angry and desperate. At some point, enough is enough and those people - bakers, tailors and merchants - will grab whatever is nearby to fight for any glimmer of hope for a better tomorrow.

On their own, each Rioter is timid and cowardly. In a group, however, they lose all traces of any rational behavior, turning into a mindless incarnation of mayhem. Do not try to reason with them or find any logic in their actions - they are way beyond that. Now, there is only riot!

Tactics

Not much a threat when they are alone. Fighting in larger groups gives them courage, however. A gang of Rioters will attempt to rain stones and rubble on their enemies with a hope to keep a safe distance. If that fails, they will use some wooden planks as maces to defend.

FEATURES

Momentum. If the Rioter moves at least 10 feet in a straight line toward a target then makes a Mace attack against them on that turn, the Rioter gains an advantage on that attack.

Minion. This creature's attacks can't critically hit, and they're immediately defeated when they suffer an injury

ACTIONS

- Strike: Mace. Attack +2, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 3 (1d6) impact damage. Hit: 5 (1d6 + 2) impact damage.
- Strike: Throw Rubble. Attack +2, range 20/60 ft., one target. Graze: 3 (1d6) keen damage. Hit: 5 (1d6 + 2) impact damage. This attack gains an advantage if another Rioter used the same action this round.
- Trip (1 Focus). The Rioter makes an Athletics test against a target within 5 feet of them, opposed by the target's choice of Athletics or Agility. If the Rioter succeeds on this test, the target is knocked Prone.

B.2 Wild Beasts

The wilderness of Roshar is full of dangerous beasts. When traveling, make sure not to anger one of them, as they can be brutal opponents with no mercy.

Hungry Axehound

Not only the people are subjected to the hunger troubling the city. Lack of food is affecting also the animals. Axehounds are not exception - without proper nourishment, their packs scour the city in hopes to find anything edible. Once they pick up the scent, they won't be stopped by any obstacle.

Kholinar breed of the Axehounds is slightly bigger and more aggressive than their cousins. Their carapace has more vibrant, red hue, marked with black and orange spots.

Mountain Skyeel

Though most Skyeel species can be found nearby the large pools of water - like seas and oceans - some of them adapted to the mountainous environment. They lost their ability to swim, but they are still a vicious hunters.

Their gray and white coloring allow them to camouflage easier in the snowy mountain ranges nearby Urithiru, making it easier to sneak on their prey.

Wild Whitespine

A Whitespine is one of the most dangerous predators on Roshar. They tend to live alone, but even without a pack they can easily eliminate a whole group of nobles who wanted to hunt a whitespine for sport.

► Goring Tusks. Attack +7, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 5 (1d10) impact damage. Hit: 12 (1d10 + 7) impact damage. If the whitespine hits with this attack immediately after moving at least 15 feet, the target takes an extra 5 (1d10) impact damage and the target must succeed on a DC 14 Athletics test or be knocked Prone.

► Pheromone Release (Costs 1 Focus). The whitespine releases foul pheromones. Each non-whitespine character within 10 feet of them must succeed on a DC 15 Discipline test or become Stunned until the end of the whitespine's next turn.

B.3 Royal Palace

The Royal Palace in Kholinar is under heavy influence of Yelig-nar, the Blightwind, one of the nine Unmade serving Odium. Queen Aesudan bonded the spren, and now she is convinced her loyal guard are a newly reformed Knights Radiant.

Despite the queen's delusions, her guards are the best Alethkar can offer - heavily armed and formidable in battle, they serve day and night to ensure nobody can cross the closed gates of the palace. Though they are not bonded to any spren, False Radiant are subjected to the corrupting influence Yelig-nar has over the whole palace and their souls, just like the queen's, are lost to the darkness.

Tactics

False Radiants are fearless in battle. They will fight to protect the queen and the palace and they will gladly die in their unyielding loyalty. Anyone threatening their liege will meet their blades. If the fight comes anywhere close to Queen Aesudan, she will join it, unleashing terrible powers the Unmade is granting her.

FEATURES

Inspiring Leadership. When the False Radiant Leader successfully uses the Gain Advantage action, they can choose one ally they can influence. That ally also gains an advantage on the next test they make against the False Radiant Leader's target.

ACTIONS

► Strike: Greatsword. Attack +8, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 5 (1d10) keen damage. Hit: 13 (1d10 + 8) keen damage and the False Radiant Leader can spend ☞ to cause the target to immediately suffer an injury.

► Test Blow. Attack +8, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: no effect. Hit: The target takes no damage, but their Physical defense is reduced by 2 until the end of their next turn.

► Influential Instruction (Costs X Focus). The False Radiant Leader spends 1 Focus or more to influence that many allies. Each target can choose one of their defenses to increase by 2 until the end of the False Radiant Leader's next turn.

↻ Bulwark of Discipline. When an enemy targets the False Radiant Leader or their ally with an effect that causes the target to lose Focus, the target can reduce the amount of Focus lost by 1d4.

FEATURES

Shardplate (4 Charges). Before taking damage, the guard can expend a charge (no action required) to increase their deflect value against that damage by 10. While the armor has charges, all Invested tests against the guard gain a disadvantage, and the armor's deflect value applies to all damage types. After the armor runs out of charges, the guard's Strength, Speed and related skills and modifiers are reduced by 2 (see - *).

Breakable Armor. After the guard is hit by an attack, the attacker can spend ☞ to cause their Shardplate to lose 1 charge.

ACTIONS

► Strike: Warhammer. Attack +10*, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 11 (2d10) impact damage. Hit: 20* (2d10 + 10*) impact damage.

► Test Blow. Attack +10*, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: no effect. Hit: The target takes no damage, but their Physical defense is reduced by 2 until the end of their next turn.

► Change Stance (Costs 1 Focus). The guard shifts into one of the stances and related effects:

Bloodstance. The guard's Opportunity range increases by 2, and their all defenses decrease by 2.

Flamestance. While there's only one enemy within 5 feet of the guard and no allies within 5 feet of them or that enemy, the guard can use ► to gain ►. They can spend it only on the Gain Advantage action or on an action that includes an attack test.

Ironstance. After an enemy within 5 feet of the guard misses or grazes them with an attack, the guard can use the Reactive Strike reaction against them.

► Distracting Banter. The guard baits their enemy into a smug repartee, making an opposed Intimidation test against the target's Discipline. If the guard succeeds, the target loses 1d4 Focus.

↻ Stand Firm (Costs 1 Focus). Before the guard is unwillingly moved or knocked Prone, they ignore that effect.

Languages: alethi, thaylen, veden

FEATURES

Boss. This creature can take both a fast turn and a slow turn each round. After an enemy finishes a turn, this creature can spend 1 Focus to immediately use an extra ▶ or ▷. Additionally, they can spend 1 Focus on their turn to remove a condition from themselves.

Crystal Carapace. Before Queen Aesudan is hit by an attack, she can spend 1 Focus to turn it into a graze (no action required). Additionally, she can use her carapace like a shield, allowing her to use the Brace action.

Growing Crystal. At the end of each combat round, increase Deflect value of Queen Aesudan by 1. If the value reaches 10, Queen Aesudan becomes overwhelmed by the Unmade and dies.

ACTIONS

▶ Strike: Crystal Claws. Attack +9, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 4 (1d8) keen damage. Hit: 13 (1d8 + 9) keen damage, and Queen Aesudan can spend 1 Investiture to deal an additional damage equal to her Deflect value.

▶ Unmade Abrasion (Costs 1 Focus). Queen Aesudan moves up to her movement rate in a straight line.

▶▶ Unmade Division (Costs 1 Investiture). Attack +8 vs. Spiritual, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 16 (3d10) energy damage. Hit: 24 (3d10 + 8) energy damage, and the target becomes Exhausted [-1].

▶ Unmade Cohesion (Costs 1 Investiture). Queen Aesudan chooses a Huge (15-foot) space within 30 feet of her, turning all stone in it to liquid. Each enemy standing on stone within that area sinks into the ground and becomes Slowed for as long as they're in the liquid stone. At the start of each round, Queen Aesudan can spend 1 Investiture to maintain this effect for another round. If she doesn't, the stone hardens and any characters in it are Immobilized. A trapped target or a character who can reach them can Use a Skill to make an DC 20 Athletics test, freeing the trapped target on a success; otherwise, the target remains trapped until they're dug out of the stone.

▶▶ Unmade Transformation (Costs 1 Investiture). Queen Aesudan chooses a Huge (15-foot) space within 60 feet of her, transforming all air in it to fire. Each character in that area takes 11 (2d10) energy damage, and unaccompanied flammable objects in that area catch on fire.

▶ Unmade Illumination (Costs 1 Investiture). Queen Aesudan Lightweaves an illusion of herself. Until an attack misses her, her attacks gain an advantage and attacks against her gain a disadvantage and can't graze.

▶ Unmade Adhesion (Costs 1 Investiture). Queen Aesudan makes an Adhesion test against a Physical Defense of a target within 20 ft. On a success, the target is Immobilized until her next turn.

OPPORTUNITIES AND COMPLICATIONS

The following options are available when an enemy gains an Opportunity or Complication during a scene with Queen Aesudan:

Opportunity

An enemy can spend ♦ to increase Queen Aesudan's Deflect value by 1 and make her Slowed.

Complication

The GM can spend ✨ from an enemy's test to increase Queen Aesudan's Deflect value by 1 and to restore her 1 Investiture.

B.4 Wall Guards

When Queen Aesudan closed the gates of the Palace, it became clear that she has no intention to defend the people of the city. Lead by Highmarshal Azure, men of Wall Guards took that duty on themselves.

Despite being a woman - unprecedented in alethi culture - Highmarshal Azure shows great leadership skills and martial prowess, both desperately needed in those difficult times. She assumed command after the previous guard leader fell in riots and quickly ordered to assault the Monastery to secure a Soulcaster.

Despite their skilled and righteous leader, the Wall Guards cannot protect everyone... In the end, they decided to focus their attention on the city wall to defend from the Singers, leaving the streets of the city to various criminals and the Cult of Moments.

Tactics

When fighting against other Kholinar citizens, the guards seek to incapacitate and disarm their opponent instead of killing them. They will knock enemies Prone with their longspear attacks. If their opponent does not yield, they will proceed to more drastic measures.

A guard manning the wall will use crossbow to shoot the enemies below.

Tactics

Highmarshal Azure wields a great power few people can recognize. However, she refuses to use it against other people. In battle, she will focus on leading and bolstering her troops, but she will never strike other humans with her blade - at least as long she doesn't feel threaten.

B.5 Cult of Moments

Ardents indulging in a life full of comfort quickly become a prime target for Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel and it's corruption. After the Everstorm, those ardens founded the Cult of Moments.

During the day, the Cultists are walking in processions, each wearing a different costume of a spren. They preach the upcoming end and call for the spren worship. At nights they all gather at the Monastery, where the revelry starts.

B.5.1 Spren Cultists

When they are out in the city, each Cultist wears a costume made of white ardent robes decorated with ribbons or other ornaments to reassemble one of the spren. The most common are:

Windspren

The Cultist attaches light blue ribbons to their robes. They move quickly to make them flap on the wind. During fight, they cut with their knives before running to another enemy.

Firespren

With short, bright red straps of ribbons attached to their white robes, those cultists often carry a flaming torch or a censer, which they can use as a weapon.

Painspren

Robes of those Cultists remain white, but they additionally wear orange gloves ended with sharp, steel claws. If attacked, they will use them to make deep, bleeding cuts.

Shockspre

Those Cultist attach plenty of strings with yellow glass shards to their robes. If needed, they can rip one off and fling it like with a slingshot. They are seldom lethal, but they can cut painfully.

Anticipationspren

They wear white robes with one, long, red ribbon around their arm. During fight, they use it as a whip and they can entangle their enemies with a precise strikes, restraining their movements.

Tactics

When drawn to combat, each Cultist will attempt to enact the spren they are representing: those with windspren ribbons will quickly move between multiple targets, the ones with painspren gloves will scratch their foes, while shockspren cultists will use slings to rain glass shards on their enemies.

► Anticipation - Pull. If the Cultist Restrained an enemy with their attack, they can make an opposed Athletics check. On a success, the Cultist pulls the Restrained enemy up to 10 feet towards themselves.

B.5.2 Revelers of the Heart

After the set of sun, the revelry begins. All cultists return to the Monastery where they indulge in food, drinks, dance and other pleasures.

But the former ardents are not alone - with food being scarce in the city and the enemy army threatening with carnage any day now, many lost all hope and responded to the inviting call of Ashertmarn. In here, all their desires come true:

Masked Reveler

One of the most devoted servants of Ashertmarn - former ardent, now making sure the revelry continues undisturbed. Those revelers hide their faces behind pale blank masks without any features.

Bibulous Reveler

Desperate lighteyes and starving people ready to give everything for one more sip of wine, one additional bite of meat. They don't care about anything else, their clothes are often in shreds and food stains.

Musical Reveler

Broken people finding their last glimpse of joy in music and dance. Some of them are haunted with an eerie tune nobody else can hear. They are eager to share the musical rapture with other characters who do not follow the steps of the dance.

Wealthy Reveler

While you can't eat your money, some revelers desire wealth above all else. When they are surrounded by delicious food and exotic wine, they see only spheres and jewelry which they proudly wear, presenting to the world.

Sadistic Reveler

Those do not care about money or whatever it can buy. Instead they hunger for sensations and experiences - they seek thrill of pleasure, scream of pain, they are longing for fear and anticipation, each one unique and exceptional.

Tactics

The revelers do not wish to fight, they only want to relax and revel. They will invite the others to the revel to share the celebrations, but they will avoid physical conflict for as long as possible.

They can't willingly move away from the reveler on that turn.

B.5.3 Heart of the Revel

Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel is the Unmade whose influence corrupted the ardents until they formed Cult of Moments. It resides in the very center of the revelries in the Ardent Monastery - on top of the control building of the Kholinar Oathgate.

Ashertmarn's body is a huge mass of black flesh. It beats in uneven rhythm, which earned it a name of Heart of the Revel. However, there is nothing familiar in its form - if it really reassembles a heart, it is no heart of a human.

Despite being a powerful Unmade, it is not very intelligent. One cannot expect a meaningful conversation with it. Instead, it will try to enact its nature - calling weak and troubled to join the endless revel.

Tactics

Ashertmarn cannot be killed and any attempts will fail. To defeat it, one must show unyielding determination and a steel will.

In a conversation it will attempt to shake the resolve of its opponents with constant calls to the revel. It will use its thralls for help if that's what it takes.

If Heart of the Revel would see it has no power over a person, it will retreat.

▶ Join the Revel (Costs 1 Focus). Choose one of the nearby Revelers. During this round they can use any action to support the Unmade in the conversation.

B.6 Singers

Millennia ago, Singer armies fought against Honor and his human forces. After their defeat, they were stripped of their forms and forced into slavery as parshmen.

Years passed and now nobody remembers what happened back then. However, Singers' hatred for their enemies never extinguished. Now, with the Everstorm they are reborn into forms lost to time, ready to have their revenge.

Singers' skin looks like a marble, with red patterns on a white or black surface. Depending on the current form, a Singer can have a carapace - either ornamental or serving as an armor.

Tactics

Singer troops tend to work in warpairs, two warriors fighting as one. They often use aggressive tactics, striking hard and fast, utilizing abilities granted them by their forms.

Tactics

Newborn Heavenly Ones are the nobility among the Singers. They seldom join the fight, sending their troops instead. However, if the situation calls for a rapid air support, they will be there, enjoying every second of fight against the most hated humans.

►► Bolt of Lightning (Costs 1 Investiture). Attack +7, range 60 ft., one target. This attack gains a disadvantage unless the Regal spends 1 Focus to ignore it. Graze: 8 (2d8) energy damage. Hit: 15 (2d8 + 7) energy damage.

► Storm Leap (Costs 1 Investiture). The Regal jumps up to 60 feet. If they land within 5 feet of an enemy, the Regal can use the Gain Advantage action as ►.

► Electrical Charge. After the Regal uses the Move action, they become electrically charged until the start of their next turn. While charged, they're immune to energy damage, and whenever the charged Regal is hit by an attack by an enemy within 5 feet of them, the attacker takes 4 (1d8) energy damage.

Physical Skills: Agility +5, Athletics +8, Heavy Weaponry +8, Light Weaponry +6

Cognitive Skills: Discipline +6, Intimidation +6

Spiritual Skills: Perception +5

Languages: alethi

FEATURES

Martial Experience. The direform can use their Strike action twice on their turn.

Obstinate Guard. It costs the direform 1 fewer Focus to resist an enemy's influence.

Spiked Carapace. The direform can use their carapace like a shield, allowing them to use the Brace action. While benefiting from Brace, the first time on each turn that the direform either is hit or grazed by a melee attack or is successfully Grappled or Shoved by an enemy, that enemy takes 3 (1d6) keen damage.

Newborn. When this singer rolls a Complication, they become Disoriented until their next turn.

ACTIONS

► Strike: Hammer. Attack +8, reach 5 ft., one target. The direform gains an advantage on this attack if they moved at least 10 feet in a straight line toward the target this turn. Graze: 5 (1d10) impact damage. Hit: 13 (1d10 + 8) impact damage.

► Strike: Longbow. Attack +8, range 150/600 ft., one target. Graze: 3 (1d6) keen damage. Hit: 11 (1d6 + 8) keen damage.

► Invested Enhancement (Costs 1 Investiture). The direform becomes Enhanced [Strength +1] and Enhanced [Speed +1] until the end of their next turn. This temporarily increases each of their Physical skills by 1, including their Hammer and Longbow actions' attack and damage rolls. At the end of each of the direform's turns, they can spend 1 Investiture to maintain this effect for an additional round.

↻ Stand Firm (Costs 1 Focus). Before the direform is unwillingly moved or knocked Prone, they ignore that effect.

↻ Tackle. When an enemy triggers a Reactive Strike from the direform, the direform can instead attempt to Grapple the enemy as ↻, spending Focus as if they made a Reactive Strike. If the Grapple succeeds, the enemy also takes 3 (1d6) keen damage from the direform's carapace spikes.

FEATURES

Invariable Flight. The Fused can only fly using the Move action once per turn.

Harry the Foe. When the Fused hits with an attack immediately after flying at least 15 feet, the target loses 1 Focus.

Newborn. When this singer rolls a Complication, they become Disoriented until their next turn.

Skyborn. The Fused doesn't trigger Reactive Strikes while flying.

ACTIONS

► Strike: Raysium Lance. Attack +9, reach 10 ft., one target. Graze: 4 (1d8) keen damage. Hit: 16 (1d8 + 12) keen damage, and the target loses 1 Investiture.

► Surge of Gravitation (Costs 1 Investiture). The Fused performs a Basic Lashing on a Huge (15-foot) or smaller character or non-Invested object within their reach that isn't being worn or carried. An object Lashed in this way moves up to 30 feet in any direction. An ally Lashed in this way gains a 30-foot flying rate and Invariable Flight feature until the end of the Fused's next turn. To Lash an enemy, the Fused makes a Gravitation test against the enemy's Physical defense. On a success, they move the target up to 30 feet in any direction, and the target becomes Restrained until the start of the Fused's next turn. If a Lashed object collides with a character, or if a Lashed enemy collides with an object or surface during this movement, the character takes 20 (2d10 + 9) damage of a type appropriate to the object or surface.

► Regenerate (Costs 1 Investiture). The Heavenly One recovers 6 (1d6 + 3) health.

↻ Reflexive Strike. Before an enemy voluntarily moves while within 10 feet of the Fused, the Fused uses their Raysium Lance action against them.

FEATURES

Boss. This creature can take both a fast turn and a slow turn each round. After an enemy finishes a turn, this creature can spend 1 Focus to immediately use an extra ► or ►►. Additionally, they can spend 1 Focus on their turn to remove a condition from themselves.

Compelling Leader. When Mishram successfully uses the Gain Advantage action or gains an Opportunity, she can grant that advantage or Opportunity to one of their allies within 60 feet of them.

Glimpses of the Future (Costs 1+ Investiture). Once per round, after Mishram rolls the dice for a test, Mishram can spend 1 Investiture or more to reroll that number of dice.

Spiked Carapace. Mishram can use her carapace like a shield, allowing her to use the Brace action. When Mishram either is hit or grazed by a melee attack or is successfully Grappled or Shoved by an enemy, that enemy takes 3 (1d6) keen damage.

ACTIONS

► Strike: Scepter. Attack +10, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 3 (1d6) impact damage. Hit: 13 (1d6 + 10) impact damage. This attack gains an advantage if Mishram moved at least 10 ft. in straight line toward the target this turn.

► Strike: Carapace Claws. Attack +10, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 4 (1d8) keen damage. Hit: 14 (1d6 + 10) keen damage. Mishram can use this action multiple times per turn by spending 1 Focus for each of those actions beyond the first.

►► Bolt of Lightning (Costs 1 Investiture). Attack +10, range 60 ft., one target. Graze: 8 (2d8) energy damage. Hit: 18 (2d8 + 10) energy damage.

► Grieving Dirge (Costs 2 Investiture). Mishram makes an Intimidation test against the Spiritual defense of a target she can influence within 30 feet of her. On a success, the target becomes Exhausted [-1].

► Swift Charge (Costs 3 Investiture). Mishram moves up to her movement rate in a straight line without triggering Reactive Strikes. When she does, Mishram can move through the spaces of Medium and smaller characters. Mishram can make an Agility attack against the Physical defense of each enemy in this line, rolling 1d6 impact damage. On a hit, the enemy is also knocked Prone.

► Granter of Forms (Costs 1 Investiture). An allied tier 1 Singer Mishram can sense becomes Unconscious. That condition cannot be removed. At the end of the next round, the Unconscious condition ends and the target assumes chosen Regal Form of Power. That form recovers all Health, Focus and Investiture. If the target dies before assuming the new Form, the ability ends with no effect, and Mishram regains all Investiture spent to use it.

► Healing Touch (Costs 1 Investiture). An allied Singer within 5 ft. recovers 11 (2d6 + 5) Health.

►► Draw from the Well. At the end of the round, Mishram recovers all Investiture.

↻ Decaying Touch (Costs 1 Focus or Investiture). Before a character within Mishram's reach recovers Health or Focus, she can spend 1 Focus or 1 Investiture to prevent them from doing so. The character does not regain that Health or Focus, but any actions, Investiture, or other resources they spent still remain spent.

B.7 Feral Spren

People on Roshar have known the spren their entire life. They always appeared nearby plants, fire or strong emotions. Small entities made of glowing light, immaterial and harmless, could never harm anyone.

In the Shadesmar, those spren are more akin to animals. They can be bred and domesticated, but they can also roam the wilderness of the Cognitive Realm, attacking unsuspecting travelers.

Luckily, in here they can also be hit with conventional weapons. Though they won't kill them, they are often enough to make them retreat from the fight.

Tactics

Feral Spren are acting on instinct, being attracted to an emotion or natural phenomena. In the fight they don't strategize. Instead, they focus on the thing that got their attention, often to the detriment of the person responsible for it.

B.8 True Spren

Spren who bond with Knights Radiant are called True Spren. In the Cognitive Realm they have a humanoid shape, their own culture, cities and communities.

Tactics

In the fight, a True Spren will choose their weapon based on a distance to the enemy. When at sea, they will attempt to throw the enemy overboard to quickly remove them from the combat.

Splinter of a God

There are nine types of True Spren. Each of them gains an additional ability based on their family:

Honorspren. If a melee attack misses the spren, they can strike the attacker as .

Highspre. All attempts to influence the spren during a Conversation gain disadvantage.

Ashspre. As , the spren can recover 1d4 Health.

Cultivationspren. Once per round, the spren can use Aid action as .

Mistspren. The spren does not trigger Reactive Strikes.

Cryptic. As , the spren can advantage on all actions against the target until the end of the scene.

Inkspren. As an , the spren can spend 1 Focus to become Focused.

Lightspren. Keen damage against the spren is rolled with disadvantage.

Peakspre. The spren gains +2 Deflect. Allies can use them as a cover.

B.9 The Diagram

In the past, during a day of godlike intelligence, King Taravangian written down "The Diagram" - a set of enigmatic notes, graphs and ciphers describing his prophetic predictions for the future events.

The king's secret society, named after the Diagram, now works in shadows of Kharbranth to do whatever is necessary to ensure the survival of humanity in the upcoming Desolation.

Tactics

Diagram forces rely on their knowledge about future events. Both in combat and conversations, they will reach for that knowledge to use their Forbidden Knowledge [N] abilities, allowing them to re-roll unwanted roll results.

Forbidden Knowledge [N]

Due to the access to predictions written down in "The Diagram" reinforced by Death Rattles gathered in Kharbranth hospitals, the Diagram has a limited knowledge about the future events. This is represented by Forbidden Knowledge [N] feature:

Forbidden Knowledge [N]. Roll Nd20 and note the results. As a , the character can spend one of those results to replace any d20 roll with it. Roll new set of d20s each time the character gains access to the source of the knowledge.

At the beginning of a Combat or a Conversation scene with the Diagram, roll specified number of d20s for each of the adversaries in the scene and note the results. Those characters can use them to replace unwanted rolls during the scene.

To simplify the management, note only the results of the rolls, but you can refrain from tracking which value is owned by which NPC. Instead allow them to share the pool, just make sure no NPC can use their ability more times than specified in their stat block.

FEATURES

Forbidden Knowledge [2]. Roll 2d20 and note the results. As a , the character can spend one of those results to replace any d20 roll with it. Roll new set of d20s each time the character gains access to the source of the knowledge.

ACTIONS

► Strike: Unarmed Attack. Attack +6, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 1 impact damage. Hit: 7 (1 + 6) impact damage, and the surgeon can spend  or 1 Focus to apply Exhausted [2] on the target.

► Doctor's Order. The surgeon makes a Medicine check against the target's Spiritual Defense. The test gains an advantage, unless the target has all Health remaining. Raise stakes if the target suffers from injury. On a success, that character must spend 1 Focus or back down from the conversation.

► First Aid (Costs 1 Focus). The surgeon makes a DC 15 Medicine check. On a success, a willing target recovers 1d10 + 5 Health and gains disadvantage on all future tests to influence the surgeon in a Conversation.

► Professional Care (Costs 2 Focus). The surgeon makes a DC 10 Medicine check. On a success, they remove one condition caused by an injury from a willing target and the target cannot attempt to influence the surgeon in a future Conversations. The target can spend 1 Focus to ignore this effect for a single contribution.

ACTIONS

► Strike: Shardblade. Attack +8, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 11 (2d10) spirit damage. Hit: 19 (2d10 + 8) spirit damage, and Malata can spend 1 Focus to use the Disengage action as ►.

► Strike: Shortbow. Attack +8, range 80/320 ft., one target. Graze: 3 (1d6) keen damage. Hit: 11 (1d6 + 8) keen damage.

► Decaying Touch (Costs 1 Investiture). Attack +8 vs. Spiritual, reach 10 ft., one target. Graze: 16 (3d10) spirit damage. Hit: 24 (3d10 + 8) spirit damage, and the target must succeed on a DC 14 Agility test or their armor rusts and decays, permanently decreasing its deflect value by 1. Armor damaged in this way can be repaired with proper materials as a downtime activity.

►► Burst of Flame (Costs 2 Investiture). Malata emits a burst of fire that deals 6 (1d12) energy damage to each character within 10 feet of them and sets unattended objects in that area ablaze. Additionally, Malata can spend 1 Focus or more to shower sparks onto that number of enemies within 30 feet of them; each target must succeed on a DC 14 Agility test or lose one ► on their next turn.

► Eroding Escape (Costs 1 Investiture). Malata targets herself or an ally in reach, ending one condition on them that is either applying the Immobilized condition, the Restrained condition, or a disadvantage on any physical test.

► Regenerate (Costs 1 Investiture). Malata recovers 6 (1d6 + 3) health. She can use this free action even while Unconscious or otherwise prevented from using actions.

► Skate (Costs 1 Focus). Malata moves up to her movement rate.

OPPORTUNITIES AND COMPLICATIONS

The following options are available when an enemy gains an Opportunity or Complication during a scene with Malata:

Opportunity

An enemy can spend  to prevent Malata from using their Burst of Flame and Regenerate actions until the end of Malata's next turn.

Complication

The GM can spend  from an enemy's test to remove the Investiture cost from Malata's Decaying Touch action and Skate free action until the end of Malata's next turn.

The Boon and the Curse

Due to an influence of the Old Magic, the king's abilities change every day. This is represented by the following ability:

The Boon and the Curse. At beginning of each day, roll 2d6. Change this character's Intelligence by +X-7 and Awareness by +7-X, where X is the result of the roll. That affects the character's Defenses and skills.

To avoid unnecessary calculations, the table below captures final values of Intelligence (Int), Awareness (Awa), Cognitive and Spiritual Defenses (C.D and S.D) in relation to the result of 2d6 roll.

Please note, roll 2d6 only once and derive all the results from that singular roll.

2d6:	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10	11	12
Int:	0	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9	10
Awa:	10	9	8	7	6	5	4	3	2	1	0
C.D.:	15	16	17	18	19	20	21	22	23	24	25
S.D.:	25	24	23	22	21	20	19	18	17	16	15

Recognize Brilliance

The consequences of The Boon and the Curse roll extend beyond the attributes, but also shape how the conversation with King Taravangian will look like.

Whichever part of the king's personality is dominant at the moment will determine which arguments are harder to resist - both for the king and his adversaries in the Conversation. If any character succeeds a test against their enemy Defense, if that Defense is the highest one of King Taravangian, it costs 2 Focus instead of 1 to resist it.

That works for both king and the PCs - e.g. if King Taravangian has higher spiritual attributes, his Persuasion is harder to resist, but when an enemy successfully uses Persuasion against him, it is more effective and costs King Taravangian 2 Focus to resist.

The Boon and the Curse. At beginning of each day, roll 2d6. Change this character's Intelligence by +X-7 and Awareness by +7-X, where X is the result of the roll. That affects the character's Defenses and skills.

Recognize Brilliance. During a Conversation, all characters must spend 2 Focus to resist an influence of a tests rolled against the Defense that is the highest of Taravangian's Defenses.

Forbidden Knowledge [4]. Roll 4d20 and note the results. As a , the character can spend one of those results to replace any d20 roll with it. Roll new set of d20s each time the character gains access to the source of the knowledge.

Boss (Conversation). This character makes a contribution twice in a Conversation round: once after more than a half of enemies made their contribution, and the second time after all of them contributed.

After an enemy finishes a turn, the character can spend 1 Focus to immediately use an extra  or . Additionally, they can spend 1 Focus on their turn to remove a condition from themselves.

ACTIONS

 Control the Conversation. Choose an attribute. Until the end of the next round, no character can use skills of that attribute while contributing to the Conversation. You cannot choose the same attribute twice in a row.

 Know Thy Enemy. Taravangian makes a Deduction or Insight test against the target's respective Defense. On a success, during the target's next turn, resisting their influence costs 1 fewer Focus and if Taravangian doesn't need to resist their influence, the target loses 2 Focus instead.

B.10 Midnight Essence

Deep under Urithiru an ancient evil lurks - Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother. She was tasked with one job millennia ago - to kill humans.

However, after many years of slaughter, she became curious of her prey. Now she sends her minions - black spawns made seemingly from a tar-like liquid held in a waterskin-like vessel - to learn more about humans and their cruelty.

Her smallest children - Midnight Beasts are not big enough to impersonate people. Instead they can be found mimicking wild animals, often assuming a form of predators.

Midnight Assassin are sent into the halls of Urithiru to observe and learn people. If a crime is committed, those creatures seek to reenact it within days. Though they try to appear as humans, they often look... wrong.

Every child of Re-Shephir is scary, but none is more terrifying than Midnight Twin. Those abominations look like two people sharing one twisted body with four arms and legs and two hideous faces. When one is slain, it often splits into two smaller creatures.

Tactics

Midnight Essence creatures prefer combat in a close-range, where they can use their Formed Weapon and Mimic Violence to imitate the attack of their foes. If endangered, they will flee into the darkness to lick their wounds.

B.11 Ghostbloods

Worldhopping from another world, the Ghostbloods live by a simple creed - to do whatever is best for Scadrial, their home planet. Right now it means finding means extracting enormous amounts of Investiture from Roshar and transporting it back to Scadrial.

The entire organization excels in gathering and managing information. Their awareness of the Cosmere and secrets it hides turns them into very dangerous and unpredictable foes.

Scadrial Magic

Allomancy, the magic from Scadrial, allows its users to drink metal flakes and burn them for a specific bonus effect. That makes them independent from Rosharn Highstorms as a source of Investiture.

Scouts and Spies

Ghostbloods understand that knowledge is power. They employ a wide network of scouts and spies, who gather the critical information to use against their enemies. Using Strange Cubes, a technology from yet another world, they can quickly communicate with their leader, even from the Shadesmar.

Tactics

Ghostblood Thugs are the ones that feel the most comfortable with the fighting. Their allomancy allows them to burn pewter, making them stronger, faster and more deadly. They will not hesitate to fight dirty if that's what it takes to win.

FEATURES

Boss. This creature can take both a fast turn and a slow turn each round. After an enemy finishes a turn, this creature can spend 1 Focus to immediately use an extra ▶ or ▷. Additionally, they can spend 1 Focus on their turn to remove a condition from themselves.

Compelling Leader. When Iyatil successfully uses the Gain Advantage action or gains an Opportunity, she can grant that advantage or Opportunity to one of her allies within 60 feet of her.

Inured to Poison. The Ghostblood gains an advantage on tests to resist the effects of poison. Additionally, before the Ghostblood takes vital damage, they reduce it by 2.

Perfected Body. At the end of her turn, Iyatil can switch between her physical form and a formless, shadowy form by spending 1 Investiture. While in her incorporeal form, all attacks made against her Physical Defense gain disadvantage, but she can attack only if she stands in a darkened area.

Ruthless. After Iyatil knocks an enemy Prone, she can make an additional Strike against that target as ▷ on that turn (even if she has already used that Strike action).

ACTIONS

▶ Strike: Shortsword. Attack +9, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 3 (1d6) keen damage. Hit: 12 (1d6 + 9) keen damage.

▶ Strike: Anti-Stormlight Knife. Attack +9, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 2 (1d4) keen damage. Hit: 11 (1d4 + 9) keen damage. That attack ignores Deflect value of Shardplates. Once per scene, after hitting an enemy, Iyatil can infuse them with Anti-Stormlight - until the next Long Rest, if that enemy uses Stormlight Investiture, they immediately die.

▶ Grieving Dirge (Costs 2 Investiture). Iyatil makes an Intimidation test against the target's Spiritual Defense. On a success, the target becomes Exhausted [-1]. While Iyatil is in her incorporeal form, that action costs only 1 Investiture.

▶ Shadow Walk (Costs 1 Investiture). If Iyatil is standing in a darkened area, she can move to any other darkened place you can see within 60 feet. This does not trigger Reactive Strikes.

While Iyatil is in her incorporeal form, that action does not require spending Investiture.

▶ Regenerate (Costs 1 Investiture). Iyatil recovers 1d6 + 3 Health.

▶▶ Intimidate (Costs 1 Focus). Iyatil makes an opposed Intimidation test against the Discipline of a target she can influence. If Iyatil succeeds, the target loses 1 Focus and is no longer Focused.

OPPORTUNITIES AND COMPLICATIONS

The following options are available when an enemy gains an Opportunity or Complication during a scene with Iyatil, the Elsecaller:

Opportunity

An enemy can spend ⚔ to prevent Iyatil, the Elsecaller from using Anti-Stormlight Dagger during her next turn.

Complication

The GM can spend ✨ from an enemy's test to increase the number of charges in Iyatil, the Elsecaller's Anti-Stormlight Dagger by 1.

B.12 Knights Radiant

People who bond with the true spren are granted the powers of surgebending and become Knights Radiant. Their knightly Orders are gathered in the Urithiru and respond to the Bondsmith. The current one, Dalinar Kholin, is doing everything in his power to unite their scattered numbers.

Each of the Orders has its own power, philosophy and traditions. Knights from each of them differ much from each other and not always get along, but they are united in one thing - their service to the humanity.

Windrunners

Sworn to protect those in need, the Windrunners are the most honorable warriors to be found on the battlefield. They are excellent fighters and they often form the most efficient Radiant strike forces.

Lightweavers

Masters of illusion and deception, the Lightweavers make great spies, agents, or assassins. They can be rarely found on the front lines of the conflict, but should they ever be in this situation, they would use their cunning and wits to their advantage.

Tactics

The Knights will attempt to utilize their Radiant abilities to give them an edge in battle. However, they will always make sure to have some spare Investiture to heal their wounds.

FEATURES

Sworn to Protect. The Windrunner's attacks gain an advantage if they target an enemy who damaged their ally during this round of combat.

ACTIONS

► Strike: Shardblade. Attack +8, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 11 (2d10) spirit damage. Hit: 19 (2d10 + 8) spirit damage.

► Lashing Shot (Costs 1 Investiture). Attack +7, range 30 ft., one target. The Windrunner touches a Medium or smaller unattended object and launches it at the target. Graze: 9 (2d8) impact or keen damage. Hit: 16 (2d8 + 7) impact or keen damage.

► Offensive Gravitation (Costs 1 Investiture). The Windrunner makes a Gravitation test against the Physical defense of a target within reach. On a success, the Windrunner moves the target up to 25 feet in any direction, and the target becomes Restrained until the start of the Windrunner's next turn. If the target hits an object or surface, they take 9 (2d8) impact damage. If the target passes within reach of an object that they aren't going to hit, they can make a DC 16 Agility test, grabbing the object and stopping this forced movement on a success.

► Regenerate (Costs 1 Investiture). The Windrunner recovers 6 (1d6 + 3) health. They can use this free action even while Unconscious or otherwise prevented from using actions.

FEATURES

Boss. This creature can take both a fast turn and a slow turn each round. After an enemy finishes a turn, this creature can spend 1 Focus to immediately use an extra ▶ or ▷. Additionally, they can spend 1 Focus on their turn to remove a condition from themselves.

Infiltrator. Shallan can spend 1 Focus to gain an advantage on a Deception, Insight, or Persuasion test.

Reflexive Illusion. At the start of a scene, if Shallan is not Surprised, she can use her Illusory Disguise (no action required).

ACTIONS

▶ Strike: Knife. Attack +10, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 2 (1d4) keen damage. Hit: 12 (1d4 + 10) keen damage, and if Shallan had at least one advantage on the attack, it deals an extra 5 (2d4) keen damage.

▶ Strike: Shardblade. Attack +10, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 11 (2d10) spirit damage. Hit: 21 (2d10 + 10) spirit damage.

▶ Illusory Disguise (Costs 1 Investiture). Shallan creates an illusion to disguise herself as another character. While disguised, Shallan has an advantage on attack tests against enemies unaware of their ruse. This disguise continues until they end it as ▶ or use this action to change it.

▶▶ Cunning Tongue. Shallan weaves manipulative words around an enemy they can influence, making a Deception or Persuasion test opposed by the target's Insight. Shallan gains an advantage on this test if they know one or more of the target's goals, their purpose, or their obstacle. If Shallan succeeds, the target loses 1d4 Focus.

▶ Spiritual Illumination (Costs 2 Investiture). Shallan or her ally becomes Determined and Focused.

▶ Painful Truth (Costs 2 Investiture). Shallan tests Illumination vs. Spiritual of a target. On success, they are Slowed and must Move away on their next turn or spend Focus to avoid doing so.

▶ Regenerate (Costs 1 Investiture). Shallan recovers 7 (1d6 + 4) health. They can use this free action even while Unconscious or otherwise prevented from using actions.

Appendix C: Items

C.1 Dustcaster

An ancient fabrial of Chemoarish, the Dustmother. It looks similar to the Soulcasters, though it's more jagged and not as ornamental. It allows its wearer to perform single dustcasting, after which the fabrial turns to dust itself.

Dustcasting

As a ►► you can touch another character or an object. For the next three rounds neither of you can move or take any other actions. After three rounds the target you touched and the item itself turn to dust and are annihilated.

At the end of each of those three rounds, make a DC 10 Division check or DC 20 Discipline check. Each failure causes you to take damage as parts of yourself become dustcasted as well. If you drop to 0 Health, you are also annihilated and you cannot be healed, though it doesn't stop the dustcasting process.

1+ Failures

The PC loses the tips of their fingers on the dustcasting hand. They take 1d6 spirit damage.

2+ Failures

Whole dustcasting palm is gone. The PC takes additional 1d8 spirit damage.

3 Failures

Entire arm of the PC is turned to dust. Its owner takes additional 1d10 spirit damage.

C.2 Black Scallop

An ancient fabrial of Dai-Gonarthis, the Black Fisher. It looks like a black scallop shell with purple markings. Once per game, the shell can be forced open.

Opening the Shell

As a ► you can open the fabrial. That will open a small perpendicularity lasting until the end of the next round. Any character stepping inside can travel to any other Realm (e.g. to the Physical Realm from the Cognitive Realm).

Once the fabrial is opened, it loses its properties and cannot be used again.

C.3 Azure's Blade

This sword is one of a kind. It's a masterpiece equaling a Shardblade, though it's shorter and cannot be dismissed. It is owned by Highmarshal Azure and there is small chance she will ever choose to part with it.

Due to its small size, either a Shardblade expertise or a Side Sword expertise can be used for wielding this weapon.

Characters killed with this blade wither, their skin turning ashen gray.

Type: Shardblade / Side Sword

Skill: Heavy or Light Weaponry

Damage: 2d12 spirit

Range: Melee

Expertise: loses Dangerous trait

Traits and Rules: Dangerous, Deadly, Unique: Spiritual Injury, Bane of the Weak

Bane of the Weak

When an adversary with a Minion trait is hit with this weapon, the blade kills them immediately.

C.4 Foreign Coin

A strange metal disc covered with sharp symbols. It looks like a flat necklace without a chain. It can be used as a proof of allegiance or a currency paid for favors and equipment from those who respect it.

C.5 Strange Cube

Hollow metal tube closed from all sides. The spren inside will carry your voice to any other character who owns a similar item.

C.6 Spiky Earring

A long, spiky earring, looking like a nail or a needle. The box it comes with is laid with some wet, red cloth.

As long a character is wearing the earring piercing their skin, they receive a bonuses based on the material, the earring is made of:

- Iron: Enhanced [Str +1], Enhanced [Spd +1], Physical Defense +2
- Copper: Enhanced [Int +1], Enhanced [Wil +1], Cognitive Defense +2
- Zinc: Enhanced [Pre +1], Enhanced [Awa +1], Spiritual Defense + 2

C.7 Training Seal

When the Seal is imprinted on a character's skin, the character receive an expertise set based on the history written in the Seal, e.g.:

- Martial Training:
Expertise on all weapon and armor types
- Traveler's Voyages:
Expertise on all cultures of the world
- Assassin's Training:
Expertise on poisons, subterfuge and anatomy

C.8 Vial of Sand

A small glass vial of a black sand. The sand turns white when in the presence of a character with Investiture.

C.9 Anti-Stormlight Dagger

Type: Knife

Skill: Light Weaponry

Damage: 1d4 keen

Range: Melee

Expertise: gains Offhand, Thrown (20/60)

Traits and Rules: Discreet, Shardplate Piercer, Anti-Stormlight Weapon

Shardplate Piercer

This weapon ignores Deflect value of all armors with Shardplate type.

Anti-Stormlight Weapon

This weapon contains 1 charge.

When you hit an enemy with this weapon you may spend its charge to infuse the enemy with Anti-Stormlight. Until that enemy finishes a Long Rest, if they spend Stormlight Investiture for any of their abilities, they immediately die.

Appendix D: Death Rattles

In most cases, when a character dies, there is no need to invoke Death Rattles as their final words. However, if you wish to indicate a close proximity of Moelach and you don't feel particularly creative at the moment, you can choose something from the pool below - either as a quote or an inspiration.

D.1 Foreshadowing Death Rattles

This pool refers to various events from the story. Make sure to always refer a future chapter, never the one that was completed by the players.

- Screams of pain, broken bones, blood flowing in rivers. Finally, the suffering ended!
(refers to Chapter 3 - Enemy Reborn)
- So grand! So majestic! Oh, Almighty... now it rains with ash and dust...
(refers to Chapter 4 - Enemy Unmade to Dust)
- Come! Sing! Dance with me! Let us relish in the world ending!
(refers to Chapter 5 - Revel of Fools)
- Sea of darkness, sky of void. How much longer must we run...?
(refers to Chapter 6 - The Realm Beyond)
- One cut to heal. Two to betray. Three to speak with the gods.
(refers to Chapter 7 - Whispers of the Slain)
- I am the nightmare, and we are myriad. Oh mother, how can you love us?
(refers to Chapter 8 - The Dark Tower)
- Crystal broken, armor shattered, soul erased. We won! Let us step into death!
(refers to Chapter 9 - Darkness Slain)
- I hate you, child of lies and betrayal. I hate you and your kind! And I will have my revenge!
(refers to Chapter 10 - Whispers from Beyond Realms)

D.2 Random Death Rattles

This pool does not reference anything specific. To avoid easy to deduce spoilers, use them in between the Rattles from D.1. "Foreshadowing Death Rattles".

- Cold! So much cold... Was the sun ever warm?
- No... No! This cannot be! This cannot come! NO!
- They told us we won! They promised peace! We loved them! They lied to us all...
- Who are you? Why are you staring at me? What have you done to me...?
- The song! The rhythm! So beautiful! How could we not hear it...?
- The stick! Burn the stick! Why can't you wish to live?
- Wield them high, mighty and glorious! The sword, the spear, the dining fork!
- Sky aflame, earth to ash, souls to despise!
- No eyes to cry, no voice to lament, the suffering is eternal!

Appendix E: Enlightened Radiants Rules

E.0 General Rules

Enlightened Radiants are still Radiants, and all the rules from the Stormlight Handbook are still in place. However, on top of them, the following applies:

E.0.1 Philosophy Changes

Enlightening touch of Sja-anat expands not only the powers granted by the spren, but also their belief system. Each of the Enlightened Orders has a short description suggesting such changes. Those can be used to better understand the new values of the Order and help players with their roleplay.

E.0.2 Neither Good Nor Evil

Despite being created with Voidlight by one of the Unmade, the spren are not inherently evil, nor are their Radiants. They are not forced onto the path of moral goodness, neither. Enlightened by the touch of Sja-anat, the spren recognize the world is not black and white and it is up to their Radiants to determine what choices will they make.

E.0.3 Enlightened Talents

On top of standard talents available to each Radiant Path, Enlightened spren grant access to 5 additional talents from the Enlightened talent tree. Those are unique for each of the Orders. They follow the same rules as other talents.

E.0.4 Drawbacks and Complications

No great power comes without a cost. Each of the Enlightened Orders has listed some negative effects or events that can occur as a consequence of meddling with too much of Odium's powers. Some of them affect the scenes in a clearly defined rules, while others are less rigid. They can be an inspiration of complications to be used in a case of rolled , but in the end it is up to GM how often they will affect the characters.

E.0.5 Unmade Influence

Each of the nine Enlightened Radiant Orders is strangely connected to one of the Unmade. Perhaps it was only a pinch of inspiration that Sja-anat took when creating her children, perhaps the connection is rooted more deeply in the laws governing the powers of Voidlight...

Whenever an Enlightened Radiant shares a scene with the Unmade (or something deeply connected with one) related to their Order, they are rewarded with expedited progress of their powers - they can immediately develop one of their talents from Enlightened talent tree. If there are no more talents left in that tree, they can develop another Radiant talent instead. In total, that can take effect up to 3 times in the entire game.

It is up to the GM to determine how many talents award to the player at once - while 1 would be a suggested number, the GM may decide that the Unmade will not make an appearance in the future story, making this last scene with them even more impactful.

Order	The Unmade
Windrunners	Nergaoul, the Thrill
Skybreakers	Yelig-nar, the Blightwind
Dustbringers	Chemoarish, the Dustmother
Edgedancers	Re-Shephir, the Midnight Mother
Truthwatchers	Moelach
Lightweavers	Sja-anat, the Taker of Secrets
Elsecallers	Dai-Gonarthis, the Black Fisher
Willshapers	Ashertmarn, the Heart of the Revel
Stonewards	Ba-Ado-Mishram

E.0.6 Speak the Words

With changed philosophy, the Oaths of the Knights Radiant are also different. This ruleset do not impose any specific Words - those are for you to find!

E.1 Enlightened Windrunner

*I will protect.
I will eliminate threat.*

E.1.1 Philosophy Changes

Enlightened Windrunners recognize that focusing on defense and protection is doomed to failure - sooner or later they are bound to make a mistake and someone will pay an ultimate price for that. Instead, they focus on quick and efficient threat elimination to ensure safer world for everyone.

At their best they are formidable warriors who eagerly deal with the biggest dangers on the battlefield.

At their worst, they turn violent, hostile to everyone and unable to stop themselves from bloodshed.

E.1.2 Enlightened Honorspren

In the Physical Realm, the Enlightened honorspren manifests like a small man made from an orange light, leaving red glow behind as they move.

In the Cognitive Realm, they keep that appearance, though they grow to a size of a grown man. Their eyes look like pools of blood dripping streams of scarlet tears on their cheeks.

E.1.3 Drawbacks and Complications

Enlightened Windrunners tend to lose themselves in the heat of battle. If they seem to avoid fighting during a battle, the GM may request a Discipline check (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failed check, the Windrunner cannot move away from their enemies and they must make a Strike action this turn (even if that would mean striking an ally).

E.1.4 Enlightened Talents

Keep the Momentum! (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened honorspren

Activation: ⤴

Don't stop! Don't think! Fight! Keep the momentum!

After you reduce a character to 0 Health, you may spend 1 Focus to move up to your Speed towards another hostile character.

Lash Out

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal; Keep the Momentum! key talent

Activation: ⤴

Are you threatening me?!?

Spend 1 Focus after the you are attacked by an enemy within 5 feet of you. You can attack that enemy.

Berseker Rage

Prerequisite: Lash Out talent

Activation: ▶

I WILL KILL YOU ALL!!!

Spend 2 Focus. Your next Strike targets each character within 5 feet of you and deals an extra 3 (1d6) damage on a hit.

Reckless Frenzy

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal; Keep the Momentum! key talent

Activation: ▶

Just! Die! Already!

Your next attack gains an advantage. Until your next turn, attacks against you gain an advantage.

See Red

Prerequisite: Reckless Frenzy talent

Activation: ★

My wounds will not stop your death!

As long as you are below 50% Health, you gain +1 bonus to attack and damage rolls. This effect increases to +3 when you have 0 Health remaining.

You may spend 1 Investiture any number of times to prevent falling Unconscious as a result of having 0 Health, or to ignore a condition caused by an injury. That lasts until the end of the round; at beginning of the next round you may spend more Investiture to prolong this effect.

You cannot use this to prevent death.

Enlightened Windrunner

I will eliminate threat.

↩ Keep the Momentum! (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened honorspren

After you reduce a character to 0 Health, you may spend 1 Focus to move towards another hostile character.

ENLIGHTENED

↩ Lash Out

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Spend 1 Focus to attack an enemy who just attacked you.

▷ Reckless Frenzy

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Your next attack gains an advantage. Until your next turn, attacks against you gain an advantage.

▷ Berseker Rage

For 2 Focus, our next Strike targets each character within 5 feet of you and deals an extra 1d6 damage on a hit.

★ See Red

Gain +1 to your attack and damage rolls when you are below 50% of Health, +3 if you are at 0 Health. Spend Investiture to ignore injuries and falling Unconscious due to having 0 Health.

E.2 Enlightened Skybreaker

~~I will seek justice.~~
I will seek vengeance.

E.2.1 Philosophy changes

Skybreakers influenced by Sja-anat recognize that all laws and legal systems exist to fulfill human desire for revenge - they may call it just and fair, but it's only to make them feel better while they aim to hurt others just like they were hurt. Those Skybreakers discard complex and inefficient legal procedures and instead focus on the core of the issue - avenging.

At their best, those Skybreakers are just and righteous warriors fighting in a name of weak and hurt.

At their worst they are blinded with their desire to punish everyone around them, without thinking about the consequences.

E.2.2 Enlightened Highspren

In the Physical Realm, Enlightened highspren manifest as small cavities filled with amethyst, looking like the inside of a purple geode.

In the Cognitive Realm, the geode-like cavity takes a shape of a man. Their silhouette's looks like a concave cluster of amethysts no matter at what angle you look at them.

E.2.3 Drawbacks and Complication

Consumed by their desire for revenge, the Skybreakers often deal massive collateral damage they might not be aware of. When they are using their Division or Enlightened talents, the DM may make them a Discipline check (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failure, they lose control over their abilities, dealing damage to their allies or NPCs on top of the enemy they were aiming for.

E.2.4 Enlightened Talents

Omen of Retribution (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened highspren

Activation: ►

Your presence feels like an impending punishment.

Spend 1 Focus and choose a number of characters equal to your tier. Make an Intimidation test. Each of those characters with a Cognitive Defense smaller than the result of your test is now afraid of your retribution - each time they make an attack against you, they must spend 1 Focus or the attack is made with disadvantage.

Storm Leap

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal, Omen of Retribution key talent

Activation: ►

You fall from the skies, as the lightning made flesh.

Spend 1 Investiture to jump up to 60 feet. If you land within 5 feet of an enemy, the you can use the Gain Advantage action as ►.

Lightning Shield

Prerequisite: Storm Leap talent

Activation: ►

Lightning arcs envelop you, shielding from the enemies.

After you use the Move action, you become electrically charged until the start of your next turn. While charged, you're immune to energy damage, and whenever the you are hit with an attack by an enemy within 5 feet of you, the attacker takes 1d4 energy damage. The size of the damage die increases with your ranks in Division.

Shocking Grasp

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal, Omen of Retribution key talent

Activation: ►

Your hands are sparkling with small electrical discharges.

Spend 1 Investiture and make a Division skill check against a Spiritual Defense of an enemy you can touch. On a success, the enemy becomes Stunned. On a failure they cannot use ⤴ until your next turn.

Bolt of Lightning

Prerequisite: Shocking Grasp talent

Activation: ►►

The lightning dances at the tips of your fingers, waiting to have pointed purpose.

Spend 1 Investiture to make a Division attack against a Physical Defense of a target within 60 feet. That attack gains Disadvantage unless you spend 1 Focus to ignore it. The attack deals 2d4 energy damage; the size of the damage dice increases with your ranks in Division. (As usual, if you hit, add your Division modifier. On miss, you can graze for 1 Focus.)

Enlightened Skybreaker

I will seek vengeance.

► Omen of Retribution (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened highspren

Spend 1 Focus to make an Intimidation test against your enemies. Intimidated enemies gain disadvantage on attacks against you, unless they spend 1 Focus.

ENLIGHTENED

► Storm Leap

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Spend 1 Investiture to jump up to 60 feet. If you land within 5 feet of an enemy, the you can use the Gain Advantage action as ►.

► Shocking Grasp

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Spend 1 Investiture and make a Division attack. On a success, the enemy becomes Stunned. On a failure they cannot use ↺ until your next turn.

► Lightning Shield

After you use the Move action, you become immune to energy damage, and whenever the you are hit with an attack by an enemy within 5 feet of you, they take 1d4 energy damage.

► Bolt of Lightning

Spend 1 Investiture to make a Division attack against a Physical Defense of a target within 60 feet. That attack gains Disadvantage unless you spend 1 Focus to ignore it. The attack deals 2d4 energy damage.

E.3 Enlightened Dustbringer

*I will seek self-mastery.
I will be the master.*

E.3.1 Philosophy Changes

Dustbringers enlightened by Sja-anat believe that no self-growth or self-mastery can be done without glorious ambition shaping the whole process. They often focus on grand projects and they never hesitate to use others to achieve it.

At their best they are grand leaders, aiming for legendary deeds that will benefit entire kingdoms of populace.

At their worst they become selfish and ruthless tyrants, abusing others to achieve their own vain desires.

E.3.2 Enlightened Ashspren

In the Physical Realm, Enlightened ashspren manifest as blood veins, scarlet and branching, leaving bloody smears behind when they move.

In the Cognitive Realm their gray bodies rot and decay, showing bloodied flesh and sometimes even their bones. Their gums always bleed, painting their sharp teeth red and sometimes dripping smears of blood from their mouths.

E.3.3 Drawbacks and Complications

While focusing on mastering the others, Enlightened Dustbringers sometimes fail to properly control their own powers.

The GM may ask a Dustbringer for a Discipline check (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failure an item they hold slips or even turns to dust.

E.3.4 Enlightened Talents

Decaying Touch (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened ashspren

Activation: ★

Under your touch, the wounds refuse to heal.

Before a character within your reach recovers Health or Focus, you can spend 1 Focus or 1 Investiture to prevent them from doing so. The character does not regain that Health or Focus, but any actions, Investiture, or other resources they spent still remain spent.

Drain Light

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal, Decaying Touch key talent

Activation: ►►

Dying flesh cannot hold the Light.

A character you touch loses 1d4 Investiture. You regain the same amount of Investiture up to your maximum value. Characters in Shardplates cannot be targeted.

Parasitic Relation

Prerequisite: Drain Light talent

Activation: ∞

Weakness of your enemies is your strength.

Your attacks heal you for half the damage dealt.

Chop To Pieces

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal, Decaying Touch key talent

Activation: ∞

One cannot heal what was chopped off by your hand.

Whenever your attack, skill, or talent reduces enemy's Health or Focus, their maximum of those is also reduced by the same amount until the character's next Long Rest.

Spreading Decay

Prerequisite: Chop To Pieces talent

Activation: ►

The rot and decay slowly spread through the flesh, consuming their victim alive.

Spend 1 Investiture to make a Division attack against a Physical Defense of an enemy you can touch. The attack deals 2d4 vital damage. On a hit, the target becomes Afflicted [1d4 vital] for 2 rounds. Once per turn you can extend duration of the Afflicted condition for 1 round as a ► for 1 Investiture.

The size of this attack's and affliction's damage dice increases with your ranks in Division; at 2 ranks, use d6s (instead of d4s), and so on. As usual, on a hit, add your Division modifier to damage, and on a miss, you can spend 1 Focus to graze with the attack.

Enlightened Dustbringer

I will be the master.

★ Decaying Touch (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened ashspren

Before a character within your reach recovers Health or Focus, you can spend 1 Focus or 1 Investiture to prevent them from doing so.

ENLIGHTENED

▶▶ Drain Light

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

A character you touch loses 1d4 Investiture. You regain the same amount of Investiture up to your maximum value.

∞ Parasitic Relation

Your attacks heal you for half the damage dealt.

∞ Chop To Pieces

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Whenever you reduce enemy's Health or Focus, their maximum of those is also reduced by the same amount until the character's next Long Rest.

▶ Spreading Decay

Spend 1 Investiture to make a Division attack against an enemy you can touch. The attack deals 2d4 vital damage. On a hit, they become Afflicted [1d4 vital] for 2 rounds; longer if you spend more Investiture.

E.4 Enlightened Edgedancer

~~I will remember.~~
I will never forget, never forgive.

E.4.1 Philosophy Changes

Enlightened Edgedancers realize that mere compassion and memory of the forgotten does not fix their situation in the long run. Instead, they focus on the source of their misfortune, never yielding until all wrongs are made right and ensured to never happen again.

At their best, those Edgedancers are focus-driven Radiants, determined to improve the lives of common people.

At their worst, they can become petty, unforgiving individuals with little compassion and understanding in their hearts.

E.4.2 Enlightened Cultivationspren

In the Physical Realm, Enlightened cultivationspren reassemble a skull overgrown with entangled red vines tailing behind it and dripping blood-like sap.

In the Cognitive Realm, those vines form a full human-like body. The spren wear rags in here, soaked with red sap still dripping from the vines.

E.4.3 Drawbacks and Complications

Progression and Enlightened Edgedancer's talents cause a terrible pain. The GM can request a Discipline check (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken by the Edgedancer) from the person being affected by those talents. On a failure, they lose 1 Focus.

Enlightened Edgedancers can be tempted to hurt, maim or even kill other creatures only to experiment with their abilities. When the GM tempts an Edgedancer like that, they must pass a Discipline check (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken) or spend a Focus point. If they don't, they must take a hostile action against that creature.

E.4.4 Enlightened Talents

Sprouting Vines (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened cultivationspren

Activation: ►

Under your touch, red vines sprout from the ground.
Spend 1 Investiture to sprout red rockbud vines which can sustain one person for a day. If another creature consumes the plants, you can sense its location for a number of days equal to your ranks in Progression.

Speak with Dead

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal; Sprouting Vines talent

Activation: ►

Through the vines the dead can speak with you.

Spend 1 Investiture to sprout red vines around a dead creature. You Connect to it, allowing you to speak with it as though it was an NPC. You may talk with it even if the creature did not know your language or was incapable of speaking at all.

The effect lasts for a number of rounds equal to your number of ranks in Progression. During each of those rounds you may ask the corpse one question. The corpse will answer to the best of its knowledge unless it recognizes you as their killer.

Enhancing Vines

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal; Sprouting Vines talent

Activation: ►►

The vines pierce their skin and enhance their body.

Choose a creature or a corpse. You can spend Investiture to accelerate the growth of vines, which will pierce their skin and grow over their body, granting them bonus Strength. Both Investiture cost and the amount of bonus Strength granted are proportional to the size of the creature (1 for Small creatures, 2 for Medium and so on).

The bonus affects all Strength derivatives (Physical Defense, Health and skills) and lasts for a number of days equal to your ranks in Progression.

If that creature was previously under the effect of Sprouting Vines talent, this action costs 1 less Investiture.

Puppeteering Vines

Prerequisite: Enhancing Vines talent

Activation: ►►

Your red vines can overgrow and subdue other creatures
Touch a creature and spend Investiture to make a Progression check against its Spiritual Defense. If you succeed, you gain control over the creature as your red vines entangle its body and break its spirit.

The amount of Investiture required to make a check is proportional to the size of the creature (1 for Small creatures, 2 for Medium and so on).

After a number of rounds equal to your ranks in Progression, repeat the Progression check. The creature breaks free if the check fails.

Reanimating Vines

Prerequisite: Enhancing Vines talent

Activation: ▶▶

Your red vines grow stronger and more capable to puppeteer bodies.

Spend 1 Investiture and choose a corpse enhanced with Enhancing Vines. You raise its body to fight for you for a number of days equal to your ranks in Progression. A body controlled this way is still granted bonus Strength from Enhancing Vines, but its Intelligence, Willpower and Focus drop to 0.

If you choose to reanimate small remains (like a skull or a small pile of carapace), this ability costs no Investiture, but the corpse rises as Reanimated Remains.

Reanimated Remains

Tier 1 Minion - Small Undead Plant

PHYSICAL				COGNITIVE			SPIRITUAL
Str	Def	Spd	Int	Def	Wil	Awa	Def	Pre
3	14	1	0	10	0	2	12	0

Health: 10 (8–12) Focus: 0 Investiture: 0

Movement: 25 ft.
Senses: 10 ft. (touch)
Physical Skills: Stealth +3
Spiritual Skills: Survival +4
Languages: (none)

FEATURES

Undead. This creature is immune to vital damage.

Plant. This creature suffers double energy damage from fire sources.

Rugged Camouflage. An undetected Reanimated Remains gain an advantage on attack tests. While the creature is motionless, they're almost indistinguishable from a normal plant, requiring a successful DC 14 Survival test to identify them. This test gains a disadvantage when the creature is in cover or in an area where the other character's primary sense is obscured.

Minion. This creature's attacks can't critically hit, and they're immediately defeated when they suffer an injury

ACTIONS

▶ Strike: Slam. Attack +3, reach 5 ft., one target. Hit: 5 (1d4 + 3) keen damage.

▶▶ Take Root. The creature's Movement drops to 0 and it cannot be moved by enemy actions for as long the creature chooses to be rooted. At the end of each round the creature is rooted in place, it recovers 1d4 Health.

Enlightened Edgedancer

I will never forget, never forgive.

► Sprouting Vines (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened cultivation-spren

Spend 1 Investiture to sprout red rockbud vines which can sustain one person for a day. If a creature consumes the plants, you can sense its location.

ENLIGHTENED

► Speak with Dead

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Spend 1 Investiture to sprout red vines around a dead creature. You can speak with it as though it was an NPC.

► Enhancing Vines

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Choose a creature or a corpse. You can spend Investiture to grant them bonus Strength.

► Puppeteering Vines

Touch a creature and spend Investiture to make a Progression check against its Spiritual Defense. If you succeed, you gain control over the creature.

► Reanimating Vines

Spend 1 Investiture and choose a corpse enhanced with Enhancing Vines. You raise its body to fight for you.

E.5 Enlightened Truthwatcher

*I will seek truth.
I will reveal bleak sooth.*

E.5.1 Philosophy Changes

Past is long gone and irrelevant - only the future matters. Enlightened Truthwatchers are so obsessed with uncovering the upcoming fate they often forget about the presence.

At their best they are skilled advisors, always ready for anything. Or rather - for the one thing that is bound to happen.

At their worst, they become hopeless doomsayers, spreading despair with their prophecies of inevitable end.

E.5.2 Enlightened Mistspren

In the Physical Realm, Enlightened mistspren manifest as red crystalline structures that drip red light upwards.

In the Cognitive Realm, they look like a red mist shaped into a humanoid form. Instead of faces, their heads are marked with swirling red void.

E.5.3 Drawbacks and Complications

The visions that Enlightened Truthwatchers experience are often too much for a mortal mind to handle. After showing the vision, the GM can request a Discipline check from the Truthwatcher (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failure they lose 1 Focus. If they have no Focus left, they become Stunned for 1 round.

The GM can send them visions without Knight's active attempts to see anything.

E.5.4 Enlightened Talents

Future Sight(Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened mistspren

Activation: ★

Cryptic visions descend upon you, showing you what might happen.

Once before a rest you can ask the GM about a specific event in the future. The GM can show you a vision containing most probable outcome, abstract symbolic images, mere impressions or feelings, or even some false information. It is up to the GM how truthful or specific the vision will be, though they can ask you for Illumination test (to determine how well you can control your powers) or for Deduction test (to see if your character was able decipher the meaning).

Glimpse the Future

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal; Future Sightkey talent

Activation: ★

Your visions allow you to determine what is not supposed to happen.

Once per round after you roll the dice for a test, you can spend 1 or more Investiture to reroll that many of the test's dice.

Alter Fortune

Prerequisite: Glimpse the Future talent

Activation: ↻

You see the outcome of the events before they could even start.

Each time you finish a long rest, roll a number of d20s equal to 1 + your tier, and record each result.

When an enemy or willing ally you can sense makes a test, you can use a reaction to replace the test's d20 roll with one of your recorded numbers. You can replace that number after you see their die roll and after they apply any advantages, but you must do so before the effects of the test are resolved.

Each recorded number can be used only once. When new set of numbers is rolled, all previous ones are lost.

Search the Past

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal; Future Sightkey talent

Activation: ★

Sometimes to uncover the future one must unravel the past long forgotten.

Once before a long rest you can choose a past event you know of and make a Lore skill check (DC set by the GM based on how long ago the event happened and on how familiar you are with it).

If you succeed, you are shown the vision of the event as though you were there. You are only the observer and you cannot affect the events of the vision.

Vision Void

Prerequisite: Glimpse the Future talent or Search the Past talent

Activation: ∞

Your powers shield you from the enemy's sight.

You and each ally within your spren bond range are immune to any enemy effect that would reroll or replace the result of any die rolled by you or those allies.

Additionally, if you're present in or strongly influencing an event, no enemy can ever see visions of that event.

Enlightened Truthwatcher

I will reveal bleak sooth.

★ Future Sight (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened mistspren

Ask the GM for a vision of the future. If the vision requires interpretation, test Deduction or Illumination. The vision might be unreliable.

ENLIGHTENED

★ Glimpse the Future

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Once per round after you roll the dice for a test, you can spend 1 or more Investiture to reroll that many of the test's dice.

★ Search the Past

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Choose a past event and make a Lore skill check. If you succeed, you are shown the vision of the event.

↶ Alter Fortune

Preroll d20s equal to 1 + your tier. You can replace enemy and ally d20 rolls with those values.

∞ Vision Void

Enemies can't change the dice results of you and your allies. Enemies can't see visions of events influenced by you.

E.6 Enlightened Lightweaver

*I will speak my truth.
I will uncover their lies.*

E.6.1 Philosophy Changes

After the Enlightenment, the cryptic's love for secrets is only magnified. They relish in uncovering the lies and decrypting hidden information, often discovering things seemingly impossible to gather.

At their best, Lightweavers bonding those spren make an excellent spies and agents with amazing attention to details.

At their worst, they pursue personal secrets without any regard to other peoples' privacy, often damaging reputation and spreading lies, gossip and misinformation in the process.

E.6.2 Enlightened Cryptic

In the Physical Realm Enlightened cryptics manifest as bone-white scribbles rotating around the center.

In the Cognitive Realm the rotating scribbles form the head of the cryptic. The rest of the body looks like of robes made of old parchment, with tears and bends in many places.

E.6.3 Drawbacks and Complications

The cryptics love discovering secrets so much, they will often do it without Radiant's instructions. They will always share their findings, but due to errors or spren's spite they can sometimes be misleading or false. On top of that, they enjoy dark secrets the most, so the character can be overwhelmed with gloomy reality uncovered by their spren.

The GM can make the Radiant roll for a Discipline check (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On the failure, the character cannot contain newly learned secrets and must confront their owner about them, spreading possibly false information and damaging their reputation.

E.6.4 Enlightened Talents

Interpret Body Language (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond and Enlightened cryptic

Activation: ∞

You can read people like an open book.

You gain an advantage on Insight tests made to interpret the desires or intentions of others.

Uncover Secrets

Prerequisite: Interpret Body Language key talent

Activation: ►

With a little help from your spren you can find out much more than the person is willing to share.

Spend 1 Focus to learn one secret of another person.

Decrypt Thoughts

Prerequisite: Uncover Secrets talent

Activation: ►

If you try hard enough, you can even read people's thoughts out of their faces.

Spend 1 Investiture and choose a character. You can determine what exactly that character is thinking about in this very moment. If used in combat, that character's actions against you gain disadvantage. Lasts for a number of rounds equal to your tier.

Lure with Secrets

Prerequisite: Uncover Secrets talent

Activation: ►

You can always determine the right secrets to manipulate others.

Spend 1 Investiture to make an Illumination test against the target's Cognitive Defense. On a success, you learn what information or secret is highly coveted by the character. You may spend an additional 1 Investiture to determine how to obtain that secret.

If used in a Conversation, you can mention your findings to make the target lose 2 Focus.

Suggestion

Prerequisite: Lure with Secrets or Decrypt Thoughts talent

Activation: ►►

When you can read the people this well, manipulating them is just a child's play.

Spend 1 Investiture and make a Deception or Persuasion test against the Spiritual Defense of an enemy you can influence. You gain an advantage on that roll if you know target's secrets, goals or intentions that are relevant. If you succeed, you can suggest a reasonable action - they will be forced to enact it.

Enlightened Lightweaver

I will uncover their lies.

∞ Interpret Body Language (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened cryptic

You gain an advantage on Insight tests made to interpret the desires or intentions of others.

ENLIGHTENED

► Uncover Secrets

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Spend 1 Focus to learn one secret of another person.

► Lure with Secrets

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Spend 1 Investiture to make an Illumination test to learn what information or secret is highly coveted by the character.

► Decrypt Thoughts

Spend 1 Investiture to determine what exactly a character is thinking.

► Suggestion

Spend 1 Investiture and make a Deception or Persuasion test to suggest a reasonable action - the target will be forced to enact it.

E.7 Enlightened Elsecaller

*I will reach my potential.
I will reject imperfection.*

E.7.1 Philosophy Changes

Aiming for one's full potential is never enough for Elsecallers influenced by Sja-anat. Instead their goal is absolute perfection. They despise anything imperfect, rejecting it from their lives.

At their best, they reach an excellence in each task they set for themselves.

At their worst, they grow hateful and resentful towards everyone and everything, including themselves. They can never be satisfied by anything and they will punish any imperfection in themselves and others.

E.7.2 Enlightened Inkspren

In the Physical Realm, the Enlightened inkspren manifest as a small iridescent person, capable of changing their size at will.

In the Cognitive Realm they look very similar, though they are always in their full size.

E.7.3 Drawbacks and Complications

Abilities granted by Enlightened talents cause the Elsecaller to be split between Physical and Cognitive Realms. At most of the time they can control it, but the GM may request a Discipline test from them (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failure, they are lost for a few moments in the Shadesmar, unable to assist the rest of the team and exposed to feral spren attacks.

After a few rounds they are always transported back to the Physical Realm.

E.7.4 Enlightened Talents

Perfected Body (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened inkspren

Activation: ★

Your physical body is full of imperfections. Reject it!

At the beginning of each round you can assume a shadowy, incorporeal form by spending 1 Investiture. While you're in this form, all attacks against your Physical Defense gain disadvantage, you can ignore difficult terrain and you can travel through any gaps with a diameter of 6 inches or greater, but you can attack only if you are in a darkened area. You may return to your physical form at the beginning of subsequent rounds.

Grieving Dirge

Prerequisite: First Ideal; Perfected Body key talent

Activation: ►

Perfection terrifies those of a weak mind. Present it to them, and watch them suffer! Punish their weakness!

Spend 2 Investiture to make an Intimidation test against the Spiritual defense of a target you can influence within 30 feet of you. On a success, the target becomes Exhausted [-half of your ranks in Transformation].

If you are in your incorporeal form, this action costs 1 less Investiture.

Steal Light

Prerequisite: First Ideal; Perfected Body key talent

Activation: ►

Darkness is your friend, awaiting your call.

Spend 1 Investiture and choose an area you can see that doesn't exceed your Transformation Surge Size. That area becomes darkened by unnatural, pitch black shadows. The effect lasts until the end of the scene or until you decide to end it.

Shadow Walk

Prerequisite: Steal Light talent

Activation: ►

Embrace the shadows, walk through them, allow them to hide your imperfections.

If you are standing in a darkened area, spend 1 Investiture to move to any other darkened place you can see within 60 feet. Until end of turn you may return to your starting location as ►. This does not trigger Reactive Strikes.

If you are in your incorporeal form, this action does not require spending Investiture.

Drag Through Shadows

Prerequisite: Shadow Walk talent

Activation: ∞

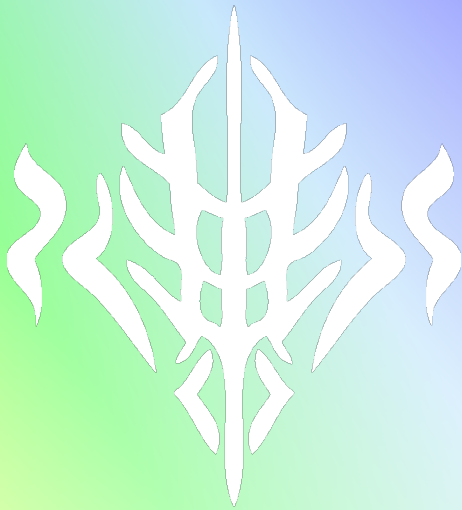

Nobody can run away from the perfection!

When you are using Shadow Walk talent, you can also transport 1 character standing 5 feet from you. If the target is unwilling, you must first succeed on an Agility test against the target's Physical defense.

A transported target appears in an unoccupied space of your choice within 5 feet of you.

Enlightened Elsecaller

I will reject imperfection.

★ Perfected Body (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened inkspren

Spend 1 Investiture to enter shadowy form: attacks against your Physical Defense gain disadvantage, you can travel through small gaps, but you can attack only from shadows.

ENLIGHTENED

► Grieving Dirge

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Spend Investiture to make an Intimidation test to make the target Exhausted [-half of your ranks in Transformation].

► Steal Light

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Spend 1 Investiture to make an area darkened by unnatural, pitch black shadows.

∞ Drag Through Shadows

When you are using Shadow Walk talent, you can also transport 1 character standing 5 feet from you. If the target is unwilling, you must first succeed on an Agility test against the target's Physical defense.

► Shadow Walk

Spend Investiture to move between darkened places within 60 feet. Until end of turn you may return to your starting location as ►. This does not trigger Reactive Strikes.

E.8 Enlightened Willshaper

*I will seek freedom.
I will revel in freedom.*

E.8.1 Philosophy Changes

What is the point of freedom if you don't indulge yourself in the pleasures of free people? Enlightened Willshapers celebrate every day to feel they are truly alive.

At their best they are jovial and joyful, capable of lifting anyone's spirit even in the gloomiest of times.

At their worst they are unreliable addicts wasting their lives and fortunes in an endless indulgence.

E.8.2 Enlightened Lightspren

In the Physical Realm, the Enlightened lightspren manifest as small black balls pulsing with darkness and leaving a smoke trail as they move.

In the Cognitive Realm, their matte metallic skin is covered in rust and patina. Streams of black smoke rise from the rusty tears in the metal.

E.8.3 Drawbacks and Complications

Enlightened Willshapers are slaves to their own desires. The GM can ask a Willshaper for a Discipline check (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failure, the Willshaper loses ► this round as they are indulging themselves in revelry activities (e.g. feasting on food) and they cannot contribute in a conversation or an endeavor scenes this round.

E.8.4 Enlightened Talents

Horneater White (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened Lightspren

Activation: ►►

Wow, that's a strong stuff!

Attacks against you gain a number of disadvantages equal to your tier. Attacks you make gain disadvantage. Each time you make an attack, you may spend 1 Focus to negate this penalty.

Firemoss

Prerequisite: First Ideal; Horneater White key talent

Activation: ►►

You grind the firemoss and inhale its smoke.

Regain up to 6 Focus. Can be used only once per scene.

Call to the Revel

Prerequisite: First Ideal; Horneater White key talent

Activation: ►►

Come! Join us! We have wine!

Make a Persuasion test opposed by a Discipline test of a character you can influence within 90 feet. If you succeed, the target loses 2 Focus, and the first action the target takes on their next turn must be the Move action to approach you by the most direct route. They can't willingly move away from you on that turn.

Hedonistic Impulse

Prerequisite: Call to the Revel talent

Activation: ►

Hey! What do we have here?

Chooses up to two targets you can influence within 60 feet. Those characters must each make a Discipline test (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failure, they lose ►► during their next turn as they indulge themselves in revelry activities (searching for food, feasting, etc).

Eroding Inhibitions

Prerequisite: Call to the Revel or Firemoss talent

Activation: ∞

Come on! Just one more glass...

Your attacks cause the target to lose 1 Focus on hit. At any time you can spend 1 Investiture to cause all characters who have remaining Focus equal to 1 + 1 for each of Enlightened Talents you have (including yourself and your allies) to have disadvantage on Discipline tests until the end of next round.

Enlightened Willshaper

I will revel in freedom.

►► Horneater White (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened lightspren

Attacks against you gain a number of disadvantages equal to your tier. Attacks you make gain disadvantage unless you spend Focus.

ENLIGHTENED

► Call to the Revel

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Make a Persuasion test opposed by a Discipline test of the target to make them lose 2 Focus, and force them to make Move action to approach you.

► Hedonistic Impulse

Chooses up to two targets you can influence within 60 feet. Those characters must each make a Discipline test. On a failure, they lose ►► during their next turn.

► Firemoss

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Regain up to 6 Focus. Can be used only once per scene.

∞ Eroding Inhibitions

Your attacks cause the target to lose 1 Focus on hit. At any time you can spend 1 Investiture to cause characters with remaining Focus to have disadvantage on Discipline tests until the end of next round.

E.9 Enlightened Stoneward

*I will be there when I'm needed.
I will prove myself needed.*

E.9.1 Philosophy Changes

With the enlightening touch of Sja-anat, the Stonewards no longer passively wait for a time of need. Instead they take proactive actions to seek areas for improvements and show their skills.

At best they are always engaged in their communities, constantly seeking ways to improve things, even if everybody already believed them perfect.

At their worst, they are fabricating calamity after crisis with only goal to prove that they are the best person to fix them.

E.9.2 Enlightened Peakspreen

In the Physical Realm, Enlightened peakspreen manifest as a small puddles of crem-like mud. Occasionally, they emerge from the puddle as a small man, fully made of constantly dripping crem.

In the Cognitive Realm, their size is much bigger and they are taller than most of the men. They still look like they were made of crem, with their faces being shapeless creamy mass. They tend to leave stains on everything they touch.

E.9.3 Drawbacks and Complications

Double Trouble, key talent of the Enlightened talent tree tends to generate  more often for the Stonewards, allowing for unfortunate series of events around the Radiant.

Additionally, the GM can request a Discipline check from the Stoneward (DC equal to 5 + 5 for each Enlightened talent taken). On a failure, the character is overcome by the temptation to cause some disaster - release their prisoner, destroy their food supplies, leave the door opened, etc.

E.9.4 Enlightened Talents

Double Trouble (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened peakspreen

Activation: ∞

You seem to be cursed with a bad luck, with strange unlucky accidents happening around you.

Whenever you roll with one or more Plot Dice, add additional Plot Die to the roll. You must use  result if it is rolled on one of them.

Daring Opportunist

Prerequisite: First Ideal; Double Trouble key talent

Activation: ★

With a little daring, you can now push your luck.

Whenever you make a roll, you can spend 1 Investiture to add a Plot Die to it. (That roll is affected by Double Trouble talent.)

Troublemaker

Prerequisite: First Ideal; Double Trouble key talent

Activation: ★

You are always eager to offer an advice, though it's not always a good advice.

Whenever another character is making a roll, you can spend 1 Investiture. If you do, you may add a Plot Die to that roll or give an advantage or disadvantage on their Plot Die.

Not Today!

Prerequisite: Troublemaker talent

Activation:

Your presence can distract even the most focused minds.

After an enemy makes a roll, you can spend 1 Investiture before it takes an effect. If you do, the enemy is forced to repeat the roll and use the newest result.

Infectious Misfortune

Prerequisite: Troublemaker talent

Activation: ∞

Your tendency of bad luck seems to affect more and more people around you.

Double Trouble talent's effects are added to all rolls made by your allies and enemies. Those characters may spend 1 Focus to ignore this effect during their next test.

Enlightened Stoneward

I will prove myself needed.

∞ Double Trouble (Key)

Prerequisite: Bond an Enlightened peakspren

Whenever you roll with one or more Plot Dice, add additional Plot Die to the roll. You must use  result.

ENLIGHTENED

★ Daring Opportunist

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Whenever you make a roll, you can spend 1 Investiture to add a Plot Die to it.

★ Troublemaker

Prerequisite: Speak the First Ideal

Whenever another character is making a roll, you can spend 1 Investiture to add a Plot Die to that roll or give an advantage or disadvantage on their Plot Die.

↶ Not Today!

After an enemy makes a roll, you can spend 1 Investiture before it takes an effect. If you do, the enemy is forced to repeat the roll.

∞ Infectious Misfortune

Double Trouble talent's effects are added to all rolls made by your allies and enemies. Those characters may spend 1 Focus to ignore this effect.

E.10 Acknowledgments

E.10.1 Spren Appearance

Enlightened Mistspren's appearance is described several times in "Stormlight Archive". For the purpose of those rules I used those visuals for them and I didn't attempt to add anything from myself.

Enlightened Criptics are briefly described in "Wind And Truth". I attempted to extrapolate from their Physical Realm description there and I hope my Cognitive Realm ideas fit Brandon Sanderson's vision.

I found Enlightened Inkspren's appearance on coppermind wiki. I did not try to change anything from that version.

All other Enlightened spren described in this book cannot be considered cannon. While creating them I tried to make them fit the others with their nightmarish creepiness and similarities to their non-Enlightened cousins, but they are not an official lore. You can modify those if my ideas don't fit the story you want to tell.

E.10.2 Abilities

As you know, Stormlight Handbook provides an Enlightened Truthwatcher talent tree. This book presents a slightly modified alternative to the original, but overall the players should be familiar with them and I cannot take a credit for that part.

I also noticed that those talents align with one of the Singer's Forms of Power. Using this formula, I designed other talent trees presented here based on other Odium minions. You might notice that some of the talents are heavily inspired with those stat blocks.

For a few Orders I did not find applicable abilities or the abilities I found were not appealing enough for me. In those cases I attempted to provide my own proposals for them. I hope you will enjoy those.

E.10.3 Unmade Relation

While reading "Stormlight Archive" books, I had a strong impression that Enlightened Truthwatchers' abilities look oddly similar to what one of the Unmade - Moelach - can do. I always wondered if that's just a coincidence or something more...

When I considered other Unmade and their traits, I was able to identify more similarities with other Radiant Orders. For the purposes of my fan-made rules I decided to assume this is intentional and represents deeper connection to Odium and his powers.

However, this idea is never officially confirmed and cannot be considered a canonical piece of lore.

E.10.4 Drawbacks and Complications

Enlightened Truthwatcher talents presented in Stormlight Handbook seem to be working as an optional set of abilities a Radiant can opt to have. I honestly am not a great fan of that approach, for me it seems lacking and unbalanced - from the game mechanics point of view there is no downside of choosing the Enlightened variant, making a standard option always an inferior, and therefore - wrong, choice.

I decided to address that issue with Drawbacks and Complications section. Access to additional abilities always comes at a cost. It can be unpredictable and depended on the GM's approach, but the players need to be aware of the risk.

I hope this rule will make standard Radiant Orders still a valid choice for players who prefer safer builds, while allowing an Enlightened alternative to provide more abilities.

E.10.5 Ties to Scarlet Sprouter

Those who are familiar with "The Lost Expedition of Chi-Ltik" may notice some similarities between the Red Vines presented there and an Enlightened Edgedancer talent tree from this book.

I will be honest - I like how this set of abilities enriches available trope range by adding Necromancy to the world of Roshar. I designed Scarlet Sprouter with Sja-anat's influence in mind and though Chi-Ltik does not explore its origins in detail, I believe such spren would be a good counterpart for the usual cultivation-spren.

E.10.6 Suggested Adventure

Those homebrew rules for Enlightened Radiant Knights can be used in any campaign you wish. However, if you are looking for some suggestions, they were designed for "Children of the Unmade" homebrew adventure that featured Sja-anat and her corrupted children.

If you wish to play this adventure with your group, you can find it on my github:

https://github.com/pether-pg/CosmereRPG_Books_byPether/releases

E.10.7 Special Thanks

To Discord user Sharei, for long and inspiring discussions about potential updates to the Enlightened Radiants' talents.

To Discord user Hannah (teawizardry), for help with L^AT_EX code for talent trees.

E.11 Document History

This book might be expanded and improved based on players' feedback. The table below shows what was changed. You can compare it with the version you own to quickly spot the differences.

Date	Author	What is new?
2026.07.03	Pether.pg	Reworked Enlightened Windrunner's Keep the Momentum! talent. Instead of preventing from being moved or knocked Prone, it now allows for an additional movement after killing an enemy. Renamed Enlightened Windrunner's Invested Enhancement to See Red. Reworked the talent to better convey the idea behind it. Renamed Enlightened Windrunner's Martial Experience to Reckless Frenzy. Reworked the talent to encourage more aggressive playstyle. Enlightened Skybreaker's talents now properly deal damage based on the number of ranks in Division. Removed Enlightened Skybreaker's Summon Storm talent. Added Omen of Retribution talent and rearranged requirements. Enlightened Edgedancer's talents now properly refer to the number of ranks in Progression. Merged Enlightened Edgedancer's Reanimate Remains and Reanimating Vines talents. Added Speak with Dead talent and rearranged requirements. Removed Influential Tip talent from the Enlightened Lightweaver talent tree. Added Lure with Secrets talent instead and rearranged talents' requirements. Enlightened Elsecaller's Perfected Body now triggers at beginning of each round instead of the end. Enlightened Elsecaller's Grieving Dirge now scales with a number of ranks in Transformation. Merged Long Shadow talent into Shadow Walk in the Enlightened Elsecaller talent tree. Added Steal Light talent and rearranged talents' requirements. Replaced Enlightened Willshaper's Freedom of Movement talent with Horneater White to better convey the order's theme. Rearranged talent requirements. Enlightened Willshaper's Firemoss now can be used only once per scene. Reworked Enlightened Stoneward's Troublemaker talent, allowing to add Plot Die to other character's rolls. Allowed to ignore Enlightened Stoneward's Infectious Misfortune effect for the cost of 1 Focus. Added graphical representation of talent trees. Added "Special Thanks" section to E.10. "Acknowledgments". Fixed typos.
2025.12.22	Pether.pg	Initial version

Appendix F: Example Character Sheets

If you don't want to spend time on your own character's creation, here you can find some example character sheets prepared for this adventure. You can grab the one you like and just start playing. If you feel like it, you can modify your character's appearance, motivation or other details, but overall the sheets are ready to play.

In here you can find:

- Rish, Ardent
(Human Veden, Envoy - Faithful)
- Adelar, Wall Guard
(Human Alethi, Warrior - Soldier)
- Katleio, Criminal
(Human Herdzian, Hunter - Assassin)
- Ravir, Lighteye Noble
(Human Alethi, Leader - Champion)
- Elhamir, Retired Soldier
(Human Alethi, Scholar - Strategist)
- Nirith, Listener Spy
(Listener, Agent)

If none of those align to your vision of the character you want to play, make your own one! It's super easy and fun! Grab one empty character sheet, follow instructions from Stormlight Handbook or from other sources you prefer and you will have your own hero in no time!

You can find empty character sheet template in here:

Epilogue - Enlightened Cryptic

Appendix G: Acknowledgments

I poured my heart into this project, but I couldn't make it by myself alone. Here is quick thank you for all of those, who helped me do it, as well as a few other acknowledgments.

G.1 Artists involved

I cannot express my gratitude enough to all talented artists whose masterpieces show us the world of Roshar and its wonders. In particular I want to thank those, who created art for this book:

- Aki
Cover art depicting Sja-anat, the Taker of Secrets.

If you are an artist and this book inspired you to create some epic illustration, please reach out! It would be great if I could include your art in here!

G.2 Other Support

I also wanted to thank all other people who helped me create this book:

- Discord user Sharei
for long and inspiring discussions about potential updates to the Enlightened Radiants' talents.
- Discord user Hannah (teawizardry)
for help with LaTeX code for talent trees.

G.3 PDF Building

This document was written and built in TeXstudio with MiKTeX 24.1.
