Introduction

0.1 About This Book

0.1.1 About me

Hello! I'm glad to meet you :)

You can call me Pether. I am a fantasy nerd who has played RPGs since childhood. Recently I've dived even deeper into this hobby as I am GMing a campaign for my friends for the past two years. I happily enjoyed various homebrew systems, Dungeons and Dragons, Warhammer RPG, Call of Cthulhu, and now - Cosmere® RPG.

All my content and RPG resources are free for everybody. I would be happy to play with you, but since I can't, I will gladly share my ideas and notes, perhaps you will find them helpful. You are invited to modify my work to suit your own needs and playstyles.

I hope you will enjoy this adventure. If you would like to virtually hang out or to fuel my various future projects, you can always buy me a coffee using the link below ;)

You can find all of my Cosmere® RPG homebrew content below:

0.1.2 Who is it for?

While everyone is invited to have fun with this adventure, players who enjoy combat encounter the most may be disappointed by this story. By design, this module focuses on social encounters and it may contain not enough enemies to defeat with your sword.

0.1.3 Is it canon?

No. This is a fan-made campaign and the story presented in here cannot be considered canon. While I did my best to align with official lore of the world, some of the events here might contradict Brandon Sanderson's vision.

0.1.4 How many spoilers?

This book may contain a few minor "Edgedancer" spoilers. However, those are not essential for the plot of the adventure and should be easy to modify away if you so choose.

0.1.5 Motivation behind this book

When I was GMing a campaign of Dungeons and Dragons for my friends, at one point they met a Nothic. I find the idea behind the creature very original - it's an enemy who can steal your secrets and use them against you.

In a setting with magical healing, stolen secrets, reputation damage and long-lasting consequences of Nothic's machinations can be more dangerous than easily healed HP loss. I wanted to bring the same kind of challenge to Cosmere® RPG and try to fit a Nothic-like enemy into the world of Roshar.

0.2 About the Adventure

0.2.1 Campaign Themes

This campaign is using themes as listed below. Use this list to determine if you are interested in running this kind of campaign. In the game, you can encounter themes of:

- Secrets
- Trading secrets
- Stealing secrets
- ...and more secrets

0.2.2 Campaign Setting

The story is set in Tashikk, shortly after the arrival of the Everstorm and the events described in "Edgedancer".

While the location is essential for the adventure and its themes, you can change the time of the events, eg. if you want to avoid "Stormlight Archive" spoilers.

0.3 Running the Adventure

To run this adventure you will need Stormlight Handbook containing all rules and guidelines on how to run Cosmere® RPG. This book contains only adventure-specific details and suggestions on how to run it.

You can read (or paraphrase) a text in such a box to your players. Alternatively, you can describe the scene using your own words.

Whenever a character's name appears in bold, it means there is corresponding stat block available. You can use it to get more info about the character's attributes and abilities.

Items appearing in bold italic have special rules you can find at the end of this book.

Boxes like this will help you understand the reason behind some of the design choices. Those boxes have no impact on the game, but they may help you modify some elements of the adventure if you so choose.

Path to Radiance

When a plot might allow for a certain Radiant Spren to be attracted by the player's actions, that will be indicated with such a box. However, use your own judgment whenever a player does something not accounted by this book.

Spoiler Info

On many occasions, this book will reference events or characters from "Stormlight Archive" series. This box will warn you of spoilers, but also it will provide original source if you wished to read more details about what's referenced from official books.

If you are using this book in electronic version, it has also several quality-of-life improvements to make your life easier when you navigate this book:

Whenever a name of a chapter or section appears (e.g. "Running the Adventure"), you can click on it to quickly go to the chapter in question.

All characters' names (e.g. Dalinar) are links that lead to Dramatis Personæ chapter, where all the NPCs are listed.

Unique items (e.g. Sealed Message) and adversaries (e.g. Deputy Scribe) are also links that will lead you to the page with their unique rules.

0.3.1 Using with Other Adventures

This adventure is expected to be used as a short standalone, or to be mixed with other stories as a side-quest adventure. You can play it after chapter 5 of Stonewalkers, around chapter 8 of Children of the Unmade, or adjust it to align with different adventures.

0.3.2 Adjusting Difficulty

This book assumes your players will form a party of 4 characters starting at tier 2 (levels 6-10). However, it is perfectly fine to have a different size of your group and/or to start playing at a different level.

If you see that the balance is a bit off, feel free to adjust the difficulty. You can change a number or tier of the enemies, modify endeavors' requirements or weave some other changes into the story.

To help you with that, this book will provide alternative stat blocks for the adversaries on different tiers, so you could easily change the tier of the adventure.

0.3.3 Handling Canon

Despite treating original source with respect, this adventure is not canon. While playing the game your primary focus should be fun. For everyone, "fun" means something different - either following official lore to the letter, creating your own touching story, or just hitting bad guys with your sword.

Make sure you know what is fun for you and your group and make it your primary objective. If that means modifying this adventure or straying away from the canon - go for it!

You can find more information on that topic in "Canon and Continuity" section of Stormlight Handbook.

0.3.4 Playing with Singers

The story takes place after the Everstorm, allowing for Singer characters to appear in the story. They might still attract more attention from human NPCs, but as long as you have a proper paperwork, the Azish and Tashikki people should not have a problem with you.

0.3.5 Playing with Radiants

During the events of the story, the Orders of Knights Radiant are reappearing and the spren are accepting the bonds again. There is nothing preventing your form playing as one of them.

In fact, for the plot hook, the story assumes you are sent to Tashikk by Dalinar. However, you can change that part if it doesn't fit your plans.

0.4 Adventure Summary

Here is a brief summary of the plot of the story. You can use it to quickly familiarize yourself with the adventure events.

Please note, the chapters do not represent the chronological order of the scenes, as the players have freedom to pursue their goals in any order. Instead, they are grouping scenes with similar context together.

For the graph of possible scene transitions, see Secrets of Tashikk - Scene Map Graph.

0.4.1 Entering Yeddaw - Summary

The PCs approach Yeddaw and must complete immigration procedures to enter the city.

0.4.2 City Guards - Summary

Those scenes are to be played when the party performs an illegal act and must be held responsible by the local authorities and law enforcement.

0.4.3 Cult of Secrets - Summary

Scenes featuring blind beggar, the Disciple of Secrets from the local Cult of Secrets worshiping Sja-anat.

0.4.4 Tashi's Light Orphanage - Summary

During those scenes, the PCs will attempt to learn the secrets of the local orphanage to trade for other crucial information they need.

0.4.5 Sleepless Philosopher - Summary

Includes scenes for a philosophical debate with a Sleepless and his subsequent offer for the party.

0.4.6 Grand Indicium - Summary

Being a storehouse for the city information, Grand Indicium is a great place for the PCs to find some answers and possibly secrets.

0.4.7 Finding the Informant - Summary

The PCs' goal for the adventure is to find the informant and trade information with them. Those scenes are used when the PCs are searching for their objective.

0.5 Dramatis Personæ

Following NPCs and fractions appear in the adventure:

- Dalinar (he/him) - Patron of the PCs. After recently receiving communication from Varith, he sent the party with a mission to trade secrets with the informant. Does not appear in person and can be switched for another patron.
- Varith (he/him) - An informant who contacted the party's patron with offer to sell them some secrets.
- Ganxir (he/him) - An immigrant attempting to enter Yeddaw, asks the PCs for help.
- Hauka (she/her) - Guard captain performing duty at her immigration post.
- Nissiqqan (he/him) - Deputy Scribe of Immigration, works with Hauka.
- Mentir (he/him) - Blind beggar and a Disciple of Secrets, the main villain of the story.
- Sja-anat (she/her) - Unmade spren, secretly worshiped by Mentir and the Cult of Secrets. Referenced only, does not appear in person.
- Abedaxxam (he/him) - Stormwarden, maintains the stormshelter in which the party is supposed to meet with Varith.
- Arshqqam (she/her) - She was previously running Tashi's Light Orphanage.
- Sarenth (he/him) - Kharbranthian Surgeon, took over Tashi's Light Orphanage after Arshqqam's departure.
- Arclo (he/him) - Sleepless philosopher, spends his time near the orphanage.
- Axies the Collector (he/him) - Blue-skinned Siah Aimian, covered in tattoos. Is found in the local prison.
- Yemninekka (she/her) - Guard in the Yeddaw prison, prone to gossip and secret trading.
- Ghenna (she/her) - Head Scribe in Grand Indicium.

0.6 Before Starting the Campaign

Here are some tips and suggestions intended for the GM. Following them is not mandatory, but it might help you prepare and run the game.

0.6.1 Players' Expectations

Inform the players that the story will focus on social encounters and Conversation scenes, with little combat in between.

On top of that, please discuss with your players following topics:

- How serious should the adventure be?
- What topics players would prefer to avoid during the game?
- Is there anything the players would like to see in the game?
- Are the players comfortable with their characters dying?
- Are the players comfortable with characters' romance, nudity or other sexual content?
- If you are of age - should your group allow alcoholic drinks?
- What rule variants should be in effect?
- How often should your group meet and how long should a single game session take?
- How should you handle situations when one player cannot attend a game session?

Gathering answers to those questions is not a requirement, but it will help you create a comfortable and enjoyable atmosphere for everyone.

0.6.2 Create Player Characters

Unless your players have their characters ready after previous adventures, they must create a new party. This book contains several pre-made character sheets you can use in your game (see Appendix E.), but you should encourage players to create more personalized heroes for the story.

While creating new characters, you might want to follow those guidelines:

- Encourage Human Ancestry, unless the player is familiar with more complex Singer rules and culture.

- If a player plans playing as Knight Radiant, make sure you know what spren to introduce in the story.
- Make sure each character hides some secrets they would rather not expose. For more info, see section 0.6.3. "Characters' Secrets".

0.6.3 Characters' Secrets

In this adventure, secrets and hidden information play a big role. To work properly, this book assumes each PC has a multiple of secrets they cannot allow to be revealed.

Make sure that each PC has something to guard. If you play with a preexisting party, work with the players to retcon some hidden secrets before playing this scenario.

When choosing secrets for the characters, make sure they are severe enough that revealing them would have consequences akin to a social death of the PC. In the adventure where combat is not a main part of the story, such secrets will work similar to the Health pool in more combat-oriented scenarios.

It is suggested that each of the PCs had one secret for each of the categories below, but you can work with them to realign this requirement to their unique backstory. For examples, see "Tables of Secrets".

Personal Secrets

Those secrets carry a great importance for just one character close to the PC. Revealing this secret will most probably shatter any trust between that character and the PC with no hopes for future reconciliation.

Example: "During the last war, I killed your beloved brother and caused the ruin that befell on your House".

Professional Secrets

Those secrets will put the entire career of the PC at risk, once revealed. Is it because of something terrible the PC did leveraging their station, or because differences in the core beliefs expected from someone in that position, their peers would cast the PC out from among them.

Example: "I joined the ardentia to avoid army draft, but I do not believe in the Almighty and I don't respect people who do".

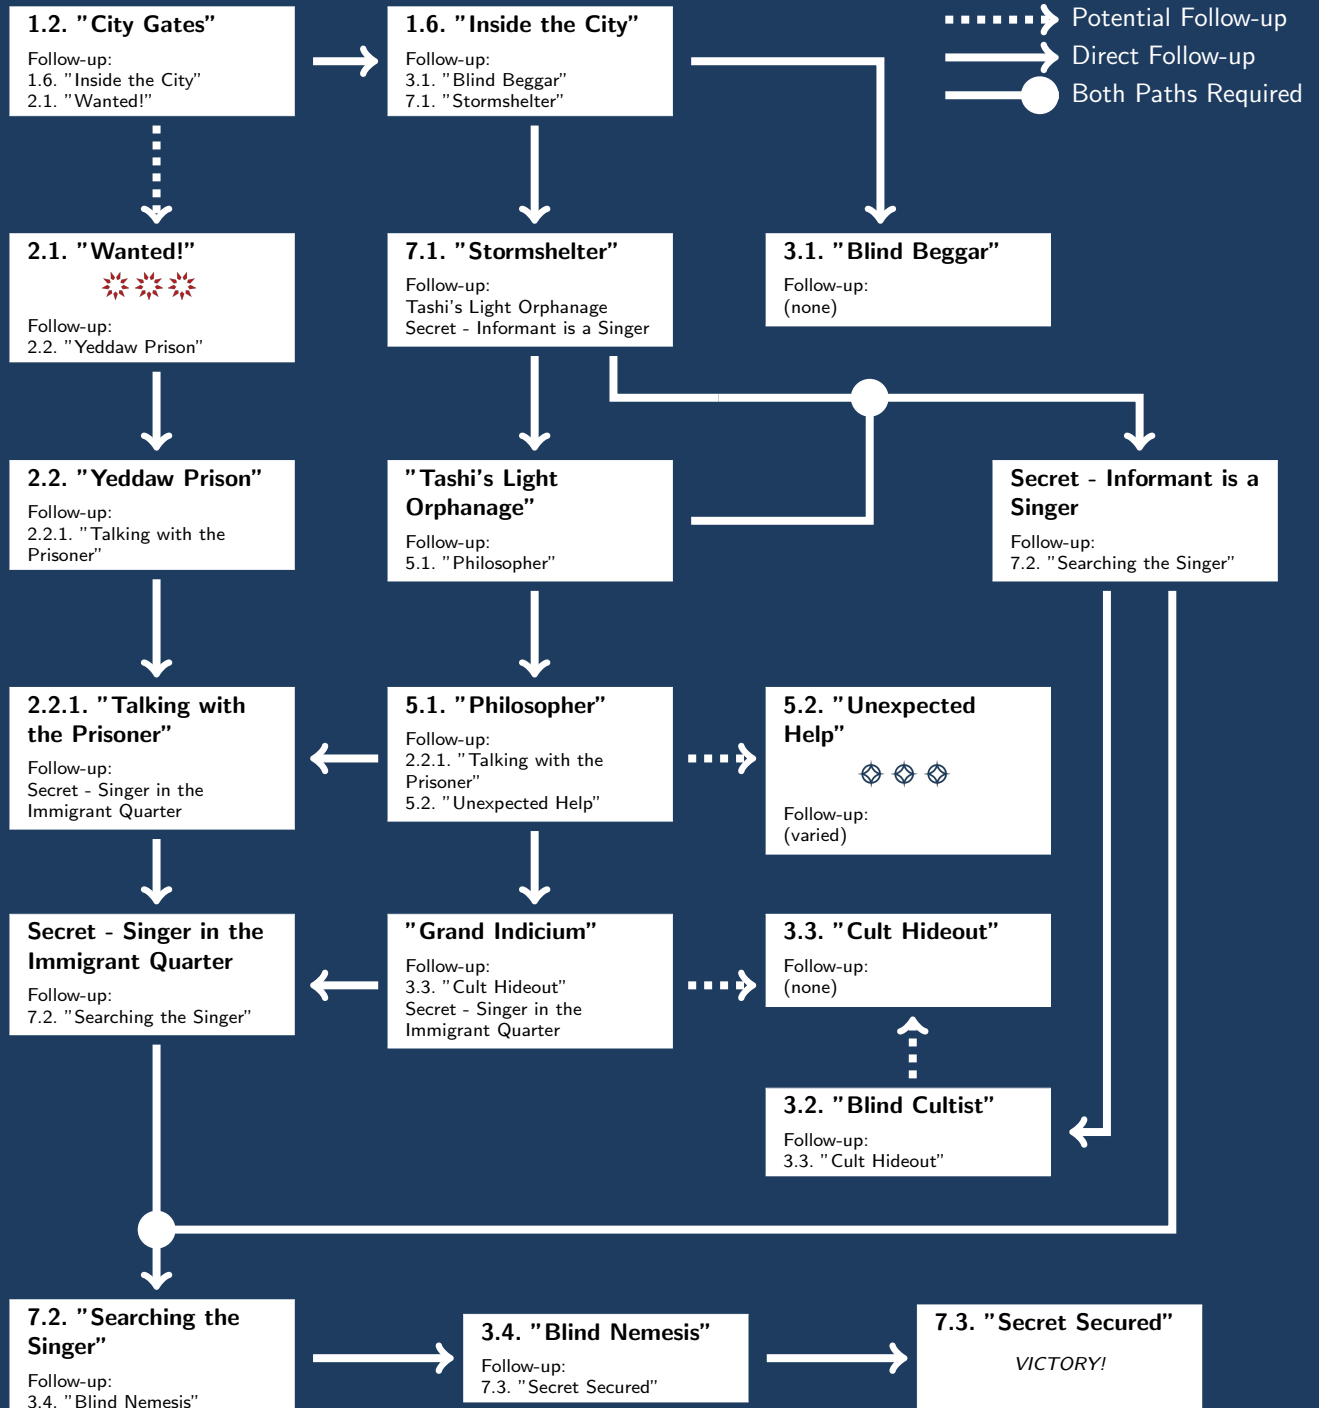

State Secrets

Those are the secrets that are heavily guarded by kings and emperors of the world. If the PCs knew and revealed one of them, they would risk a lethal consequences administered by the world powers.

Example: "My king hired the Assassin in White to eliminate other monarchs and destabilize the world".

Secrets of Tashikk

Scene Map

Entering Yeddaw

1.0 Running This Chapter

The story begins with the party entering Yeddaw, the biggest city in Tashikk, with hopes to get in touch with a mysterious informant holding crucial information.

1.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters should start this chapter at level 6-10 (tier 2). If the party has another tier, adjust the tier of encountered adversaries. Do not advance the party at the end of this chapter.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Submitting to local law and bureaucracy.
- Not allowing to be stopped for puny reasons.
- Helping the immigrant.

1.0.2 Notable NPCs

Hauka and Nissiqqan are performing their guard duty at the gates today. Nissiqqan, as a Deputy Scribe of Immigration allows Hauka do most of the work, but he sits nearby if she needs his expertise.

Roleplaying Hauka

Characteristics: Scrupulous, dedicated, pragmatic.

Goal: To serve the empire well as a guard captain.

Appearance: Wears a Azish guard uniform: boots, trousers, a cap, a breastplate and a cape.

Hauka (she/her) is a woman who likes routine and order. She performs her duties with pride and integrity, ensuring order is maintained. She likes to read at night and she often trades information for infused spheres which help her enjoy that hobby.

1.1 The Story So Far

Before starting the adventure, read the following:

Dalinar needs your help! You were sent to Tashikk on his behalf to meet with a mysterious informant, who is in possession of information your patron needs.

However, in this kingdom, secrets have their price and the information can be used as a currency. Your patron gave you a sealed letter for the informant. You must protect its contents and deliver it for trade.

Important! For this story, make sure you worked with the players to introduce secrets for their PCs as described in 0.6.3. "Characters' Secrets". This is especially important if you play with preexisting party and did not create new PCs for the adventure, possibly skipping this step.

It is expected to use this adventure as a side quest of a bigger story. Feel free to adjust some details of the plot hook and the party's motivation. Make sure the goal remains the same - find informant and deliver sealed secret to them.

1.1.1 The Informant

Before the events of this adventure, Dalinar received the following message:

To Dalinar Kholin, leader of alethi forces!

What happened to your niece at the sea was not an accident. It was a scheme to assassinate the member of a royal family. I know who is behind it and how to recognize them.

I can trade this information. However, spanreeds are not safe for this. Meet me in Yeddaw, in the kingdom of Tashikk. Ask for Varith in the southern stormshelter. Bring a secret for trade, or I will not share what I know.

Hurry, Dalinar! Lives of your entire family are at lethal risk!

At the time, there were more pressing matters and he could not spare the resources to pursue this thread. Now, however, he decided to send the PCs with secrets to trade.

The PCs must find the informant in Yeddaw, trade Sealed Message for information he gathered and return with it to Urithiru.

1.1.2 Sealed Message

The PCs are carrying Sealed Message - a secret information to be traded for informant's secrets.

The PCs are not supposed to open it, and you should be able to run the entire adventure without the need to know its contents, but if ever the PCs decide to see what happens if they break the seal, it contains the following text:

TODO

However, opened Sealed Message is worthless to the informant. The PCs will need to find another way to get what they need.

The contents of the Sealed Message are not important for the plot. Feel free to adjust the text to your needs.

1.1.3 The First Step

The story assumes the party already found a way to get to Yeddaw. Start the adventure with 1.2. "City Gates".

1.2 City Gates

When the characters approach the city of Yeddaw, read the following:

Finally, you arrived to Yeddaw. In a distance, you see a city carved into the rocky ground, looking like a smaller brother of the Shattered Plains. A road leading to it is crowded with people - seemingly endless stream, full of immigrants waiting to enter the city.

The waiting line is quite long. Give the PCs some time to interact with each other and surrounding NPCs, before you proceed to 1.2.1. "Immigrant in Need".

1.2.1 Immigrant in Need

Start this scene by reading the following:

You see a person approaching you. Just looking at him you see he didn't sleep well recently - eyes tired, small sticks entangled in his hair. Perhaps he is waiting in this line several days now...

"Please, you have to help me!", he begs you.
"They say my immigration form has expired, and my entry is denied... I have family in this city, my daughters need me!"

Ganxir approaches the party and asks for their help in entering the city. If they agree, the legal process at the gate will be more difficult, but perhaps Ganxir will be able to thank the PCs later...?

After you complete this scene, proceed to 1.2.2. "Gate Guards".

Path to Radiance

Helping an immigrant in need may be recognized by a cultivationspren.

1.2.2 Gate Guards

When the party finally approaches the gate, read the following:

Finally, you approach the guard post. There is a scribe sitting on the nearby bench, while the guard captain in a shining breastplate addresses you:

"Welcome do Yeddaw", she says. "If it is your first time visiting the city, you must provide Immigration Form TI-84 before entering the city. You may acquire an empty form from the Deputy Scribe of Immigration on your left. Thank you for your cooperation."

Hauka (she/her), a Kingdom Guard guards the gate. Nissiqqan (he/him), a Deputy Scribe of Immigration, sits nearby, ready to assist, should Hauka need his help.

The party will quickly learn that entering the city requires filling a proper paperwork (see 1.3. "Immigration Form"). The PCs might also try to talk their way in (see 1.4. "Persuading the Scribe"), or just break inside (see 1.5. "Lawless Entrance").

Spoiler Info

Hauka and Nissiqqan at Yeddaw gates appear in "Edgedancer", Chapter 3.

(Optional) Identification Form

If you start this adventure without a party from the previous games, you might consider roleplay through the process of character creation, turning session zero into a more interactive experience.

Before proceeding to the next scene, allow Hauka to ask each character some questions about details she needs to fill in her paperwork. Let the players define the following at this point:

- Name
- Appearance
- Occupation
- Spoken Languages
- Carried Weapons
- Special Talents
- Available Marks

After those are answered, you can proceed with filling the details, like exact attribute scores or total skill modifiers.

Please note, this is not a recommended way to play this scenario as you should probably try to weave it with another module. However, I'm putting the idea here - in case you needed it and found it interesting.

1.3 Immigration Form

If the party decides to fill the required paperwork, read the following:

What you hoped to be a simple formality, turns out to be much more complex task. The form looks like a small book, and it will take forever to fill. Countless pages are covered in words written with small azish letters. Some of them looks like references to other legal documents.

As you are looking at it, the scribe approaches you. "Please don't forget the annexes!", he says, handing you another stack of papers.

To enter the city, the party must present proper paperwork. This is a standard procedure across Azish Empire and the end of the world is not an excuse to abandon the law. You can run this scene as an Endeavor.

To complete the Endeavor, the party must accrue 2 successes before 1 failure per each player. This story assumes the party consists of 4 people. If the party agreed to help the Ganxir from 1.2.1. "Immigrant in Need", they need to earn 2 more successes.

1.3.1 Form Language

Despite the guards speaking multiple languages, the Immigration Form is written in azish. The scribes assume that anyone who applies for immigrant status is required to understand the local language.

All tests contributing to the Endeavor gain disadvantage if the party does not have a character with Azish Culture Expertise.

On the other hand, if someone in the party has some form of Legal Expertise, they will be able to make sense of the Form, granting advantage to all the tests.

1.3.2 Endeavor Contribution

The DC of the Endeavor tests should fall in the range of 13-16 ($12 + 1d4$) on tier 2, or ($8 + 1d4 + 2 \times \text{tier}$) on other tiers.

In order to contribute to the Endeavor, the PCs might try one of the suggestions below or propose their own ideas:

Law Knowledge.

A character may attempt DC 14 Lore check to determine if they know enough law relating to the Form. Due to the legal nature of the Endeavor, a successful tests scores two successes towards the Endeavor completion.

Spy on Others.

A PC may attempt DC 15 Stealth check to sneak to other immigrants and see how did they answer on the hardest parts of the Form.

Forge Signature.

A PC who does not wish to give away all their information may attempt a DC 13 Thievery or Deception check to forge their signature or other data.

Ask for Help.

Good DC 16 Persuasion check may convince the scribe to help a person in a need of assistance.

Patient Work.

The Form might be long, but surely, with just a little patience it can be solved. You can use DC 16 Discipline check for that.

1.3.3 Resolving the Endeavor

The Endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 8 (or 10) successes before 4 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

Success!

The party completed their paperwork and got a permit to enter the city. Proceed to 1.6. "Inside the City".

Failure...

The azish law is too complicated and the form - needlessly complex. The PCs must find a different way to enter the city.

Path to Radiance

Honest effort to comply with the local law may be recognized by a highspren. Correctly filling the form may earn an additional praise.

1.4 Persuading the Scribe

If the party believes they should be granted the entry without the paperwork due to their status and/or priority of their mission, read the following:

"I understand the importance of your assignment", the guard says, "but the legal procedures of the city require all people with an immigrant status to present proper documentation. Perhaps my colleague can explain the procedure in more detail. Nissiqqan, could you please come over here?"

The party enters a Conversation with Hauka, a Kingdom Guard and Nissiqqan, a Deputy Scribe of Immigration. Both of them must be convinced to let the party in, before the PCs can proceed.

Hauka, a Kingdom Guard

Kingdom Guard has a Cognitive defense of 16, a Spiritual defense of 17, and 5 Focus. She is pragmatic and reliable guard captain, with a lot of respect for law and bureaucratic procedures.

Being from Azir, she defers to the local authorities and will need to spend 2 Focus to resist influence after Deputy Scribe backed down from the conversation.

After recent events, she will see Surgebending and other supernatural powers as trouble that should be avoided. Any attempts to influence her that rely on impressing her with such powers will always fail.

If Kingdom Guard's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

Nissiqqan, a Deputy Scribe of Immigration

Deputy Scribe has a Cognitive defense of 16, a Spiritual defense of 16, and 5 Focus. He wishes to restore order to his city in those times of chaos and uncertainty, and he believes that forms and taxes are the best method to do it.

If Deputy Scribe's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

1.4.1 Resolving the Conversation

After both Hauka and Nissiqqan back down from the Conversation, the PCs are allowed to enter the city. Proceed to 1.6. "Inside the City".

If the PCs failed to convince them, they will need to find another way to enter Yeddaw...

1.5 Lawless Entrance

If the party decides to ignore the instructions of the guard and to illegally enter the city, read the following:

As you start running, you hear the guard shouting after you:

"Hey! Stop! You still didn't present your documentation! Your actions will be deemed illegal!"

The party runs past the guards into the city, Hauka chasing after them. You can run it as a modified Pursuit Endeavor.

1.5.1 Pursuit Rules

Between the guard post and the streets of Yeddaw there is a Distance of 6 (or 1.5 times the number of PCs). The party starts at Distance 1. Their goal is to get to the city before they are detained by the guards.

Kingdom Guard starts at the Distance of 0. In her first turn, Hauka will call for support, allowing a few more Patrol Guards to join the scene (enough to match the size of the party).

Starting with the PCs, one character of each team makes a test against a respective Defense of someone in the other party. The PCs always roll against Kingdom Guard, the guards can pick their targets. On a success, increase the Distance of the team by 1.

1.5.2 Resolving the Pursuit

If the party reached the city first, they can disappear in the crowd, making it impossible for Hauka to catch them. Proceed to 1.6. "Inside the City".

If Hauka and the guards managed to catch the PCs, they will be arrested for attempted breaking and a failure to present a proper immigration documents. Proceed to 2.2. "Yeddaw Prison".

If the party resists the arrest attempt, they will be attacked by Kingdom Guard and three Patrol Guards

(or 1 fewer than the number of PCs). If the guards win the fight, proceed to 2.2. "Yeddaw Prison". If they are defeated, the PCs can proceed to 1.6. "Inside the City".

Path to Radiance

Rebelling against any form of containment and subjugation, even if only by law and not a physical bars, may be recognized by a lightspren.

1.6 Inside the City

When the characters enter the city of Yeddaw, read the following:

Finally, you stand at the crowded street of Yeddaw. Everywhere around, you see the aftermath of the recent Everstorm. The city might be carved into the rock itself, but even that could not stop the destructive power of the raging storm.

Success! The PCs entered the city. As the first scene in here, proceed to 1.6.1. "Prohibited Powers".

1.6.1 Prohibited Powers

Just after the party entered the city, read the following:

On the nearest wall, you see a piece of paper nailed with a thick bolt. The surface suffered during the recent storm, but most of the content is still readable:

"New law! By the will of Prince [tear] of Tashikk and majority of Law Tribunal votes, regulation MM-109 comes into force. All use of any magical, supernatural and/or void powers without a permit is strictly prohibited inside Tashikk borders. Any misconduct will be terminally curtailed by Shardbearer forces."

Surgebending and other supernatural powers are forbidden in the city. Failure to comply is punished by death. Make sure the PCs are aware of the law as soon as they are within the city borders, before they can do anything flashy.

Once it is clear, proceed to 1.6.2. "City Patrols".

1.6.2 City Patrols

Start this scene by reading the following:

Even in a city this crowded, you cannot fail to notice armed guards patrolling the city. Many of them wear uniforms of Tashikk Guard, but they are heavily augmented with azish forces. As you watch them closer, you see one of the patrols reporting to a constable in an impeccable black uniform.

Yeddaw is protected by empire guards sent here by the emperor. They are supported by Skybreaker constables, should they meet more powerful enemies. Make sure to show those forces to the party.

If at any moment the party commits a crime while in Yeddaw, start 2.1. "Wanted!" event. Those crimes may include, but are not limited to: breaking into the city, failure to present valid documentation, assault on a city official, wielding of unnatural powers.

If the party entered the city illegally, start the event now. If not, they are safe. Either way, proceed to 1.6.3. "Blind Beggar".

1.6.3 Blind Beggar

For the first encounter in Yeddaw, read the following:

Suddenly, you hear a rasping voice begging from below: "Please! Can you share something with a less fortunate?" As you look down, you see a man in ragged clothing, his eyelids stitched with a thick cord.

Beggar Mentir (he/him) is a Disciple of Secrets. He starts this scene with 0 Investiture and his goal is to get as much PCs' secrets as he can.

If the party interacts with the beggar, proceed to 3.1. "Blind Beggar".

Mentir is the main villain of the story. Make sure to introduce him to the party early, but don't show all his powers yet. At this point, the goal of the scene with him is to foreshadow him and to make the players a bit uneasy.

1.6.4 Next Steps

At this point, the party is free to proceed however they wish. Most probably they will wish to meet with the informant - proceed to 7.1. "Stormshelter" in that case.

Do not advance their level, as not enough scenes happened to justify it.

City Guards

2.0 Running This Chapter

Use scenes described in this chapter when the party breaks the law and must face the consequences of their actions.

2.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters do not advance to the higher levels during this chapter.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Visiting a lonely prisoner.
- Trading secrets with the guard.
- Helping friends to flee from jail.
- Following local law or accepting lawful punishment.

2.1 Wanted!

The people of Yeddaw treat the law seriously and will not allow any crime of the PCs to go unanswered. If at any point the party commits a crime, announce the start of the following event:

EVENT

Triggers when the final Complication slot is filled.

Wanted!

2.1.1 The Story Behind

In Yeddaw, information is a valuable coin. People trade with it for money, favors, or other information. The Law Enforcement is no different.

Each time a ✨ is spent for the event, some NPC recognizes the party and sells the information to the city officials. Each piece of information brings them one step closer to catching the PCs. Each time a crime is committed, someone will also tip the authorities.

Once the final ✨ is spent, they track them down and join the scene, ready to detain them.

2.1.2 Progressing the Event

Once per scene, the GM may spend a ✨ from a PC's roll to advance the event's progress.

On top of that, if the party commits a new crime while the event from the previous one is still in progress, advance the previous one just as if ✨ was spent.

2.1.3 Triggering the Event

Once the final ✨ is placed, the city guards finally found the criminals they were tracking. For each PC in the party, a Patrol Guard joins the scene. They are lead by Kingdom Guard. If the party demonstrated a use of supernatural powers, additional Azish Skybreaker (3rd Ideal) will also be there.

The guards aim to arrest the party. If they do, proceed to 2.2. "Yeddaw Prison".

However, if the party previously ran away from the prison, or if they are hostile towards the law enforcement officers, they will determine the prison is no longer a valid option and will attempt to neutralize the criminals.

2.2 Yeddaw Prison

When the PCs are arrested, read the following:

You are stripped out of your weapons and equipment and locked in a musty, smelly cell. On the wall, you see a note listing rights and regulations applying to people in the custody. In the corner of your cell, there is another inmate sleeping.

The man already sitting in the jail is Axies the Collector. He is in no rush to break from the prison, but he might help the PCs to escape.

Axies is a person who is expected to be found in the places like this. However, if him being here does not fit the timeline of your story, feel free to replace him with other prisoner.

2.2.1 Talking with the Prisoner

The prisoner does not initiate the conversation. However, if the PCs start talking with him, they will learn the following:

How did you get here?

Oh, I was snooping in Grand Indicium, they didn't like that...

Do you know how to get out from here?

Yemninekka has a night shift tonight. She likes to gossip. Perhaps you will be able to convince her to release you.

Why didn't you escape?

I lost a bet with my friend. I was sure they will not catch me. Now I must spend my time here.

Who is that friend?

He is quite a philosopher. You must meet him, he would love to chat with you. When you get out, ask for Arclo, he should stay near the orphanage.

How long will you stay here?

Oh, quite a time, but don't worry about it. Honestly, I'm used to it.

Path to Radiance

Visiting the prison only to cheer up a lonely prisoner may be recognized by a cultivationspren.

2.2.2 Bringing the Cremling

If Axies sees that a cremling from Arclo travels with the party, read the following:

"Hello, my friend", the inmate says, looking at the cremling you carry. "Well, you were right, I was not able to leave Grand Indicium unnoticed... But I did learn something before they captured me! One more set of shards is gone, drowned in the storm. And you were right about Stump, she isn't coming back anytime soon. But hey, I was right too! There is a Singer in the city, hiding among the immigrants! Someone stayed despite exile regulations!"

Axies reveals the secret he discovered in Grand Indicium before he was captured - there is a Singer in the city, hiding among the immigrants. He is being searched for, as the guards believe he might be dangerous and should be eliminated.

If the party knows their informant is a Singer, they might be able to connect the dots and follow that trail to find him. They can proceed to 7.2. "Searching the Singer" as soon as they leave the prison.

If the PCs got arrested quickly, eg. during a failed attempt to break into the city, do not serve them crucial information for free. However, if they failed all other attempts to learn about the location of Varith, allow Axies to share that information with them even if they don't have Arclo's hordeling, or the party will not be able to progress.

2.2.3 Gossiping with the Guard

Once Yemninekka starts her shift, the PCs may feed her some juicy gossip to intrigue her and perhaps persuade her to allow them to gather more details on it. You can run this scene as a Conversation.

Yemninekka is a Patrol Guard. She has a Cognitive defense of 14, a Spiritual defense of 15, and 4 Focus. All tests to influence her gain disadvantage as she recognizes her integrity is at risk. However, she will need to spend 2 Focus against an attempt to influence her with a scandalous secret about someone well-known in Tashikk.

If Yemninekka's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

Fabricating the Gossip

The PCs may attempt to fabricate a false gossip if they do not wish to share the secrets they know. However, people in Tashikk can recognize a false information.

A PC must pass a DC 20 Deception check to use a lie to start the Conversation. On a failure, Yemninekka will refuse to speak with the PC, forcing them to back down at the beginning of the Conversation, when another believable gossip is provided.

On a tier another than 2nd, the DC of the skill test equals to $12 + 4 \times \text{party's tier}$.

Resolving the Conversation

The Conversation continues until Yemninekka fails to spend Focus to resist the influence, or all PCs are forced to back down from it.

Success!

The party convinces the guard to set them free, but she makes them promise to learn more details about the gossip and share them with her.

Failure...

Yemninekka cannot be manipulated into releasing the party. The PCs must find another way out.

Path to Radiance

Sharing secrets with Yemninekka may be recognized by a Cryptic.

2.2.4 Prison Break

The party may prefer to do an old-fashioned prison break instead. If they do, you can run this attempt as an Endeavor. Set the DCs of the Endeavor tests to 13-16 (12 + 1d4), or 10 + 1d4 + 2 × tier of the party.

To complete the Endeavor, the party must accrue 2 successes before 1 failure per each player. This story assumes the party consists of 4 people.

Potential attempts to contribute to the Endeavor may include:

Determine patrol patterns.

Use DC 14 Deduction check to see if a PC can accurately determine guard patrol path.

Creating a lockpick.

To make a useful tool from bones and shells scattered around, a PC may attempt a DC 16 Crafting check.

Picking the lock.

Using lockpick to open the jail may require a DC 15 Thievery check.

Sneaking past the guards.

Use DC 13 Stealth check to determine if a PC can sneak unseen.

Taking inaccessible path.

Request DC 15 Agility or Athletics check to determine if a PC can climb on a wall or take a leap into a safer area.

Resolving the Endeavor

The Endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 8 successes before 4 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

Success!

The party retrieved their equipment and successfully escaped from the prison.

Failure...

The PCs are caught and brought back to their cell. Each PC suffers 1d6 non-lethal damage after the meeting with the guards.

Path to Radiance

Freeing the imprisoned may be recognized by a lightspren.

2.2.5 Unexpected Ally

After both escape attempts failed, if the party managed to make some friends in the city before their capture, you can read the following:

After several long hours of silence, suddenly you hear shouting and a commotion. Then, you see a body of a guard falling from the stairs, dead. Then, slow steps on the stone slabs. "I think this is enough time for you in here", you hear a voice speaking. "Get up, there is a work for you out there!"

Allow Arclo or Mentir to rescue the PCs if they believe it might benefit them. They will kill all the guards in the process, forcing Skybreakers to join future patrols chasing the party.

2.2.6 Friends in High Places

If nothing else allows for the escape, read the following:

After several long hours, you hear steps on the stony stairs. A moment later, a stern guard approaches your jail.

"Hey, you! Get up!", he says to you. "Your superior provided the paperwork and paid the bail via thaylen banking system. You are free to go. But if you cause problems ever again, you will be exiled from the city with no right for an appeal, you understand?"

Their patron persuaded to release PCs from the imprisonment. If they commit more infractions, they will be exiled from the city, and their mission here will fail.

Path to Radiance

Accepting a just and lawful punishment may be recognized by a highspren.

2.2.7 Repeated and/or Violent Infractions

Though the guards usually aim to arrest the party, if the PCs prove they cannot be contained or if they hurt a law representative, the guards will no longer believe the prison is the effective way to contain them.

Instead, the subsequent infraction will result in guards aiming to kill the party. If the guards fail, they will bring bigger force to the next attempt, asking Skybreakers for support if required.

Cult of Secrets

3.0 Running This Chapter

This chapter describes party's interaction with the Cult of Secrets taking root in Yeddaw. One of their members, Mentir, will be the main antagonist of the story.

3.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters do not advance to the higher levels during this chapter. Optionally, if you believe the PCs spent long enough in Yeddaw, you may consider advancing them after 3.2. "Blind Cultist", which should mark roughly the half of the story.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Sharing their secrets.
- Joining the cult.
- Following the law after fining the cult's hideout.

3.0.2 Notable NPCs

Mentir (he/him) is a Disciple of Secrets. He will meet the party several times during the story, until in the end he becomes the final boss of the adventure.

Roleplaying Mentir

Characteristics: Secretive, provocative, uncanny

Goal: To learn as many personal secrets of the PCs as possible.

Appearance: Mentir is bald and his eyelids are stitched with a thick cord, preventing them from opening. On his forehead he has a circular tattoo looking like a big eye made of scribbles. He always smiles in a mischievous way, suggesting he knows more than one would assume.

As many members of the Cult, Mentir is a Lightweaver bonded to an Enlightened Cryptic who resides on his forehead like a big eye. They both love secrets and steal them from people whenever possible, often taunting them by suggesting how much they know.

3.1 Blind Beggar

When the party meets the beggar for the first time, read the following:

"Forgive me, brightlord, how rude of me...", the man with stitched eyes mumbles. He bows and takes off his hood in a respectful gesture, revealing big, circular tattoo on his head. "My name is Mentir, how may I be of service to you?"

Mentir (he/him) is a Disciple of Secrets. He starts this scene with 0 Investiture and his goal is to get as much PCs' secrets as he can.

3.1.1 Giving Him Spheres

If the PCs give Mentir some spheres, read the following:

"Many thanks to you, brightlord, for this generous gift", Mentir says. "But in Tashikk, the spheres are not as valuable as a true currency, the information. Perhaps you could share some secrets with a humble beggar?"

The beggar will inform the party that in Yeddaw, the real currency are information and secrets. He begs for both. However, he will keep the sphere and use its light to use his Lure with Secrets talent, taunting a PC with his findings.

3.1.2 Giving Him Secrets

If the party shares some secrets with him, he will greedily listen to it. If the secret was big enough, it may change his attitude towards the party in the later stages of the story.

However, the secret must be true. Mentir will easily see through any lies. When this happens, he will despise the party, growing more hostile in the later parts of the adventure.

Path to Radiance

A PC speaking up their secrets may be recognized by a Cryptic.

3.2 Blind Cultist

The party meets Mentir for the 2nd time right after 7.1.3. "Trading Secrets". When they do, read the following:

As you step away from the stormshelter, you see a figure standing in the nearby shadow. Thick cords are sewing his eyelids shut, and his teeth shine bare in a mischievous smile.

"So, you are looking for a Parshmen", Mentir says. "That's intriguing... You know all of them were exiled from the city just before that red storm, right? It would be illegal for one to stay behind!

"And that secret you want to give him? What does it say, hm...?"

Mentir, the Disciple of Secrets, is now aware that the PCs are looking for a Singer. That intrigues him and makes him want to learn more about the PCs and their motivation. He starts talking with the party with a plan to use his abilities and steal their secrets.

Depending on the PCs' previous interaction with him, he will approach this conversation in a different way. If the PCs shared a secret with him during their previous meeting, he will try recruiting them to his cult - proceed to 3.2.1. "Cult Recruitment". However, if the PCs showed hostility, he will respond with the same attitude - proceed to 3.2.2. "Threaten Secrets".

If Mentir manages to steal a secret from a PC using his abilities, make a note of that. He may use them against that PC to make them lose Focus during a Conversation, but he might hold to some of them for a later use. During 3.4. "Blind Nemesis" you will need to know how many secrets does he start the scene with.

3.2.1 Cult Recruitment

During this scene, Mentir will attempt to tempt the party, promising them he will help them to join the Cult of Secrets and develop new magical powers, allowing the PCs to easily learn the secrets held by the informant.

He also says that his friends are spread across the city, and will have no difficulty to find anyone, making the search for Varith a much easier task.

The price to join the cult, however, is to give up Sealed Message to Mentir. If the party accepts this deal, proceed to 3.3. "Cult Hideout".

3.2.2 Threaten Secrets

During this scene, Mentir will attempt to blackmail the PCs using their secret against them. His goal is to obtain Sealed Message the PCs are protecting.

You may run this scene as a Conversation. However, if the PCs don't try to persuade him, there is no need to invoke Conversation rules.

Mentir uses Disciple of Secrets stat block. He has a Cognitive defense of 16, a Spiritual defense of 20, and 7 Focus. Hungry for secrets, he will need to spend an additional Focus to resist all influence attempts backed with them.

During the Conversation, Mentir will use his abilities to steal 1 secret from each of the PCs. After that, he will threaten to expose them, selling the information to the authorities or interested parties.

If Mentir's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation. The Conversation also ends when the PCs give him Sealed Message. He will see through any attempt of deception and will accept only the real one.

If instead of the Conversation the PCs initiate Combat, proceed to 3.2.3. "Armed Combat".

During this scene, make sure to show that Mentir can be dangerous to the PCs without ever drawing a weapon. However, do not allow him to steal all the secrets, leave something for 3.4. "Blind Nemesis".

3.2.3 Armed Combat

If the PCs attack Mentir, read the following:

"Drawing weapons against a poor beggar...? Manslaughter is illegal, you must know that, right?" Mentir asks. "Well, I'm sorry to disappoint you, but I cannot satisfy you in this very moment... I have a Parshmen to find. Another day, perhaps...?"

Mentir will not attempt to fight the party, yet. He will Disengage and Move away from the PCs, using Regenerate to heal any damage. If possible, he will attempt to steal some of the party's secrets, but he will not risk his life for that.

Once Mentir reaches a nearby street, he will use Illumination to blend into the crowd, disappearing from sight.

Make sure Mentir survives this encounter, he will be needed for the final boss fight in 3.4. "Blind Nemesis".

3.3 Cult Hideout

It is possible for the PCs to find the location of the mysterious Cult of Secrets. The PCs could be invited by Mentir during 3.2. "Blind Cultist", or they could find some clues about it while proceeding with 6.3. "Information Heist".

When the PCs reach this location, read the following:

You enter a dark and musty cellar. The entire room is covered in darkness, with no candles or spheres anywhere nearby. Once you pull out your own source of light, you see a crude altar in the middle with a bloodied knife resting on top of it. Everywhere around, you see dozens of mirrors hanging on the walls. All of them are dusted, many are crooked, and some of them are broken, shards of glass scattered on the floor.

At this moment, there are several people in the room. All of them are wearing ragged robes and have circular tattoos on their bald heads. One of them has his eyes gouged, other wear black blindfolds.

At this point, in the hideout there are four Acolyte of Secrets and their leader - Disciple of Secrets. They regard the party with curiosity, but they are not hostile.

It is up to the PCs how will they handle this situation.

The mirrors are here for Sja-anat to appear and bless the cultists with her Enlightened children. It is up to you if she appears for the party, but this book does not cover this event.

3.3.1 Purging the Cult

The PCs may decide to free the city from the Cult's influence and to exterminate its members. You may run this as a Combat scene. If you believe the fight is too easy for the party, at the 3rd round allow more Acolyte of Secretss to enter the scene.

By initiating the fight, the party risks that their actions will be deemed illegal, triggering 2.1. "Wanted!" event.

It is up to you if the PCs find anything interesting after the fight, but the cultists are rather poor individuals.

3.3.2 Joining the Cult

If a PC agrees to join the cult, they will be treated in a friendly manner by other cult members. If the PC wears a blindfold on their eyes and follows the teaching of the cult leader, they will earn the title of Initiate of Secrets.

After some time, the Initiate of Secrets may attract an Enlightened Cryptic. If they proceed with the First Ideal, they will be recognized as a fully fledged Acolyte of Secrets.

This book does not cover rules for progressing as an Enlightened Lightweaver. It is up to you how will you handle it. You may find suggested rules and talent trees under this link:

https://github.com/pether-pg/CosmereRPG_Books_byPether/releases

Path to Radiance

Joining the cult may attract an Enlightened Cryptic.

Rewarded with Secrets

After a PC joins the cult, start the event below. The party may spend one  per scene to progress it.

When the event triggers, the cult leader will inform the party that his cultists learned something that might help the PCs find the informant. He will share this information to the party as a reward for their loyalty.

EVENT

Triggers when the final Complication slot is filled.

Rewarded with Secrets

3.3.3 Selling Cult's Secrets

The cult's location seems to be kept in secret. The PCs might attempt to sell this information to city officials or other interested parties.

If the PCs try to sell this information at Grand Indicum, they will be able to exchange it for any information of a similar significance that is recorded there. That should make finding Varith much easier.

When the PCs approach the city guard with this information, they will be offered 1000 mk for it. If the PCs agree, the guards will send a squad of Patrol Guards to eradicate the cult.

If the PCs approach Skybreaker constables with this information, they will send a couple of Azish Skybreaker (3rd Ideal) constables to eliminate any potential surgebenders. After this assignment, they will thank the PCs, offering them joining their ranks.

Path to Radiance

Allowing the local authority to handle criminal activity may be recognized by a highspren.

3.4 Blind Nemesis

When the PCs reach the informant, read the following:

In the dark alley, you see Mentir smiling with a wicked grin below his stitched eyes.

"I told you that parshmen were exiled from the city. One would say - killing one is a favor to all of us. But don't worry, I know all the secrets this one was hiding. Wanna trade?"

Mentir was faster and he reached Varith before the party. However, depending on the Endeavor result in 7.2. "Searching the Singer", the informant might be still alive or already dead...

Description in this scene assumes Mentir is a Disciple of Secrets wielding a Shardblade. If you are running this adventure on a lower tier, Acolyte of Secrets carries no such weapon, so you will need to adjust the details.

3.4.1 Singer Hostage

If the party succeeded during 7.2. "Searching the Singer", read the following:

In front of the beggar, you see a terrified Singer with red patterns on the pale white skin, held hostage. On his shoulders, you see a Shardblade in a color of a dark velvet. The edge of the blade looks like tears, scratches and scribbles welded together.

"You have the secret I crave", Mentir says. For the first time, you don't see his tattoo on his forehead. "I have something you want. Want to spare the pathetic life of this vermin? Or will you complete your mission? Choose!"

Varith is still still alive and held hostage. Varith offers to trade his life and secrets for Sealed Message. Proceed to 3.4.3. "Final Conversation".

3.4.2 Singer Slain

If the party failed during 7.2. "Searching the Singer", read the following:

Behind the beggar, you see a body of a Singer lying on the ground. His eyes are burnt out and his clothes cut clean, but there is no blood to be seen.

"You have the secret I crave", Mentir says. "I have something you want. How much will you give me for it?"

Mentir killed the Singer after learning his secrets and now he wants the party to give him Sealed Message in return for them. Proceed to 3.4.3. "Final Conversation".

3.4.3 Final Conversation

Mentir is a Disciple of Secrets. He has a Cognitive defense of 16, a Spiritual defense of 20, and 7 Focus.

His goal during this scene is to trade the secret he stole from Varith for Sealed Message. However, all secrets intrigue him and he will spend 2 Focus to resist influence of a test backed up with one.

During the Conversation, he will attempt to steal as many secrets from the PCs and use them to unnerve the party and cause the Focus loses.

If Disciple of Secrets's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation. The scene can also end by the party giving up their Sealed Message - at this point, proceed to 3.4.4. "Aftermath".

Boss Conversation

During this scene Mentir gains Boss (Conversation) feature, allowing him to be a formidable challenge for the party in this final scene of the story:

Boss (Conversation). This character makes a contribution twice in a Conversation round: once after more than a half of enemies made their contribution, and the second time after all of them contributed.

After an enemy finishes a turn, the character can spend 1 Focus to immediately use an extra ► or ▷. Additionally, they can spend 1 Focus on their turn to remove a condition from themselves.

On top of that, once per scene, he can use his Fire-moss ability to replenish his Focus reserves:

►► Firemoss. This character grinds firemoss and inhales the smoke, regaining 6 Focus.

Boss Fight

If the PCs attack Mentir, either to avenge Varith or after they lose temper and back down from the Conversation, the scene changes into a Boss Fight.

If Varith is alive at this point, he will be slain at the first sign of PCs' hostility.

To even the odds, double the total Health of Disciple of Secrets and give him the Boss feature:

Boss. This creature can take both a fast turn and a slow turn each round. After an enemy finishes a turn, this creature can spend 1 Focus to immediately use an extra ► or ▷. Additionally, they can spend 1 Focus on their turn to remove a condition from themselves.

When Mentir drops to 10% of Health, he will surrender, promising to share the informant's secrets in exchange for his life. If the PCs agree, proceed to 3.4.4. "Aftermath".

3.4.4 Aftermath

When the PCs reach this scene, read the following:

"All right, here is the secret of this vermin", Mentir says. "There is no need to do anything illegal, we are civilized people, are we not?"

Mentir is ready to share Varith's secret with the party. Proceed to 7.3. "Secret Secured".

Tashi's Light Orphanage

4.0 Running This Chapter

While Arshqqam, also known as the Stump, is away, some Surgeons from Kharbranth took over the place. Use this chapter when the PCs decide to investigate that.

4.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters do not advance to the higher levels during this chapter.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Compassion towards the orphans.
- Learning truth from the kids.
- Volunteering to run the orphanage.

4.0.2 Notable NPCs

Sarenth (he/him) is a Kharbranth Surgeon. He and a few other surgeons run the orphanage now, slowly turning it into a hospital to help all people in need, not only the children.

Roleplaying Sarenth

Characteristics: Friendly, eager to help.

Goal: To heal anyone in need.

Appearance: Kharbranthian with tousled hair, wearing a surgeon's apron.

Sarenth has recently arrived to Yeddaw to help people wounded by the unexpected storm. He was assigned a building recently known as the Tashi's Light Orphanage

4.1 Investigating the Orphanage

When the PCs reach the orphanage, read the following:

Following the directions, you approach a building carved into a rocky wall. The writing above the entrance says "Tashi's Light Orphanage", but you see orange flags hanging from the windows - surgeons from Kharbranth are here, offering their help for the wounded.

It seems the orphanage is now in the hands of Kharbranth doctors. When one of them notices the PCs, he will invite them in. Proceed to 4.1.1. "Medical Help".

4.1.1 Medical Help

If the PCs approach doctors, read the following:

As you enter, you see rows of beds in every room, surgeons in orange robes and white aprons tending their patients. A scribe wearing orange dress approaches you.

"Hello, welcome to our medical facility", she says with a lovely voice. "How can we help you? Are you suffering from wounds? Is your case critical? Doctor Sarenth will be able to attend to you in just a moment."

The PCs may use the service provided by the surgeons: recover Health and heal injuries. The service is free for anyone who needs it, as surgeons from Kharbranth never charge for the help they provide.

Once his job is completed and all PCs are healed, Sarenth is ready to proceed to 4.1.2. "Hospital's Secrets".

Make sure to run this scene before entering the Conversation with Sarenth, as some of his skills depend on previous healing provided to the PCs.

4.1.2 Hospital's Secrets

When the party inquires about the events leading to Kharbranth taking over the orphanage, read the following:

"I'm sorry", Sarenth says. "We are here to provide medical help, but I probably shouldn't disclose the information you are asking for... It's all rumors, you see..."

The situation of the orphanage seems to be a secret Sarenth does not wish to disclose. However, the PC may try to convince him to share it. You can run this scene as a Conversation.

Sarenth is a Kharbranth Surgeon. He has a Cognitive defense of 18, a Spiritual defense of 15, and 5 Focus. He is assisted by a Diagram Scribe - she will not participate in the Conversation, but she will provide additional charges of Forbidden Knowledge [4].

Kharbranth has sent Sarenth here to heal as many people as he can and note whatever he learns from his patients. The building of orphanage is a good place for this service and he intends to fully transform it into a hospital, leaving only sick kids in here.

If Sarenth's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

Resolving the Conversation

If the PCs succeed in convincing the surgeon, read the following:

"OK, perhaps you are right, I won't hurt anyone by telling this", Sarenth says. "The woman who was working here previously, Arshqqam, she traveled away. Nobody knows where, but I saw her messages. A Veristitalian from Azimir invited her. Why? The kids say about strange things happening around there, but this cannot be true, can it?"

"Well, it's good for us, I guess. And for the city. With her gone, we can finally open a proper medical facility. We always struggled to find a proper place, but this city is in desperate need for some surgeons from Kharbranth. Especially after the recent events... We have so much work in here..."

The PCs learn that the woman who formerly ran this place, Arshqqam, decided to move to Azimir, where she was invited by Veristitalians. It is also possible she was one of the people with strange powers and did not want to break the local law by using them to heal the kids.

With Arshqqam gone, Sarenth applied for a permit to use the space, which he hopes to fully transform into a hospital.

The PCs can give use this secrets once they proceed to 7.1.3. "Trading Secrets".

Aftermath

If the PCs failed the Conversation, they might consider interviewing the children to see if they would be willing to share something. If they do, proceed to 4.2. "Learning From Oprhans".

Once the conversation is over, regardless of the result, proceed to 4.1.3. "Curious Orphan".

4.1.3 Curious Orphan

Before the PCs leave the orphanage, read the following:

As you are about to leave, you see a small girl approaching you.

"Hello, big lowd!", she says to you. "Awe you hewe to talk with the smawt man? He is vewy smawt, you know? He knows so much stuff! But he is not hewe, he always sits ovej thewe!"

The girl has some spelling problems, pronouncing "R" as "W". If you have trouble reading her line with all those typos, here is the corrected version: "Hello, big lord! Are you here to talk with the smart man? He is very smart, you know? He knows so much stuff! But he is not here, he always sits over there!"

According to the orphan, there is a very wise man spending time in the yard. Or at least - very wise by the kid's standards. Perhaps he knows some secrets he will be willing to share?

The party can now proceed to "Sleepless Philosopher".

Path to Radiance

Compassion towards the forgotten orphan may be recognized by a cultivationspren.

Arclo is a crucial NPC, providing the party with important clues. Make sure the little girl has an opportunity to tell the PCs about him.

4.2 Learning From Orphans

If the PCs failed to learn the secrets from Sarenth, they might wish to interview the children of the orphanage to learn more about its history. You may run this scene as an Endeavor.

To complete the Endeavor, the party must accrue 1.5 successes before 1 failure per each player. This story assumes the party consists of 4 people.

Example Contributions

To complete the Endeavor, the PCs may do the tests listed below or propose their own suggestions. The DC of the tests should fall in the range of 13-16 (12 + 1d4) on tier 2, or (8 + 1d4 + 2 × tier) on other tiers.

Crafting a toy.

A PC may use DC 13 Crafting check to make a fun toy for a kid to break the ice.

Organizing playtime.

A PC may gather all children for games with a DC 16 Leadership check.

Playing tricks.

A dexterous PC may attempt DC 15 Thievery check to show some magic tricks.

Tell a story.

A successful DC 14 Lore check will allow a PC to recall some fairy tale to share with the kids.

Bribe with sweets.

No skill test is required to earn a success if a PC prepared some sweets for the kids.

Since this Endeavor focuses around talking with kids, you may consider rewarding good roleplay with advantages or even free successes.

Resolving the Endeavor

The Endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 6 successes before 4 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective. For each success, the PCs learn one of the facts below:

- Arshqqam, the Stump, was running the orphanage before.
- Arshqqam was very stern and she always knew when people lied.
- Arshqqam healed many injured kids much faster than surgeons can.

- Arshqqam talked to herself very often. Some claim she talked to a shimmer of light on the wall.
- Arshqqam left after the red storm, claiming that the girl might know more.
- She probably went to Azir, following that reshi girl who was a friend of the emperor.

Once the PCs gather 6 facts from the orphans, they should be able to piece them together, allowing them to proceed to 7.1.3. "Trading Secrets".

However, once the party gathers 4 failures, the kids lose interest with the conversation and refuse further answers. Perhaps the PCs can retry the next day...?

Path to Radiance

Learning the truth from the children, unobstructed with conjectures and gossip of the surgeons, might be recognized by a mistspren.

4.3 Restoring Orphanage

Once the PCs learn that without Arshqqam the orphanage is going to be replaced by a Kharbranth Hospital, they may wish to prevent that and restore the mission of the Orphanage.

You may run this attempt either as an Endeavor against a Yeddaw bureaucracy or a Conversation against a Head Scribe, depending on the party's approach. Either way, there is one requirement that the PCs must fulfill - they must find a person willing to run the orphanage.

There are no suitable candidates waiting in line for a job, so if the PCs wish to continue with the plan, one of them must volunteer to do it. When they do, allow them to complete the story, but after it is resolved they will need to stay back in Yeddaw.

Path to Radiance

Stepping up into a role that is required to revive the closed orphanage may be recognized by a peakspren.

Sleepless Philosopher

5.0 Running This Chapter

Sitting nearby the orphanage, Arclo the philosopher might be helpful for the PCs. This chapter describes how to run scenes with him.

5.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters do not advance to the higher levels during this chapter.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Impressing the philosopher in a debate.
- Protecting helpless cremling.

5.0.2 Notable NPCs

Arclo is an ancient sleepless, with his horde mainly staying in Yeddaw. He is a friend of Radiants and he might provide the party with useful information.

Roleplaying Arclo

Characteristics: Philosophical, secretive

Goal: Trade some information for a stimulating philosophical debate.

Appearance: Arclo wears a shiqua, a long sheet wrapped around the body, quite popular in Tashikk. Hidden in its wraps, it's hard to see his face.

Arclo is a sleepless - an ancient creature composed of small, cremling-like hordelings. Using them, he can observe many things at once. Remembering the previous Desolations, Arclo wishes to help Radiants in their war against Odium.

5.1 Philosopher

When the PCs approach the man sitting in the yard of the orphanage, read the following:

When you approach an amphitheater nearby the orphanage, you see a lone man wrapped in shiqua sitting on one of the benches.

"Hello, stranger", he says. "Please, approach. My name is Arclo and I am a philosopher. Perhaps you can help me? Please, answer me this - what part of a body are you?"

The philosopher invites the PCs into a philosophical discussion. You may run this scene as a Conversation.

Arclo is a Sleepless Agent. He has a Cognitive defense of 18, a Spiritual defense of 19, and 6 Focus. He enjoys philosophical conversations and will always appreciate a thought-provoking answer.

If Arclo's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

5.1.1 Aftermath

If the PCs succeeded to satisfy the philosopher's curiosity, later in the scene they will be invited to take care of a cremling - see 5.2. "Unexpected Help".

However, before that happens, allow the scene to continue with 5.1.2. "Repay with Answers".

Path to Radiance

Winning a philosophical debate might be recognized by an inkspren.

5.1.2 Repay with Answers

Proceed with reading the following:

"You answered my questions, stranger", the philosopher says. "It is the only fair I now answered yours. Tell me, how can I help you?"

Arclo offers to answers the questions that the PCs might have. If they wish, they may stay and talk with him.

Who are you?

As I told you, I am just a thinker. I like to sit here, observe the world and work on a philosophy.

Do you know many people in this city?

I spoke with many. I observed many. But I cannot say I know them very well... Not many people wish to stop and talk. There was this girl, but she is gone now. And Axies, but he probably lost our bet and is now imprisoned or exiled...

Can we help your friend?

If you see him, most probably in some prison, tell him I said "I told you so!"

What did your friend do?

He was sure he can steal Yeddaw secrets. They are all gathered in Grand Indicium, but the people of Tashikk guard their secrets well.

Can you help us? We are looking for a Singer.

Many of those were exiled from the city, right before the new storm. I understand the storm made them hostile. They are not welcome back here.

What happened in that orphanage?

If the PCs succeeded in the Conversation against Arclo: A woman was running it. Her truthfulness attracted an ancient power. She now left this place to serve the emperor and the world.

During this conversation, make sure Arclo mentions those two clues: 1) Axies being imprisoned for attempted stealing of secrets and 2) Yeddaw secrets being guarded in Grand Indicium. The PCs may need those two leads to proceed with the story.

5.2 Unexpected Help

If the party succeeded on the Conversation in 5.1. "Philosopher", read the following before they leave Arclo:

"I must say, it has been long since I could indulge myself with such stimulating conversation", Arclo says. "But I have one more request, if you will hear me..."

The philosopher reaches to you, and you see a small, purple cremling running on his arm toward you.

"This one yearns to see the world", Arclo continues. "Please, take care of him, and I will be in your debt."

The PCs may accept a cremling as a token of friendship with Arclo. If they do, he will be willing to come to their help if they would need it - see 5.2.1. "Help from the Sleepless".

Path to Radiance

Protecting small cremling might be recognized, albeit with a dose of confusion, by a honorspren.

The cremling is one of the sleepless' hordeling. Through it, he can see, hear and locate the PCs. However, do not reveal the fact to the players, as most probably their characters would not be aware of that.

5.2.1 Help from the Sleepless

If the party accepted the cremling from Arclo, they can ask him for help later. When they do, start the following event:

EVENT

Triggers when the final Complication slot is filled.

Unexpected Help

Progressing the Event

Once per scene, a PC may spend  to progress the event. That indicates Arclo's hordelings finding new bits of information that may be relevant to the PCs' needs.

Abandoning the Event

If at any moment the PCs decide to abandon the cremling or to take hostile actions against it, stop the event and do not allow to restart it later. Arclo no longer considers the PCs his friends.

Triggering the Event

Once the final  is spent, Arclo can find the party and tell him the information they need.

Grand Indicium

6.0 Running This Chapter

Grand Indicium is located in the very center of Yeddaw. The city uses it to store all gathered information. The party may enter while searching for the informant or clues about his location.

6.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters do not advance to the higher levels during this chapter.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Following legal procedures to obtain information.
- Remaining in control during a stressful mission.
- Stealing additional secrets.

6.0.2 Notable NPCs

Ghenna (she/her) is the Head Scribe of Information in Grand Indicium. Any important requests will need to be accepted by her.

Roleplaying Ghenna

Characteristics: Serious, organized.

Goal: To conduct in a professional manner.

Appearance: Overweight, wears a glasses and a shiqua covering her entire body.

Ghenna takes pride in her well-organized work she's doing in Grand Indicium, the heart of the city. In her opinion, bureaucratic procedures are the only civilized way of conducting one's work, and nobody understand the forms as well as she does.

6.1 Indicium Services

As the PCs enter Grand Indicium, read the following:

As you enter the building, you see a long desk on the other side of the buildings. Behind it, scribes and clerks are sitting, talking with patrons much like yourselves.

One of them is waving to you. "Welcome to Grand Indicium", she says. "How can we be of service?"

Grand Indicium is the pride of Yeddaw people, open for everyone to access information they need. On top of that, it offers the following services:

6.1.1 Tashikk Spanreed

Anyone can buy a Tashikk Spanreed connected to a spanreed hub for 300 mk. Using it, the owner can communicate with everyone having similar fabrial - the operator working with the owner's spanreed will copy the message and send it to the recipient.

This way, only one fabrial is required to speak with almost anyone in the world, but one must remember the messages sent this way are being made known to third parties, making it unsuitable for critical secrets.

6.1.2 Sending a Message

For a price of 10 mk, anyone can send a message to a person owning a Tashikk Spanreed. After their response, each subsequent message sent to them is priced at 5 mk. Each new conversation with another person costs 10 mk.

While long-term benefits of owning Tashikk Spanreed are much more versatile, this is a cheap option for someone who needs to send a quick message.

6.1.3 Basic Research

For a price of 100 mk, the customer is promised to be delivered extensive information about any documented topic. The customer is not required to know which library stores those information - this is handled by the operators.

After the service is completed, the customer is given the knowledge notes sent back by the libraries, granting them an Expertise on that topic, as long as they have the notes and are able to read them.

Obscure topics and sensitive information are not covered by the service.

6.2 Formal Request

The PCs may attempt to make a formal request to access sensitive information about the whereabouts of the singer informant. To do this, they will need to enter the Conversation with Ghenna and her assistant.

Ghenna (she/her) is the Head Scribe of Information, while her assistant is a Deputy Scribe of Information. Both of them will contribute to the Conversation, but only Ghenna must be persuaded.

Ghenna has a Cognitive defense of 18, a Spiritual defense of 17, and 6 Focus. She believes in the authority of the law and legal procedures and she will need to spend 2 Focus to resist an influence of a person having an authority she must respect.

All tests made by the PCs gain disadvantage if they cannot present proper immigration documents they could obtain during 1.3. "Immigration Form".

If 2.1. "Wanted!" is active, raise stakes with every roll the PCs are making. You may spend multiple  during the Conversation to progress the event.

If Ghenna's test equals or exceeds the Spiritual defense of a PC, that PC either must spend 1 Focus to resist influence or must back down from the conversation.

During the Conversation, both Ghenna and her assistant can use Form Ash-38 action. For a better flow of the scene, do not allow both of them to be active at the same time and target another character with the 2nd use of the ability.

Aftermath

If the PCs succeed in the Conversation, they will learn about Singer sightings in the eastern parts of the Immigrant Quarter. With this information they may start searching for him - see 7.2. "Searching the Singer".

If the PCs fail, they will need to find another way to get the information.

Path to Radiance

Following legal procedures to obtain the information may be recognized by a highspren.

6.3 Information Heist

The party may decide to break into Grand Indicium and steal the information they need. In that case, run the scene as a Mission Endeavor.

During the Mission Endeavor, the PCs may pursue multiple objectives. Each additional objective adds more successes required to complete the Endeavor, but the number of acceptable failures does not change.

The PCs may decide which objective are they pursuing with each of their tests. Once they reach the number of successes required to complete the objective, they earn the respective reward and may continue with other objectives.

6.3.1 Mission Goals

During the Mission, the PCs may work towards the goals listed below. They may also define their own objectives - in that case, use your own judgment how many successes should they require.

- Finding the location of Singer informant
 - 1 success per PC
- Leaving Grand Indicium without being captured
 - 0.5 of success per PC
- Learning the story of the orphanage
 - 0.5 of success per PC
- Fining clues about the Cult's hideout
 - 0.5 of success per PC
- Stealing top-secret state information
 - 1 success per PC

This book counts successes per PC to better balance for parties with different size than 4. This way, each PC's contribution is important when the party is bigger and the players are not stuck in endless dice rolling in smaller parties. If you don't like that approach, multiply the values above times 4, as this is the standard party size the book assumes.

If the party has an odd number of PCs, the partial goals will not be a whole numbers. In that case round them up after summing all of them. Example: if a party of 3 PCs aims to learn about the singer, orphanage and leave safely, they will need to gather 6 successes in total ($3 + 1.5 + 1.5 = 6$).

6.3.2 Available Time

The party has limited time to complete the Mission. In total, they may do 3 tests per PC. Raise stakes with each test. On  you may reduce that pool by 1 available test, reducing the total time of the Mission.

Path to Radiance

Remaining in control while in stressful situation may be recognized by an ashspren.

6.3.3 Example Tests

During the Mission, the PCs may attempt one of the below suggestion or propose their own ideas. The DC of the tests should fall in the range of 13-16 (12 + 1d4) on tier 2, or (8 + 1d4 + 2 × tier) on other tiers.

Quiet sneaking.

A PC may attempt a DC 15 Stealth check to sneak past Patrol Guard.

Lie to a scribe.

When spotted by a Deputy Scribe, a PC may attempt DC 16 Deception check to convince them they are working here.

Lockpicking.

A PC may attempt a DC 14 Thievery check to access a room behind locked door.

Archive system.

A PC may attempt DC 16 Deduction check to determine the system in which the scribes are archiving the data.

Fast reading..

To quickly scan large amounts of text, a PC may attempt a DC 14 Perception check.

Useful contraption.

A PC may try to craft something helpful (a mirror to peek around the corners, perhaps?) with a DC 13 Crafting check.

6.3.4 Opportunities and Complications

During the Mission, the following examples might be used when  or  is rolled:

Time's up!

A GM may spend  to reduce the number of available skill test attempts by 1. Someone just spotted something suspicious, hears the party, or takes a wrong turn.

Determined to succeed.

A player may spend  from a failed test to repeat the test.

How could you...?

The GM may spend  to reveal a secret of one of the PCs to another PC as they found a report related to it.

Curious tidbit.

Spend  to reveal a curious secret that the PCs did not know they could search for.

Sidetracked

Spend  or  to decrease or increase a number of required successes of uncompleted secondary goals (other than Finding Singer or Leaving Undetected).

Path to Radiance

 or  can be spent to increase or reduce the progress of one of personal goal of a PC as they find some useful/demeaning information.

6.3.5 Secrets to Find

During the Mission, the party may find multiple secrets in Grand Indicum, either by completing their objectives, or by stumbling on one by accident. You can use the secrets from the list below to share with the PCs.

Singer in Yeddaw

If the PCs complete the main objective, they will find the following report:

You find a guard report dated for yesterday: "Numerous civilians report a parsh person in the Immigrant Quarter. White skin, red patterns, dark-blue shiqua. Reports must be false, we failed to find anyone matching the description, and a parshmen could not outsmart guards on duty."

It seems that Varith, the Singer informant, can be found in the Immigrant Quarter. The party should look for him there - the PCs can now proceed to 7.2. "Searching the Singer".

Tashi's Light Orphanage

If the PC find the reports of the orphanage, read the following:

You find a piece of document: "With orphanage keeper Arshqqam departed to Azimir, the institution building is being granted to Kharbranth surgeons. At the same time, all ongoing investigations about her alleged misuse of supernatural powers are now terminated.

Arshqqam manifested magical powers and accepted an invitation to the emperor palace in Azimir. Without her, surgeons from Kharbranth took over the orphanage, possibly with hopes to convert it to a hospital.

State Secrets

If the PCs uncover this secret, read the following:

You find the following note: "It is confirmed that Tashikk Prince pushed for the prohibition of supernatural powers while under pressure from the Herald Nale himself. The Herald works to prevent the return of the Desolations. Can Vorin teaching be false...?"

The party learns that the prince of Tashikk worked with Nale, the Herald of Justice, to execute all power wielders and prevent the return of the Desolations. The recent red storm proves the Herald failed.

This secret does not help the PCs to reach their goal, but perhaps someone will be willing to trade for it.

Curious Little Secrets

During the search, the party may learn some small, curious, but potentially irrelevant secrets:

- The emperor is a good friend with a power wielder kid, one can expect power-friendly policies from Azir.
- A ship carrying a shardbearer was sunk during the red storm while on the voyage to Icewater.
- New fashion trends from Liafor, designed for the upcoming year.
- The most recent map of Reshi Isles and their predicted movement.
- Confirmed: the Assassin in White was slain by the alethi during the recent battle.
- New fabrial design from Jah Keved.
- Rira plans to sow more discord on Iri territory. (details plans included)

Path to Radiance

Risking the mission to steal additional secrets might be recognized by a Cryptic.

If you are planning more adventures after this one, you can use this opportunity to foreshadow or plot hook the future events.

6.3.6 Mission End

Once the party runs out of time, start 2.1. "Wanted!" event unless it is already in place. Then advance the event by one ✨. During the scene you may spend multiple ✨ to progress the event.

The mission ends when the PCs are captured or after they complete "Leave Grand Indicium" goal. At this point, they cannot proceed with more tests to achieve more goals.

Finding the Informant

7.0 Running This Chapter

In this chapter you can find the scenes in which the party are searching for the informant, Varith.

7.0.1 Character Advancement

The characters do not advance to the higher levels during this chapter.

The following events may affect their path to radiance:

- Trading secrets with Abedaxxam.
- Learning stormwarden's trade.
- Securing information needed by the PCs' patron.

7.0.2 Notable NPCs

Abedaxxam (he/him) is a stormwarden at the stormshelter where the party was told to search for Varith the informant. He will help the PCs to find him.

Roleplaying Abedaxxam

Characteristics: Calm, stoic, reserved

Goal: Have some fun while trading secrets

Appearance: Older, with graying hair. Has a scar on the side of the head made by one of the stones during a Highstorm.

Abedaxxam maintains one of the stormshelters in Yeddaw. Since this isn't the most exciting job, he likes to trade secrets as a hobby.

7.1 Stormshelter

As the party enters the Stormshelter, read the following:

You enter southern stormshelter, following the instructions from the letter sent by Varith the informant. The place is empty - only one man is swiping the floor in the middle.

"Hello!", the man says. "I am Abedaxxam and this is my stormshelter. However, there is no storm expected for today... What brings you here?"

Stormwarden Abedaxxam (he/him) is responsible for maintaining this place. At this moment, the building would be empty if not for him. There is no sight of the informant.

7.1.1 Talking with the Stormwarden

The PCs may ask Abedaxxam for more information. He will politely share the most basic facts that the PCs could learn from anyone else, but he won't give the biggest secrets for free.

Who are you?

I am Abedaxxam, the stormwarden. I run this place. Who are you?

We are looking for someone...

Well, as you can see, nobody is here.

Do you know Varith?

Yeah, I know them.

Do you know where he is?

Perhaps...

Will you help us find him?

I could, but you are in Yeddaw, lad. Information here has price.

Fine, what do you want?

Well, as I said, you are in Yeddaw. We value information in here.

7.1.2 Coveted Secret

Abedaxxam is willing to help the party, but he requires one thing in return: the PCs must learn what happened to the Tashi's Light Orphanage.

Recently the orphanage stopped accepting new children and Abedaxxam wishes to know why. He believes this is a good secret to trade with someone during the next Storm, but so far he failed to learn anything.

To learn more, the party may proceed to "Tashi's Light Orphanage".

7.1.3 Trading Secrets

Once the party learned the secrets of the orphanage, they can return and trade them for more information about Varith. When they do, read the following:

"So, Varith? I know the guy", the stormwarden says. "He was here a lot, always wearing shiqua, very religious I say. Sometimes I could glimpse under the wraps. He was not from around, white skin he had. And strange, red tattoos, like waves, or, I don't know, marble perhaps... He couldn't be parshmen, I think, too intelligent for that, could talk quite well, but he looked somehow similar... "Anyway, as you can see, he is not here anymore. Left he did, around that red, wrong storm. Many people scared that storm, but there is no safer place than here, he should have stayed here, I say!"

Abedaxxam does not know the exact location of Varith. However, from what he said it seems that Varith is a Singer with white-and-red skin. That sounds specific enough to help with finding him...

Abedaxxam is aware that this isn't exactly what the party was hoping for. To sweeten the deal, he offers them to buy Stormwarden Spanreed for half the price - only 150 mk! For more details, see 7.1.4. "Stormwarden Spanreed".

Path to Radiance

Trading secrets with Abedaxxam may be recognized by a Cryptic.

Aftermath

After the PCs leave the stormshelter with the new information about the informant, proceed to 3.2. "Blind Cultist".

7.1.4 Stormwarden Spanreed

If the party completed 7.1.3. "Trading Secrets" quest, they can buy Stormwarden Spanreed for 150 mk.

Abedaxxam promises to send regular Highstorm forecast using the spanreed. It is a standard service with many satisfied customers all across Roshar. Best quality, real bargain!

By default he sends information about the upcoming Highstorm with one day advance, but the party can adjust that to their own needs. They can also use the spanreed to ask about exact hour the Storm is expected to arrive anywhere in the world.

He hopes to expand the service to include forecasts about the new red storm, but so far he has not enough data points to provide accurate estimates.

7.1.5 Stormwarden's Protégé

Abedaxxam doesn't bring this topic up, but if a character wishes to learn the trade, the stormwarden might agree to teach them the craft. To convince him, the party will need to share one additional secret with him on top of the one from 7.1.3. "Trading Secrets".

When they do, allow one PC to start "Stormwarden's Protégé" goal. To complete it, they will need to either stay in Yeddaw or buy a spanreed from Abedaxxam (see 7.1.4. "Stormwarden Spanreed").

To earn the milestones for the goal, once per approaching Highstorm the PC may attempt a DC 20 Lore check. On a success, the PC completes one milestone for the goal.

For the first milestone the test gains disadvantage as the PC is just staring learning. The last one gains advantage, as the PC should already be familiar with the calculations. The GM might also suggest other solutions.

Once the final milestone of "Stormwarden's Protégé" goal is completed, the PC gains Stormwarden Expertise:

Stormwarden Expertise. You know stormwardens' script. You always know when the next Highstorm will arrive. If you can observe the weather, you always know which direction is north.

Path to Radiance

Learning new ability may be recognized by an inkspren.

7.2 Searching the Singer

The PCs learned that Varith, the informant they are looking for, is a Singer who has recently been seen in the Immigrant Quarter. They must search for him there. When they enter the district, read the following:

You enter the Immigrant Quarter. The place is crowded much more than the rest of the city. Filthy odor fills the place, and a murmur of many voices echoes through the air. Now, in this crowd, it is your task to find one person, who doesn't want to be found...

Finding a person who doesn't want to be seen in a Quarter this crowded will be a difficult task. You may run this scene as an Endeavor.

To complete the Endeavor, the party must accrue 1.5 successes before 1 failure per each player. This story assumes the party consists of 4 people.

Returning the Favor

If the PCs helped Ganxir to enter the city (see 1.2.1. "Immigrant in Need"), he will recognize them in the Immigrant Quarter and offer them help. When he does, start the following event:

EVENT

Triggers when the final Complication slot is filled.

Returning the Favor

The PCs may spend  from their rolls to progress the event. After the last one is acquired, the event triggers and Ganxir manages to find Varith and lead the party to him. Complete the Endeavor with a success.

Example Contributions

To complete the Endeavor, the PCs may do the tests listed below or propose their own suggestions. The DC of the tests should fall in the range of 13-16 ($12 + 1d4$) on tier 2, or ($8 + 1d4 + 2 \times \text{tier}$) on other tiers.

Urban tracking.

Tracking in a city is not much different from tracking in a wilderness and can be attempted with a DC 16 Survival check.

Asking locals.

Perhaps someone saw something? A DC 15 Persuasion or Intimidation check could convince a person to share some information. That test gains an advantage if something substantial is offered for exchange for the secrets.

Organized search.

A PC may attempt a DC 14 Leadership check to rally the citizens of the Quarter for help.

Thinking like a refugee.

Where would you go, if you were a Singer? A DC 14 Insight or Deduction check could help a PC to determine that.

A better view.

Perhaps if a PC climbed a little higher with a DC 15 Agility or Athletics check they would have a better view?

Keen eye.

When the Endeavor is close to completion, allow a PC to make a DC 13 Perception check to determine if they see anything interesting.

Resolving the Endeavor

The Endeavor succeeds if the party accrues 6 successes before 4 failures, or if they otherwise complete the objective.

Success!

The party finds their target! However, he is not alone... Proceed to 3.4. "Blind Nemesis", the informant is still alive!

Failure...

The Singer is nowhere to be found... But the PCs cannot give up! They may continue the Endeavor, but when a PC makes a test to contribute to the Endeavor, that PC loses 1 Focus. After reaching the required number of successes proceed to 3.4. "Blind Nemesis", but the informant is already dead...

7.3 Secret Secured

When the PCs learn the secret found by Varith, read the following:

The ones who assassinated your niece are called "Ghostbloods". It is a large organization, recognizing their members by a tattoo on their arms: like a triangle made of three diamonds.

Beware of them, Dalinar! Beware of anyone dealing with them! They are ruthless invaders from another world. They know of powers we never heard of, and they will stop from nothing to achieve their goals. And their goals don't care about our world.

The party completed their objective! The information is secured, their mission is ended. Victory!

Path to Radiance

Gathering the information needed by the party's patron may be recognized by a peakspren.

The exact content of the obtained information is irrelevant to the story and you can easily replace it with anything else to personalize your adventure.

Appendix A: Document History

This book might be expanded and improved based on players' feedback. The table below shows what was changed. You can compare it with the version you own to quickly spot the differences.

Appendix B: Adversaries

B.1 Cult of Secrets

Cult of Secrets is a small organization worshipping Sja-anat in a darkness of their hidden shrine, hoping to be rewarded with a Corrupted Cryptic to bond.

Their hunger for secrets and hidden information drove them to Tashikk. Here, in the heart of Yeddaw, they can thrive, their hunger for secrets satiated.

Blinding Creed

The cult requires their members renounced their sight. At first, initiates wear blindfolds from dark material to cover their eyes, but once they bound with their spren and advance in the cult ranks, their eyelids are sown with thick cords or their eyes are gauged with a ritualistic dagger.

However, the lack of sight does not stop them from seeing. Instead, they quickly learn to use the surge of Illumination, which allow them to see the world around them. Perhaps the world they see is, in some way, even more true.

Tactics

If possible, Cultists of Secret will attempt to avoid fighting. They recognize they are at a disadvantage, so they will disengage and attempt to disappear into the crowd using Illumination.

However, they will never shy away from an opportunity for a conversation. They will use them to steal as much secrets from the other person. Some of those will be treasured for the future, other will be used to unnerve the opponent, threatening to reveal them.

► Lashing Shot (Costs 1 Investiture). Attack +8, range 30 ft., one target. The Skybreaker touches a Medium or smaller unattended object and launches it at the target. Graze: 11 (2d10) impact or keen damage. Hit: 19 (2d10 + 8) impact or keen damage.

► Gravitational Support (Costs 1 Investiture). The Skybreaker or an ally they infuse gain flying rate of 25 ft until the start of the Skybreaker's next turn. At the start of each of their turns, they can spend 1 Investiture to maintain this effect for an additional round.

► Threat of Legal Actions. This character makes a Lore test and adds their Intimidation ranks to it. If it is equal or greater than the target's Cognitive Defense, they lose 3 Focus. If the result is smaller, this character must back down from the Conversation.

► Regenerate (Costs 1 Investiture). This character recovers 1d6 + 2 Health.

➡ Menace. After this character is hit with an attack or influenced in a Conversation, they make an Intimidation test against the attacker's Cognitive defense. On a success, the attacker loses 1 Focus.

OPPORTUNITIES AND COMPLICATIONS

FEATURES

Shardplate (4 Charges). This character is equipped with Shardplate. Before they take damage, they can expend a charge (no action required) to increase their deflect value against that damage by 10. While the armor has charges, all Invested tests against the character gain a disadvantage, and the armor's deflect value applies to all damage types. After the armor runs out of charges, some of the character's attributes and skills are reduced by 2, along with their related modifiers; these statistics are marked with an asterisk (*).

Breakable Armor. After this character is hit by an attack, the attacker can spend  to cause the character's Shardplate to lose 1 charge.

Gather Evidence. After succeeding on a cognitive test against another character, this character becomes Focused until the end of their next turn. Additionally, this character gains a Legal Codes expertise.

Imposing Posture. After an enemy resists this character's influence while in their weapon's reach, they are Disoriented.

Truthseeker. This character gains an advantage on Deduction and Insight tests made to ascertain truth.

► Lashing Shot (Costs 1 Investiture). Attack +9, range 30 ft., one target. The Skybreaker touches a Medium or smaller unattended object and launches it at the target. Graze: 11 (2d10) impact or keen damage. Hit: 20 (2d10 + 9) impact or keen damage.

►► Inescapable Decay (Costs 1 Investiture). Attack +8, range 30 ft., one target who is touching the same solid surface as the Skybreaker. Graze: 18 (4d8) spirit damage. Hit: 26 (4d8 + 8) spirit damage, and the target must succeed on a DC 16 Agility test or their armor rusts and decays, permanently decreasing its deflect value by 1. Armor damaged in this way can be repaired with proper materials as a downtime activity.

► Gravitational Support (Costs 1 Investiture). The Skybreaker or an ally they infuse gain flying rate of 25 ft until the start of the Skybreaker's next turn. At the start of each of their turns, they can spend 1 Investiture to maintain this effect for an additional round.

B.5 Kharbranth Hospitals

Taravangian of Kharbranth, created the "Diagram", a secret society to gather information about future by gathering Death Rattles, a prophetic and enigmatic rumblings of a dying person.

For increased efficiency of the sample harvest, Taravangian is now sending his surgeons into each major city on Roshar. They are to give a free medical help for everyone who asks for it and record the visions of those, who are too late to be helped.

Tactics

Diagram forces rely on their knowledge about future events. Both in combat and conversations, they will reach for that knowledge to use their Forbidden Knowledge [N] abilities, allowing them to re-roll unwanted roll results.

Forbidden Knowledge [N]

Due to the access to predictions written down in "The Diagram" reinforced by Death Rattles gathered in Kharbranth hospitals, the Diagram has a limited knowledge about the future events. This is represented by Forbidden Knowledge [N] feature:

Forbidden Knowledge [N]. Roll Nd20 and note the results. As a , the character can spend one of those results to replace any d20 roll with it. Roll new set of d20s each time the character gains access to the source of the knowledge.

At the beginning of a Combat or a Conversation scene with the Diagram, roll specified number of d20s for each of the adversaries in the scene and note the results. Those characters can use them to replace unwanted rolls during the scene.

To simplify the management, note only the results of the rolls, but you can refrain from tracking which value is owned by which NPC. Instead allow them to share the pool, just make sure no NPC can use their ability more times than specified in their stat block.

Spiritual Skills: Insight +8, Perception +8
Languages: Sleepless language, two other languages

FEATURES

Divisible. After the Sleepless takes impact or keen damage, they can immediately use their Divide to send out one hordeling (no action required).

Observant. This character cannot be affected by Stealth and Deception tests if he observes the enemy attempting them with one of the hordelings.

ACTIONS

- Ravage. Attack +6, reach 5 ft., one target. Graze: 9 (2d8) keen damage. Hit: 20 (2d8 + 11) keen damage, and the target becomes Afflicted [1d8 keen] for 1 round.
- Unsettle (Costs 1 Focus). The Sleepless eerily distorts their form toward an enemy they can sense within 30 feet of them. The target must succeed on a DC 15 Discipline test or lose 1d4 Focus.
- Ancient Question. This character makes a contested Lore test against another character. If this character wins, the enemy loses 3 Focus.
- Divide. The Sleepless can divide the swarm that comprises them, decreasing their health by 5 per hordeling sent out. Each hordeling is a Small character with 5 health who otherwise uses the statistics of a Sleepless. These hordelings immediately gain a reaction, but they can't use actions until the next round. Anything a hordeling learns is known by the rest of their horde.
- Swarm Weapon. After the Sleepless is hit by a melee attack, the hordelings that comprise them can momentarily swarm the attacker's weapon, giving the attacker a disadvantage on their next test against the Sleepless.

Appendix C: Items

C.1 Sealed Message

Due to sensitive nature of the contents, this message was not permitted to be sent via spanreed. Instead, it was sealed and given under protection of the most trusted messengers.

C.2 Stormwarden Spanreed

Type: Fabrial (Spanreed)

Charges: 3

This spanreed is paired with another one owned by Abedaxxam the stormwarden. He will send regular updates about upcoming storms. The update format can be customized by the owner to suit their needs best.

A pair of spanreeds expend 1 charge for every 5 days they are active. Due to the fact the communication will always arrive before the storm, you can assume the spanreed is recharged after use and is always full of charges.

C.3 Tashikk Spanreed

Type: Fabrial (Spanreed)

Charges: 3

This spanreed is connected to the spanreed hub in Tashikk. Using it, the owner can contact the hub and ask the operator there to connect with any other owner having a similar fabrial, allowing for a communication with multiple people using just one spanreed.

A pair of spanreeds expend 1 charge for every 5 days they are active.

Appendix E: Example Character Sheets

If you don't want to spend time on your own character's creation, here you can find some example character sheets prepared for this adventure. You can grab the one you like and just start playing. If you feel like it, you can modify your character's appearance, motivation or other details, but overall the sheets are ready to play.

In here you can find:

- TODO
(TODO TODO, TODO - TODO)

If none of those align to your vision of the character you want to play, make your own one! It's super easy and fun! Grab one empty character sheet, follow instructions from Stormlight Handbook or from other sources you prefer and you will have your own hero in no time!

You can find empty character sheet template in here:

Appendix F: Acknowledgments

I poured my heart into this project, but I couldn't make it by myself alone. Here is quick thank you for all of those, who helped me do it, as well as a few other acknowledgments.

F.1 Artists involved

I cannot express my gratitude enough to all talented artists whose masterpieces show us the world of Roshar and its wonders. In particular I want to thank those, who created art for this book:

- TODO - who?
TODO - what?

If you are an artist and this book inspired you to create some epic illustration, please reach out! It would be great if I could include your art in here!

F.2 Other Support

I also wanted to thank all other people who helped me create this book:

- TODO - who?
TODO - what?
